It was taken by Edward I.; retaken by Bruce, 1313; burnt by the lord of the isle, 1411; taken by Cromwell, 1649; and by Prince Charles Edward in 1746. He was totally defeated at Culloden, about five miles from Inverness, 16 April, 1746. Population, 1801, 21,973; 1881 (est.), 25,903.

INVESTITURE OF ECCLESIASTICS, was a cause of discord between the pope and temporal sovereigns in the middle ages; and led to actual war between Gregory VII. and the emperor Henry IV. 1075-1085. The popes endeavoured to deprive the sovereigns of the right of nominating bishops and abbots, and of investing them with the cross and ring. Henry V. gave up the right, by treaty, Feb. 1111; but other sovereigns resolutely refused to concede it.

INVINCIBLE ARMADA or SPANISH ARMADA, see Armada.

INVINCIBLES, IRISH, see Irish Invincibles, Fenians and Ireland, 1882-3.

INVOCATION OF THE VIRGIN AND SAINTS to intercede with God. This practice of the Romish church has been traced to the time of Gregory the Great, 593. The Eastern church began (in the 5th century) by calling upon the dead, and demanding their suffrages as present in the divine offices.

IODINE (from the Greek ίδης, violet-like), was discovered by M. De Courtois, a manufacturer of sulphuric at Paris in 1811, and investigated by M. Clement, 1813. On the application of heat it rises in the form of a dense violet-coloured vapour, easily evaporates, and melts at 220 degrees; it changes vegetable blues to yellow, and a seven-thousandth part conveys water to a deep yellow colour, and stanch into a purple. Very valuable medically.

IONA. IOLMAKILL, or III, one of the Hebrides. About 565 St. Columba founded a monastery here, which flourished till the 8th and 9th centuries, when it was frequently ravaged by the Norsemen. Other religious bodies afterwards were formed here, and the site was long esteemed sacred.

IONIA (Asia Minor). About 1030 B.C. the Ioni, a Pelasgian race, emigrated from Greece, and settled here and on the adjoining islands. They built Ephesus, Smyrna, and other noble cities. They were conquered by the great Cyrus about 548 B.C., recaptured 504, but were again subdued. After the victories of Cimon, Ionia became independent and remained so till 538, when it was once more subjected to Persia. It formed part of the dominions of Alexander and his successors; was annexed to the Roman empire, 133, and conquered by the Turks—Ionia was renowned for poets, historians, and philosophers. The "Antiquities of Ionia" were published by Chandler, Revett, and Pars, 1760-1830, and the Dilettanti Society, 1830-1881.

IONIAN ISLANDS (on W. coast of Greece), Corfu, the capital, Cephalonia, Zante, Ithaca, Santa Maria, Cefiis, and Paxi. They were colonized by the Ionians, and partook of the fortunes of the Greek people; were subject to Naples in the 13th century, and in the 14th to Venice.

IRON. The Greeks ascribed the discovery of iron to themselves, and referred glass to the Phenicians. Moses relates that iron was wrought by Tubal-Cain (Gen. iv. 22). Swedish iron is very celebrated, and Damascus is the greatest mine of Sweden. The weekly publication "Iron," which began 18 Jan., 1873, was a continuation of the "Mechanics’ Magazine" (started 1823), and was combined with "Industries," 1894. See Steel.

Belgium, an early seat of the iron manufacture; coal said to have been employed at Marches-de-dames, 1480. British ironmasters, Ralph Page and Peter Brinde, in Sussex, 1543. Ringer’s Forder.

Iron-mills used for slitting iron into bars for smiths, by Goffrey Bosch, 1590.

Tinplate of iron introduced from Bohemia, 1681. Till about 1772 iron ores were smelted entirely with wood charcoal, which did not wholly give way to coal and coke till 1872.

The Carron iron works in Stirlingshire, where there is much ironstone and coal, were established mainly by the exertions of Dr. John Roebuck, 1759-60; this was the beginning of the greatest Scotch iron works. The operation termed puddling, and other very great improvements in the manufacture, invented by Mr. Henry Cort, about 1781, who did not reap the due reward of his ingenuity. He died in 1800. Mr. James B. Nelson, of Glasgow, patented his hot air blast in 1828; see under Blowing machines.

Strike of the puddlers and lock-out of the masters in Staffordshire, Northumberland, &c., lasted during March, April, and May, 1854.

Ironworkers of Great Britain determine to form one trades’ union, with one executive, Oct. 1866.

Steelmaking in the northern counties, Dec. 1866.

Mr. Wm. Robinson announced a method of making wrought iron from cast iron by means of magnetism, July, 1876.

Mr. John Heath’s process for making steel announced about Nov., 1867, discussed Oct., 1868.

Iron forts (cost about 1,000,000l. made by Whitworth & Co. at Manchester) put up at Spithfields early in 1872. Mr. Cramp’s floating furnaces invented, Mar., 1872. Various ironworks and iron furnaces, yielding the greatest of coal dust and air are introduced under pressure, was tried at Wollwich and was reported successful, May, 1873.

Ironstone miners in Yorkshire: great strike through reduction in wages, May, 1874.

IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE, the duke of Devonshire, president, held its first meeting in London 22 June, 1867, first provincial meeting at Merthyr-Tydfil, 6 Aug., 1870; first foreign meeting in Algeria, 18 Aug., 1873. Frequent at other places. (Mr. Andrew Carnegie presents £3,000. to the Institute, May, 1901.)

IRONCLADS. See Circular, Navy, and United States, 1862; Germany, 1878.

IRON CROSS, an order of knighthood established by Frederick William III. of Prussia, 10 March, 1813, to honour patriotic bravery in the war against France; was revived by William I. in the Franco-Prussian war, and awarded by him to his son for his victory at Wissembourg, 4 Aug., 1870. About 40,000 persons were decorated in 1870-71.

IRON CROWN. (of Italy), of gold and precious stones, set in a thin rim of iron, said to have been forged from a nail of Christ's cross, was made by order of Theodolinda for her husband, Agilulf, king of the Longobards, 501. She presented it (to be kept) to the church at Monza. Charlemagne was crowned with this crown, and after him all the emperors who were kings of Lombardy; and Napoleon I. at Milan, on 20 May, 1805, put it to his head, saying: "Jeu ne t'a donne que parce que tu toucheras." (God has given it to me; woe to him who touches it.) The crown was removed from Monza to Mantua by the Austrians, on 23 April, 1859. After the peace of Vienna in 1866, the crown was given up to general Monbaron on 11 Oct., and presented to king Victor Emmanuel, at Turin, the 12th of the same month. The order of the "Iron Crown of Italy," instituted by Napoleon 20 May, 1805, was abolished in 1814, but revived by the emperor of Austria Feb. 1810. The order of the Crown of Italy was instituted by king Victor Emmanuel 20 Feb. 1868.

IRON-MASK, THE MAN WITH THE. A mysterious prisoner in France, wearing a mask and closely confined under M. de St. Mars, at Pignerol (1769), Exilles (1818), Sainte Marguerite (1867), and at the Bastille (1878), who, when tried, died Nov. 1703. He was of noble birth, and was treated with profound respect but his keepers had orders to despight him if he uncovered. M. de St. Mars himself always placed the dishes on his table, and stood in his presence.

IRREDENTISTS, see Italia Irredenta.

IRRIGATION, practised in the east and in Egypt from the most remote ages. It was strenuously advocated for India by sir A. Cotton and others at the Social Science Congress at Manchester, Oct. 1866. In 1867 acts were passed for utilising London sewage in the irrigation of grass land, and the results are said to be generally favourable. The subject was much discussed Aug. 1873. A method of producing artificial rain from ponds by means of steam-power, patented by Isaac Brown, of Edinburgh, was tried by Mr. Coleman, at Stoke Park, and reported successful; also by Mr. E. and intermittent Filtration, Manchester (1875), Egypt, Nile.

IRUN (a frontier village of Spain). On 16 May, 1857, the British auxiliary legion under general Evans, marched from St. Sebastian to attack Irun (1858), which after a desperate resistance was carried by assault, 17 May.

IRVINGITES, followers of Edward Irving.†

* The following are notices that have been made as to his descendants:—An American patentee lately carried from Constantinople a mixed blood, of whom the father was a Vlauntroos, son of Louis XIV, reputed to have perished in the camp before Buxembe, the de Bonfort, whose head is said to have been taken of the head of St. Stephen at Tower hill; a son of Anne of Austria, of Louis XIV, elder, by Cardinal Mazarin, or by the duke of Buckingham; the twin-brother of Louis XIV in captivity secured by Valtali and others. Foote, an eminent statesman in the time of Louis XIV; and a count Matthioli, secretary of state to Charles III, duke of Mantua, M. Debat and the report of the Marquis Gisberto (8th March, 1718) that Matthew had been to the person. The mask, it seems, was not made of iron; but of black velvet, strengthened with whalebone, and fastened to the head with a calot.

† Edward Irving was born 15 Aug., 1812, and was engaged as assistant to Dr. Chalmers, at Glasgow, in 1832. In 1834 he attracted immense crowds of distinguished persons to his sermons at the 4th church, now called the "Holy Catholic Apostolic Church." They use a liturgy (framed in 1842, and enlarged 1853), and have church officers named apostles, angels, prophets, &c. In 1852 lighted candles were placed on the magnificent altar, and burning of incense during prayers was prescribed. The Gothic church in Gordon-square was solemnly opened 1 Jan. 1854. They have over 80 churches in 1910.

ISANDULA, Isandlana, or Isandlwana, termed the "English Cremera." see Zululand, 22 Jan. 1879.

ISAURIA (a province in Asia Minor), conquered by the Romans (c. 78, by the Saracens A.D. 650; it was retaken by the emperor Leo III., who founded the Isaurian dynasty, 718, which ended with Constantine VI., in 787. Isauria was incorporated with Turkey 1387.

ISCHIA, see Earthquakes, 1853.

ISERNIA (S. Italy). Here the Sardinian general Guldini defeated the Neapolitans, 17 Oct. 1800.

ISLAM, or ES'LAM, submission to God, the name given to Mahometanism (which see).

ISLE of FRANCE, MAN, &c., see Mauritius, Man, &c.

ISLIES, BISHOPRIC OF. This see contained not only the Hebrides, or Western Isles, but the Isle of Man, which for nearly 400 years had been a separate bishopric. The first bishop of the Isles was Amphibalus, 370; see Lond. Since the revolution (when this bishopric was discontinued) the Isles have been joined to Moray and Ross, or to Ross alone. In 1847, however, Argyll and the Isles were made a seventh post-revolution and distinct bishopric; see Bishops.

ISLINGTON (anciently Isendone, Isedone, and "Merriv"), a large suburban parish in N. London, still containing remains, and old buildings, all gradually disappearing. Four members returned by the Act of 1855. Made a municipal borough by the London Government Act, 1859 (10 aldermen, 60 councillors). Population, 1851, 10,121; 1861, 252,585; 1871, 316,533; 1901, 334,928. The great northern hospital, Holloway-road, opened by the President of the N. Wales, 17 July, 1858. Public baths and washhouses opened by Lord Mayor Evans, 21 May and 26 July, 1852; Public electric lighting inaugurated by Lord Mayor Sir W. Wilkin, 19th Dec. 1856. The rev. Chas. H. Turner made suffragan bishop of Islington. 29 May, 1858. War memorial to the 65 Islingtonians who fell in South African war, erected in Highbury fields and unveiled by duke of Fife. 16 July, 1905.

ISLY (N.W. Africa). Here Abd-el-Kader, the Arab chief, was totally defeated by the French, under Buganda, 14 Aug. 1844.
ITALY.

ISMAIL (Bessarabia) was taken by the Russians, 6 Aug., 1750, after a long siege, when the Russians lost 20,000 men; the town was taken by storm, 22 Dec., 1759; when Suwarow, the most merciless warrior of modern times, put the brave Turkish garrison (30,000 men) to the sword and delivered up Ismail to pillage, and ordered the massacre of 6,000 women. It was again captured by the Russians 26 Sept., 1800, and retained till the treaty of Paris in 1856, when it was ceded to Moldavia.

ISMAILIA, the half-way station on the Suez Canal. It is supposed to occupy nearly the site of Rameses. The rebel Egyptian army was defeated near here by the British, 25 Aug., 1882. Gondokoro, on the White Nile, was also named Ismailia by Sir Samuel Baker in 1871. See Egypt.

ISPANIAD was made the capital of Persia by Abbas the Great, in 1500. It lost its supremacy in 1796, when Teheran became the capital.

ISRAEL, KINGDOM OF, see JEWS.—Handel's oratorio, "Israel in Egypt," first performed 4 April, 1739.

ISSUS (Asia Minor), the site of Alexander's second great battle with Darius, whose queen and family were captured, Oct., 333 B.C. The Persian army, according to Justin, consisted of 200,000 foot and 100,000 horse; 61,000 of the former and 10,000 of the latter were left dead on the spot, and 40,000 were taken prisoners. Here the emperor Septimius defeated his rival Niger, A.D. 194.

ISTAMBUL, see CONSTANTINOPLE.

ISTER, see DANUBE.

ISTRHIAN GAMES received their name from the isthmus of Corinith, where they were observed: their institution is mythically attributed to Sisyphus of Corinth, 1326 B.C., and to Thesen in honour of Neptune about 1231. The games, which were solemnly kept every third year, were discontinued at the destruction of Corinth by Lucius Munius, 146 B.C. The games were revived by Julius Caesar, 60 B.C.; and by the emperor Julian, A.D. 362, and ceased in 396, when Corinth was sacked by the Goths.

ISTRIA was finally subdued by the Romans, 177 B.C. After various changes it came under the rule of Venice in 1378, and was annexed 1420. It was obtained by Austria 1796; by France 1806; by Austria 1814. Population in 1839, 317,409; in 1850, 344,713; in 1910, (est.) 335,975.

ITALIA IRREDENTA ("unredeemed Italy"), a secret society which first appeared in Italy Nov., 1877, and said to have 200 committees, the chief at Naples. Its professed object is to add to the Italian Kingdom Trieste, the Tyrol, and other Austrian provinces on the Adriatic.

Cry for Italian Irredenta: meetings at Rome, &c., 21 July, 1878.

In 1879, Col. Haymerle, an Austrian missionary resident at Rome, published "Essays," freely discussing the subject. The Italians were much annoyed, and the publication was disavowed by the Austrian government.

SIGNE ISRAEL, in a speech at Florence, strongly de- clared against the Irredentists.—See OCT., 1860.

ITALIAN AFRICA, see MASSOWAH and ZANZIBAR, 1893-5.

ITALIAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE, first met at Pisa, under the patronage of the grand duke of Tuscany, in 1857. It met in Rome, 20 Oct., 1873, and at other places since.

ITALIAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY, London, founded by the king of Italy and others, 1861.

ITALIAN CATHOLIC CHURCH (between two and three thousand persons); first bishop, Domenico Panelli; a synod met at Naples in 1873. Great progress reported Feb., 1888.

Its statute (of 62 articles) asserts that the Catholic church is nothing but the society of all believers in Jesus Christ, and that he only is its apostolic pastor: rejects all miracles since the death of the Apostles; declares that the Catholic faith is only revealed in the Holy Scriptures, &c. The congregation of St. Paul, of the Italian Catholic church headed by Mons. Savarese, declared heretical, Oct., 1884.

ITALIAN LANGUAGE, based on Latin, is said by Dante to be formed of a selection of the best portions of the different dialects. Pure, elegant poetry was written by Guido Cavalcanti, who died 1301; and good prose by Malespini, about 1250. See DRAMA.

The following terms are often used with reference to certain periods in the history of Italian literature and art.

1. Trecento (three hundred), from the birth of Dante (1265) to the death of Boccaccio (1375), which two, with Petrarca, are styled "the triumvirate of the trecento."

2. QUATTROCENTO (four hundred), from 1375 to the revival of Italian literature by Lorenzo de' Medici in the 15th century. During this period Latin was revived, to the prejudice of Italian.

3. CINQUECENTO (five hundred), from about 1490 to 1590. A sensuous style of art, founded on the heathen mythology, began to prevail.

4. SEICENTO (six hundred), from 1550 to 1700. The low taste which prevailed during this period is ascribed to the influence of the Spaniards and the Jesuits throughout Italy. Secernisti is a term of reproach.

The Trecento and Cinquecento were the most flourishing periods.

ITALIAN REPUBLIC was the name given to the remodelled Casiline republic. Napoleon Bonaparte, president, Jan., 1802.

ITALY, a name mythically derived either from Itals, an early king, or Italus, a bull calf. The invading Pelasgians from Greece, and the Abruzzi (Umbrians, Oscans, and Etruscans), combined, form the Latin race, still possessing the southern part of Europe. The history of Italy is soon absorbed into that of Rome, founded 753 B.C. In the middle ages it was debilitated by intestine wars and the interference of the German emperors; since then, Spain, France, and Germany struggled for the possession of the country, which has been divided among them several times. Spain, which predominated in Italy during the 16th and 17th centuries, yielded to the house of Austria at the beginning of the 18th. The victories of Bonaparte in 1797-8 changed the government of Italy; but the Austrian rule was re-established at the peace of Vienna. The Milanese and Venetians revolted and joined Piedmont, but were subdued by Radetzky; see below. The hostile feeling between Austria and Piedmont gradually increased till war broke out in April, 1859. The Austrians were defeated, and the kingdom of Italy, comprising Piedmont, Sardinia, Lombardy, Tuscany, Modena, Parma, and the Papal States, and Sicily was re-established, 17 March, 1860, by the Italian parliament (consisting of 113 deputies from 50 provinces). On 20 Oct. 1861, the internal government was re-organized; the 50 provinces were placed under prefects, subject to four directors-general. War with Austria was declared 20 June, 1860; and on 3 Oct. peace was signed at Vienna, and Venice was ceded to Italy; see below for the events. The settlement of the kingdom of Italy was consummated by the occupation of Rome as the capital, 1870. Estimated population of the kingdom, 1892-2,503,035. Rome was added in 1870; 1878, 28,209,020; Jan. 1882, 28,312,339; 1902, 32,888,307; 1910 (est.), 34,528,288. Revenue, 1876-28,596,800l.; public debt, 1907, 510,581,000l.; imports, 1902-73,310,121l.; exports, 60,415,964l. Revenue, 1908, 292,689,890l.; expenditure, 87,594,870l.; imports, 96,617,526l.; exports, 73,345,689l.; public debt, 524,787,000l. For other details see Rome and the various Italian cities throughout the volume.

Early in the 9th century, the Italian city-states (Benevento, Naples, etc.) depose their native kings, and the Lombards and Ostrogoths are finally expelled. Rome is held by the Papacy until 1870. The Venetians invade Italy, 43, and retain it till 1866.

The city and province of Rome is under the pope, who is recognized as head of the Catholic Church.

In 1073 Emperor Henry IV and his queen Matilda are excommunicated by Pope Gregory, but are restored by the pope in 1080 at the Diet of Worms.

In 1127 the Holy Roman Empire is divided into seven imperial territories, the Angevin states, and the Papal States.

In 1167 the Archbishop of Canterbury is consecrated in Rome, and the papacy is recognized as supreme head of the Western Church.

In 1251 the papacy is transferred to Avignon, and the popes remain there until 1377, when the Avignonese return to Rome.

In 1327 the papacy is transferred to Rome, and the popes remain there until 1423, when they are transferred to Avignon again.

In 1453 the papacy is transferred to Rome, and the popes remain there until 1492, when they are transferred to Ferrara.

In 1527 the papacy is transferred to Ferrara, and the popes remain there until 1556, when they are transferred to Rome.

In 1625 the papacy is transferred to Rome, and the popes remain there until 1700, when they are transferred to Avignon again.

In 1769 the papacy is transferred to Rome, and the popes remain there until 1870.

ITHACA, kingdom of Ulysses, see Ioanik Isles. It was explored by Dr. Schliemann, in 1878; few discoveries being made.

ITINERARIES. The Roman Itinerarium was a table of the stages between important places. The "Itinerarium Antonini," embracing the whole empire, usually ascribed to the emperor Aurelius Antoninus, and his successors, A.D. 158-180, was probably based upon the survey made by order of Julius Caesar, 44 B.C. The "Itinerarium Hierosolymitanum" was drawn up for the use of the pilgrims about A.D. 333.

IVORY. was brought to Solomon from Tarshish, about 952 B.C. (1 Kings x. 22). The colossal statues of Jupiter, Minerva, &c., by Phidias, were formed of ivory and gold, 444 B.C. Ivory tusks, 7 feet long, sent by the Zulu king Cetewayo to lord Chelmsford, as a token of peace, summer, 1879. Celluloid, an imitation of ivory, tortoiseshell, &c., composed of gum-copal and camphor, is used for the manufacture of buttons, billiard balls, and various ornaments; it is indistinguishable at low temperatures.
J. was distinguished from I by the Dutch scholars of the 10th century, and introduced into the alphabet by Giles Reisch, printer, of Paris, 1550.

JACOBS, a name given to the Dominican friars in France, because their first convent was the hospital of the pirlars of St. James (Jacobs), at Paris, at the request of pope Honorius III. (1216-27). The Jacobin club (first called "club Breton") consisted of about forty gentlemen and men of letters, who met in the hall of the Jacobin church at Paris, in Oct. 1789, to discuss political and other questions. Similar societies were instituted in all the principal towns of the kingdom. The club was closed 11 Nov. 1791.

JACOBITES, a Christian sect, so called from Jacob Baradades, a Syrian, about 341; see KATARACHIIAE.—The partisans of James II. (Latin, Jacobus II) were so named after his expulsion from England in 1688-9.

A sentimental revival of Jacobitism appeared in England in 1796, on the "White Rose League," having been formed. The marquis of Bute and other noblemen of the "Legitimate Jacobite League" were stirred up in an attempt to place a large broadsword on the throne of Mary, the Queen of Scots, in Westminster Abbey, 1 Feb. 1799.

JACOBUS, a gold coin, so called from King James I. of England, in whose reign it was struck, 1603-25.

JACQUARD, LOOM, for figured fabrics, invented by Joseph Marie Jacquard, of Lyons, and patented 23 Dec. 1814.

JACQUERIE, a term applied to bands of revolting peasants (headed by one Cadill, called Jacques Bonhomme), who ravaged France during the captivity of King John in 1358, and were quelled with much bloodshed. Similar insurrections occurred in Germany. One was termed the Brandeburg, from the large shoe especially worn by peasants, in 1522; and another termed the Bundschuh, from the large shoe especially worn by peasants, in 1522; and another termed the Bund (or league) of the Poor Conrad, 1513 and 1524, which also cost about 50,000 lives, and led to the insurrection of the anabaptists.

JAFFA, a port of Syria, celebrated in scripture as Joppa, whence Jonah embarked (about 862 B.C.), and where Peter raised Tabitha from the dead (Acts 9:38); in mythology the place whence Persus delivered Andromeda. Jaffa was taken by the caliph Omar, in 635, by the Crusaders, 1096; by Saladin, 1171; by Louis IX, 1253, and by Bonaparte, 7 March, 1799. The French were driven out by the British in June the same year. Here, according to Sir Robert Wilson, were massacred 3,000 prisoners by Bonaparte; but this is doubted. Jaffa suffered by an earthquake in Jan. 1837, when it is said that 13,000 persons were killed.

JAGELLONS, a dynasty which has times reigned over Lithuania, Poland, Hungary, and Bohemia. Boleslaus Jagellon, Duke of Lithuania (husband of Hedwig, daughter of Louis of Hungary, 1384), who became king of Poland as Ladislas III. of V. in 1386, and ending with Sigismund II., who died in 1372.

JANINA, see Albania.

JANISSARIES (Turkish iceri tehere, new soldiers), an order of infantry in the Turkish army; originally, young prisoners trained to arms among the Turks, were called and remodelled by his son Amurath I., 1390; their numbers being increased by following sultans. In later days they degenerated from their strict discipline, and several times deposed and killed the sultans. During an insurrection, 14-15 June, 1829, when nearly 3000 of them were killed, the Ottoman army was re-organised by Murad IV., and a truce was issued on 17 June, abolishing the Janissaries.

JANSENISTS, persons who embraced the doctrines of Cornelius Jansen, bishop of Ypres, who died in 1638. The publication of his "Augustanes," 1640, in which he maintained the doctrine of free grace, kindled a fierce controversy, and was condemned by a bull of pope Urban VIII., in 1642. Through the Jesuits Jansenism was condemned by Innocent X. in 1653, and by Clement XI., in 1713, by the bull Unigenitus. This bull the French church rejected. Jansenism still exists at Utrecht and Haarlem; see Port Royalists, Los, abp. of Utrecht, died, June, 1683.

JANUARY derives its name from Janus, an early Roman divinity. January was added to the Roman calendar by Numa, 733 B.C. He placed it about the winter solstice, and made it the first month, because Janus was supposed to preside over the beginning of all business. In 1751 the legal year in England was ordered to begin on 1 Jan., instead of 25 March. MidJanuarys in England, 1804, mean temperature, 43°; 1831, 44°; 1896, 43°; 1875, 43°; 1884, 43°; 1890, 45° (on 18 days above 50°).

JASSY, the capital of Moldavia, frequently occupied by the Russians; taken by them in 1579, 1756, and 1828. A treaty between them and the Turks was signed here, 9 Jan. 1792. Population, 1910 (est.), 85,000.

JAVA, a large island in the Eastern Archipelago, is said to have been reached by the Portuguese in 1511, and by the Dutch in 1525. The latter, who now possess it, built Batavia, the capital, about 1619; see Batavia. The atrocious massacre of 20,000 of the unarmed natives by the Dutch, sparing neither women nor children, to possess their effects, took place in 1740. The island capitulated to the British, 18 Sept. 1811. The sultan was dethroned by the English, and the hereditary prince raised to the throne, in June, 1815. Java was restored to Holland by treaty in 1814, and given up in 1816. The English promoted free labour instead of forced; but the Dutch reverted to the old system, and in 1839 abolished free labour, introducing the "culture system," by which the government controls the cultivation of the land and buys the produce at its own price. In Aug. 1860, the Swiss soldiers here, aided by the natives, mutinied, but were soon reduced, and many suffered death. The diminished prosperity of Java led to warm discussions in the Dutch chamber in 1866.

Java has a great many volcanoes, and has frequently been devastated by eruptions and earthquakes; those of 5 Jan. 1899, 31 Oct. 1876, and 16 June, 1877, were very destructive.

Java and neighbouring islands desolated by a series of violent eruptions from about two-thirds of its 46 volcanoes, beginning with Krakatoa, casting up immense quantities of lava, mud, ashes, and fragments of rocks, destroying trees from about 50 square miles. Mountains were split up, some disappeared, and many new craters were formed. Rumbling echoes heard 25 Aug., violent eruptions of Krakatoa 26 Aug. There was much submarine disturbance, and an immense "tidal wave" destroyed Anjer and other places, 27 Aug. The lighthouses in the straits of Sunda were swallowed up, and new volcanic peaks appeared, rendering navigation highly dangerous. Loss of life estimated at 35,000, 25-28 Aug. Great atmospheric, oceanic, and electrical disturbances for thousands of square miles.

See under 1879, 1882.

Serious volcanic outbreaks; great destruction; about 500 persons perished, early May, 1875. Insurrection of the natives at Anjer; some Europeans and natives killed; the revolt checked by the police and settled, 16 July, 1883.

When William III. came to the throne of England, he continued this, but added "the liberties of England and the Protestant religion," at the same time ordering that the old motto of the royal arms, "Dieu et mon droit," should be retained on the great seal, (1869).

JEMAPPES (N.W. Belgium), the site of the first pitched battle gained by the French republicans (under Dumouriez), in which 40,000 French troops drove out 10,000 Austrians, who were entrenched in woods and mountains, defended by redoubts and many cannon, 6 Nov. 1792. The number killed on each side was reckoned at 3000. inundated through rise of the Meuse; 200 houses under water, 8-9 Feb. 1910.

JENA and Auerstadt (Central Germany), where two battles were fought, 14 Oct. 1806, between the French and Prussians. The French were commanded by Jena by Napoleon, and at Auerstadt by Davoust: the Prussians by prince Hohenlohe at the former place, and the king of Prussia at the latter. The Prussians were defeated, losing nearly 20,000 killed and wounded, and nearly as many prisoners, and 200 field pieces; the French lost 14,000 men. Napoleon advanced to Berlin, and issued the Berlin decree (which see).

JENKINS' EAR. In 1731, an English merchant- vessel was boarded by a Spanish guardship, and the captain, Robert Jenkins, cruelly used; his wounded ear being torn off. He obtained no reparation by appeal to his government. He appeared before parliament in 1738, when the convention of the Pardo was severely discussed, and war ensued. Jenkins' story was verified by Admiralty Records in 1889.

JENNERIAN INSTITUTION, founded 1803; Jenner society established at Gloucester (which see), 1869. Jenner's celebration in Russia 6 Dec. 1889, see Vaccination and Preventive Medicine.

JERSEY. The chief island of the Channel archipelago (which includes Guernsey, Sark, Alderney, &c.), formerly held by the Romans in the 3rd and 4th centuries after Christ—Jersey being termed Cæsarea. The islands were captured by Rollo, and thus became an appanage of the duchy of Normandy, and were united to the crown of England by his descendant, William the Conqueror. The inhabitants of the Channel Islands preferred to remain subjects of king John, at the period of the conquest of Normandy by Philip Augustus, and while retaining the laws, customs, and (until lately) the language of their continental ancestors, have always remained firm in their loyalty. Almost every war with France has been characterised by an attack on Jersey, the most formidable of which, under the baron de Rullecourt, was defeated by the English garrison and Jersey militia, commanded by major Pieron, 6 Jan. 1781. Jersey became a place of refuge for MM. Rouher, Barrois, Drony de Lhury, and other distinguished French imperialists, Sept. 1879. Some of the Troubadours and other monks expelled from France, settle in Jersey, 1880-1. Philip Gossett, sentenced to 3 years' imprisonment for fraud against the state (£27,000), and a banking company, 8 May, 1886. Discussions in regard to the exclusion of the English language in the legislative assemblies of the islands, etc. Feb., 1882 to July, 1887, 500 laws, general and special, were enacted. The island was invaded by the Prussians, 26 Nov. 1813, and the French, 1814. The population of the channel islands in 1891 was 69,078. 1901, 96,841 (Jersey, 52,749). The Theatre Royal and 2 houses burnt. 29 March, 1789. Town militia armed burnt down; heavy loss.

JERVIS’S ACTS, 11 and 12 Vict., cc. 42, 43 (1848), relative to legal proceedings against criminals. JESTER is described as “a witty and jovial person, kept by princes to inform them of their faults, and of those of others, under the disguise of a jester.” The office of jester existed in the 5th cent. in the East, and probably earlier in India. The famous caliph, Haroun al-Raschid, had a jester, Bahalul, some of whose sayings have been preserved. Several of our kings, particularly the Tudors, kept jesters, among these Will Somers, the “fool” of Henry VIII. Rahe, the founder of St. Bartholomew’s Hospital, London, 1538, is said to have been a court jester and minstrel. There was a jester, Archie Armstrong, at court in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., who was deprived of his office for his jests on the king, but we hear of no licensed jester afterwards. The last private person to keep a jester is said to be Lord Suffolk, who “frolicked,” said Dicky Piers, who was buried at Berkeley, 1728. JESUIT PORCELAIN, a Japanese porcelain of the 18th cent., now rare, which the Jesuits in Japan caused to be decorated with Madonnas, images of saints, and various emblems of the Christian faith. JESUITS. The society or company of Jesus was founded by Ignatius Loyola, a page to Ferdinand V. of Spain, subsequently an officer in his army, and afterwards canonised. Having been wounded in both legs at the siege of Pamplona, in 1521, he devoted himself to theology, and renounced the military for the ecclesiastical profession. He dedicated his life to the Blessed Virgin as her knight; made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and on his return laid the foundation of his society at Paris,
JESUS’S BARK. 781
JEWEL ROBBERIES.

15 Aug. 1531. He presented his institutes, in 1539, to pope Paul III., who made many objections; but Ignatius adding to the vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience, a fourth of implicit submission to the holy see, the institution was confirmed by a bull, 27 Sept. 1539. The number of members was not to exceed sixty, but that restriction was taken off by another bull, 28 March, 1540, and Pope Julius III., Pius V., and Gregory XIII., granted many privileges. Loyola died 31 July, 1556. Francis Xavier, and other missionaries, the first brethren, carried the order to the extremities of the habitable globe, but it met with great opposition in Europe, particularly in Paris; see PAROCHY AND JESUITS. The order still exists in many European states contrary to the laws.

The society condemned by the Sorbonne, Paris, 1554, expelled from France, 1554; dissolved, 1628; but after several decrees is totally suppressed in France and its property confiscated, 1794. Ordered by parliament to be expelled from England, 1799, 1824, 1826; and by the Catholic relief act of 1829. Expelled from Venice, 1667; Holland, 1708; Portugal, 1759; Spain, 1797. Abolished by Clement XIV. 27 July, 1773. Restored by Pius VI. 7 Aug. 1814. Father Pierre J. Beckx, elected general 1833; active and successful; retired, 1853; died 4 March, 1853. Expelled from Spain, 1858; France, 1873; Portugal, 1874; Sardinia, Austria, and other states, 1836; Italy and Sicily, 1850. The chief of the order appeals to the king of Sardinia for redress of grievances, 24 Oct. Report of the order; total number of Jesuits, 1872: 14,872 in France, 2422, in 1866; 12,097 reported Jan. 1892. In consequence of the activity of the French order in the half of the papal supremacy, a bull for its expulsion from Germany passed by the parliament at Berlin (1831-32), 19 June; promulgated 5 July, 1872. The headquarters of the order proposed to be removed from Rome to Malta, 1894; removed, 1873. Expulsion of the Jesuits from Italy, decreed 25 June; carried into execution, 30 Oct.—Nov. 1873. Father Curel, orthodox and eloquent, resigned (virtually expelled) for recommending some to submit to loss of temporal power, Oct. 1877; published "Il Moderno Dizionario di Commedia Italiana." Dec. 1877. Submits to the Pope in a humble letter; received by Sarto on 24 Oct., 1881. The order in France dissolved by decree, 30 March, 1838. JESUIT'S BARK, called by the Spaniards fever-wood, from the cinchona or chinchona tree, discovered, it is said, by a Jesuit, about 1535 (and used by him in the treatment of a fever, but generally known till 1552, or 1638, when the wife of the viceroy at Peru, the countess of Chinchon, was cured of a fever by this drug; hence termed pulvis commissive). She brought it to Europe in 1639. It was sold at one period for its weight in silver, and was introduced into France in 1649; and is said to have cured Louis XIV. of fever when he was a child. It came into general use in 1680, and Sir Hans Sloane introduced it here about 1700. The cinchona plant thrives in India, Jamaica, New Zealand, and other places. See Quinine.

JESUS CHRIST, the SAVIOUR of the WORLD. 1 Tim. iii. 16. The following dates given in the English bible have been much controverted, and others have been proposed by various chronologers, as Hales and Clinton, and others (see Nativity and Crucifixion). The birth of Christ is dated, 4 B.C.: his baptism and first ministry, 26 A.D.: his crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension, 29 A.D. The divinity of Christ, denied by the Arians, was confirmed by the council of Nice... 325

JEWISH ERA AND CALENDAR. The Jews usually employed the era of the Seleucidae until the 15th century, when a new mode of computing was adopted. They date from the creation, which they consider to have been 3760 years and 3 months before the commencement of our era. To reduce Jewish time to ours, subtract 3761 years. The Jewish year consists of either twelve or thirteen months, of 29 or 30 days. The civil year commences with the month Tisri, immediately after the new moon following the autumnal equinox; the ecclesiastical year begins with Nisan.

JEWS HARP, 786

by JOHN DOE.

JOAN of ARC, the maid of Orleans, born at Domremy, imagined that she had a divine mission to expel the English, who under the earl of Salisbury were besieging Orleans. Charles VII. entrusted her with the command of some French troops, and she raised the siege, and entered Orleans with supplies, 26 April, 1429; and the English, who were before the place from 12 Oct. preceding, abandoned the enterprise 8 May following. She captured several towns in the possession of the English, whom she defeated in a battle near Patay, 18 June, 1429. She was wounded several times herself, but never shed any blood with her own hand. She was taken at the siege of Compiegne, 25 May, 1430; and, after a trial, burnt for a witch at Rouen, 30 May, 1431. A statue of Joan of Arc, the work of the late princess Marie of France, was inaugurated at Orleans, 13 Sept. 1851, and the 450th anniversary of the deliverance of the city was celebrated there on 14 May, 1895. The anniversary of her death celebrated, 30 May, 1878. See Patay. Her statue at Beaurevoir unveiled 6 Aug.; at Donmore 26 Aug. 1891; at Chillon, 14 Aug. 1893; at Joffre, 15 July, 1893; at St. Peter's, Rome, 24 Aug. 1892. Her beatification approved by the pope, 27 Jan. 1894. Her canonization proposed, Feb. 1903; beatification, Easter, 1906, at St. Peter's, Rome.

JOYNEUSBURG, the chief town and mining centre of the Transvaal. It has its origin as the site selected for a town, 1857, after the proclamation by the Transvaal government opening certain farms on the reef of Witwatersrand public goldfields, 1886. Since then Johannesburg has rapidly developed, a handsome stock exchange and other public buildings having been erected. In 1895-6 it was the centre of the agitation to obtain political and other rights from the Boers, and here the Jameson raid of Jan. 1896 was organised, leading to the S. African war (which see, and Transvaal, 1887 et seq.) of 1899-1902. Part of the town was destroyed by a dynamite explosion in 1896. Population 1910 (est.), 171,800. Military and police station at the Gisberg mine totally destroyed by fire, estimated damage 100,000.

JOHN O'GROAT'S HOUSE, 787

and in 1285, 13 Edw. I., sheriffs and bailiffs were, before they made delivery of the distress, to receive the prisoners, and order for the return of the property, if return was awarded. But this becoming a matter of form, the fictitious names of Doe and Roe were used until the form was declared to be no longer necessary by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852.

JOHN O'GROAT'S HOUSE, an ancient house formerly situated on Duncan's Bay Head, the most northeasterly point of Great Britain, deriving its name from John of Groat, or Groot, and his brothers, originally from Holland, said to have settled here about 1496.

The house was of an octagon shape, being one room, with eight windows and eight doors, to admit eight members of the family, the heads of different branches of it, to prevent their quarrels for precedence at table. Each came in by this contrivance at his own door, and sat at an octagon table, at which, of course, there was no chief place or head.

St. John's Night, or Masummer Eve, 23 June: bonfires are lighted in England, and in some parts of Scotland, and thought to be the relic of a pagan custom resembling the Phœnician worship of Baal.

JOHN, ST., KNIGHTS OF, see Malta.

The Knights of St. John (Johniiter Ritter), a Lutheran order of high rank, formed by Frederick William III. of Prussia, 23 May, 1812, and reorganised 15 Oct. 1825. These knights were operated with the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and various bodies of rendering energetic assistance to the wounded during the Franco-Prussian war, in 1870-71; the chief officers being the present chief of the priory of St. John, Clerkenwell, London, E.C.

The Russian and English orders claim connection with the original institution at Malta as two of its branches, the St. John Ambulance Association, founded and established by the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in 1877: its objects are—1. The dissemination of instruction in "first aid," i.e., the preliminary treatment of the sick and injured; 2. Lectures to women on home nursing and hygiene; 3. The deposit in appropriate localities of material (such as stretchers, hammocks, splints, bandages, &c.) for the use by the medical officers on their arrival; 4. The development of an ambulance corps for the transport of the sick and injured. Upwards of 250 administrative "centres" and some thousands of "detached classes" have been formed all over the British Dominions, in India, the colonies, and elsewhere abroad; and over 1,000 certificates of proficiency have been awarded. Sir Edmund A. H. Leechmere, bart., M.P., chairman; John Parky, esq., honorary director of stores and manager of transport department; major-General Herbert D. Percival, M.C., chief secretary.

JUAN FERNANDEZ, an island in the Pacific, named from its discoverer in 1567. Alexander Selkirk, a native of Scotland, left on shore here by his captain in Nov. 1704, and lived alone till he was discovered by captain Rogers in 1709. He died lieutenant of H.M.S. Weymouth, 1723. A monument to his memory was erected on the island in 1858, then colonised by Germans. From his narrative De Foe is said to have derived his Adventures of Robinson Crusoe, first published in 1719.

JUAN, SAN, a small island, near Vancouver's island. The possession of this island, on account of its commanding the straits between British Columbia and the United States territories, led to disputes between the two countries, owing to the doubtful interpretation of the treaty of Washington respecting the boundaries, 12 June, 1846. See United States, 1839 and 1849. The matter by the treaty of Washington, 8 May, 1871 was referred for arbitration to the German Emperor, who decided in favour of the United States, 1872. The island was evacuated by the British 22 Nov. following.

Destructive earthquake occurred, with great loss of life. 27 Oct. 1894.

JUBILEES (Heb. גבולם, the sound of a trumpet). The Jews were commanded to celebrate a jubilee every fifty years, 1491 B.C. (Lev. xxv. 8.) Among the Christians a jubilee every century was instituted by pope Boniface VIII. in the year 1300. It was ordered to be celebrated every fifty years by pope Clement VI.; and by Urban VI., every thirty-third year; and by Sixtus V., every twenty-fifth year. Leo XIII. celebrated his pontifical jubilee, Feb. 1913, see Pope, National jubilee in England on account of George III., held in 1764. Hitherto the jubilee was celebrated in the general peace, and of the centenary of the accession of the Brunswick family, 1 Aug. 1814. JUNIUS'S LETTERS. began in the Public Advertiser, 21 Jan. 1789.

JUNIUS'S LETTERS. They have been ascribed to Mr. E. Burke, Mr. William Gerard Hamilton, commonly called Single-speech Hamilton, John Wilkes, Mr. Dunning (afterwards Lord Ash- bury), Sir John Adair, the Rev. J. Rosenhain, John Roberts, Charles Lloyd, Samuel Byer, general Lee, the duke of Portland, Hugh Boyd, lord George Sackville, Earl Temple, and Sir Philip Francis. The last named is generally considered to have written the author. Junius is said: "I am the depository of my own secret, and it shall perish with me." The work of Mr. Chabot and Lord T. B. Twisleton was considered decisive of Sir Philip Francis being Junius, May, 1857. "Junius is as much unknown as ever." - 3rd ser., 8 Sept. 1838.

JURIDICAL SOCIETY was established in Feb. 1855, and opened with an address by sir R. Bethell on 12 May following.

JURIES. Trial by jury was introduced into England during the Saxton heptarchy, mention being made of Anglo-Saxon freemen appointed to try causes between the English and Welsh men of property, and made responsible, with their whole estates real and personal, for false verdicts. Lambard. By most authorities their institution is ascribed to Alfred about 886, which is not historical. In Magna Charta, juries are insinuated to as the great bulwark of the people's liberty. When either party is an alien born, the jury shall be one half denizens, and the other half aliens, stat. 28 Edw. III. 1353. By the common law a prisoner upon indictment or appeal might challenge peremptorily thirty-five, being under three juries; but a lord of parliament, or a peer of the realm, who is to be tried by his peers, may challenge any of his peers. An act for the trial by jury in civil cases in Scotland was passed in 1815. An act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to juries in Ireland was passed 4 Will. IV. 1833. A new act respecting juries, regulating their payment, &c., was passed 9 Aug. 1870. The clause respecting their payment was repealed by an act passed 28 Feb. 1874. Laws respecting juries in Ireland amended, 14 Aug. 1871. New Juries bill brought in by the attorney-general, sir John Coleridge, Feb. 1873. Special juries bill passed, May 1898. Juries are sum-JUSTRY MILIEU" (moderation and conciliation to parties), according to Louis-Philippe (in 1830), is the only principle of government which can secure the welfare of France.

JUSTICE GENERAL, LORD, Scotland, see Court of Session.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE are unpaid local magistrates, invested with extensive powers in minor cases, but subject to supersession and punishment by the King's Bench for an abuse of their authority. They were first nominated by William I. in 1076. Stow. Persons termed conservators of the peace in each county were appointed by ? Edw. III. c. 2, 1327; and their duties were defined in 1360. The form of a commission of the peace settled by the judges, 23 Eliz. 1560. Hwinkins—see Stow.

JUSTICES, LORDS, were appointed by English sovereigns to govern during their absence; especially by William III., George I. and George II. (1095-1760). George III. never left England. In Sept. 1821, when George IV. went to Hanover, his lords justices were appointed, the duke of York being the first. No such appointment was made during the reign of queen Victoria, it having been decided by the law authorities in 1841 to be unnecessary when the queen went to France. Ireland is always ruled by lords justices when the lord-lieutenant is out of the country, or his office is vacant. The lords justices play a part in appeal in chancery, having rank next after the chief baron of the exchequer, were appointed from 1 Oct. 1841, salary 6000l. For recent changes see Appeal and King's Bench.

1828. Sir George Mellish, July; died 15 June, 1877.
1829. Sir Richard Huggellay, resigned 1830.
1831. Sir Charles S. C. Bowen.
1832. Sir Edward Fox, 5 April, resigned 1832.
Present Lord Justices, 119.
1840. Sir John Fletcher Moulton.
1841. Sir George Farwell.
1842. Sir W. Renn Kennedy.

JUSTICIARS. In ancient times the kings of England used to hear and determine causes; but it is declared by law that if the king cannot determine every controversy, he, to ease himself, may divide the labour among persons, men of wisdom and fearing God, and out of such to appoint judges. The Saxon kings of England appointed a judge after this manner, who was, in fact, the king's deputy. After the Norman conquest, the person invested with that power had the style of Capitis Justitiae, or Justiciarius Anglic. These judges continued until the creation of the courts of king's bench and the common pleas. The first justices of England were Ethel, bishop of Bayeux, and William Fitz-Osborne, in 1067; and the last was Philip Bassett, in 1261, or Hugh le Despencer, 1263 (Henry III.). Authorities vary.

KEEPER OF THE KING’S CONSCIENCE.

The early chancellors were priests, and out of their supposed moral control of the king’s mind grew the idea of an equity court in contradistinction to the law courts. The bill in chancery is a petition through the lord chancellor to the king’s conscience for remedy in matters for which the king’s common law courts afford no redress. The keeper of the king’s conscience is therefore now the officer who presides in the court of chancery; see Chancellor and Lord Keeper.

KEEPER (LORD) OF THE GREAT SEAL OF ENGLAND differed only from the lord chancellor in that the latter had letters patent, whereas the lord keeper had none. Richard, a chaplain, is said to have been the first keeper under Ralph, in 1116. Foss says that the distinction between the two offices was made 1232. The two offices were made one by 5 Eliz. 1567. Corelli; see Chancellor. The office of lord keeper of the great seal of Scotland was established in 1708, after the union.

KENILWORTH CASTLE (Warwickshire), was built about 1120, by Geoffrey de Clinton, whose grandson sold it to Henry III. It was enlarged and fortified by Simon de Montfort, to whom Henry gave it as a marriage portion with his sister Eleanor. Queen Elizabeth conferred it on her favourite, Dudley, earl of Leicester. His entertainment of the queen commenced 10 July, 1575, and cost the earl daily 1000l.

After the battle of Evesham and death of Simon de Montfort, by Prince Edward (afterwards Edward I.) his younger son, Simon, shut himself up in Kenilworth castle, which sustained a siege for six months against the royal forces of Henry III., to whom it at length surrendered. Upon this occasion was issued the "Protector de Kenilworth," or "Bane of Kenilworth," enactimg that all who had borne arms against the king should pay him the value of their lands for periods varying from 7 years to 6 months.

KHERSION, an ancient Dorian colony (deriving its name from Chersonesus, a peninsula), came under the sway of the great Mithridates about 120 B.C.; and afterwards under that of Rome, A.D. 30. It continued important, and its possession was long disputed by the Russians and Greeks. Justinian I. cruelly treated it. It was taken by Vladimir, grand-duke of Russia in 988, when he and his army received Christian baptism, and he married the emperor's sister Anne, who obtained Kherson as her dowry. The city was destroyed by the Lithuanians; and the Turks found it deserted when they took possession of the Crimea in 1475. What ancient remains the Turks and Tartars had spored, the Russians conveyed away for the construction of Sebastopol.

KHERSION, a Russian city on the Dnieper, founded 1778. Potemkin, the favourite of Catherine, who died at Jassy in 1791, is buried here, and John Howard, the English philanthropist, who died here, 20 Jan. 1796, is buried about three miles from the town, where an obelisk has been erected to his memory, by the czar Alexander I. The key-stone of the works at Holtema was solemnly laid by the emperor William, and the canal was named by him, in memory of his grandfather, the Kaiser Wilhelm canal. Kiel was for several days the scene of great festivities. The flags of 14 nations were floating in the harbour on upwards of 350 seagoing men-of-war, and over 300 yachts and steamers of various nationalities were present. Dr. von Boetticher, president of the committee of commerce, received much honour from the emperor for his great services in relation to this national work. of other gentlemen were murdered by insurgents. This rebellion was quelled in 1797. The Cúirt is now a military camp. St. Brigid's cathedral was opened, the archbishops of Canterbury, Armagh, and Dublin present, 22 Sept. 1897.

KILFENORA ( Clare), a bishopric, said to have been founded by St. Fachman. Cardinal Capara, in 1452, rendered it a suffragan see to Cashel; but in 1695 it was annexed to Tuam, and to Killaloe in 1752.

KILIMA-NJARO, a lofty volcanic mountain in E. Equatorial Africa, discovered by Rebmann in 1815.

Mr. H. H. Johnston ascended 12,019 feet from the summit of Kilimanjaro.

Dr. Hans Meyer (unsuccessful ascents 1874, 1875), with Herr Putschelder and one native, climbed up the left slopes to the highest pinnacle of the ridges of the volcano crater about 14,620 feet high, which he named, "Kaiser Wilhelm Peak." 6 Oct.; they left the snow on Oct. 15. Dr. Meyer gave an account of his travels to the Royal Geographical Society, 15 April 1892.

Moor von Wissmann establishes a fort at Kilimanjaro, in charge of lieutenant Witzleben 15 Feb.; 174 Germans defeated; fort abandoned 17 April; re-occupied without fighting, 2 July; its garrison being reinforced by 300 German soldiers, 15 July, 1890. Dr. Lent, botanist, and Dr. Kretschmar, zoologist, and several of their followers, killed, reported.

KILKENNY (S. E. Ireland), an English settlement about 1710. The castle was built 1695, by Wm. Marshall, earl of Pembroke. At the parliament held here by Lionel duke of Clarence 1697, the statute of Kilkenny was passed. After the town surrendered to Cromwell, 22 March, 1650, it was, on honourable terms, the duke and duchess of York well received, 15 April 1670 (174 p. (population, 1140) (est., 13,000).

KILLALA (Mayo) was invaded by a French force landing from three frigates, under general Humbert, 22 Aug. 1798. The invaders were joined by the Irish insurgent, and the battles of Castlebar and Cooly fought; and the French were defeated at Ballina, 28 Aug., the same year.

KILLALA (Sligo), an early see. The author of the Tripartite Life of St. Patrick, says, "that in 431 he came to a pleasant place where the river Mudlas (May) empties itself into the ocean; and on the south banks of the said river he built a noble church called Killala, of which he made one of his disciples, Marshech, the first bishop." The see of Ardhuery was annexed to Killala in the 17th century; and both were united to Tuam in 1839; see Tuam and Bishop.

KILLALOE (Clare), a see supposed to have been founded by St. Molua, whose disciple, St. Flannan, son to king Theoderic, consecrated at Rome by John IV. in 674, was also bishop. At the close of the 12th century, Roscrea was annexed to Killaloe, and Kilfenora has been held with it. Confort and Kilmaduchan were added in 1836.

* Enacted among other things, "that the alliance of the English by marriage with any Irish, the nurture of infants, and gossiping with the Irish, be deemed high treason. And again, "if any man of English race use an Irish woman in lechery, or any other gentle or fashion of the Irish, his lands shall be seized, and he body imprisoned, till he shall conform to English modes and customs; said never to have been enforced. It abolished the Brehon laws.

KILLIECRANKIE (a defile in Perthshire). Here the forces of William III. commanded by general Mackay were defeated by the adherents of James II. under Graham of Claverhouse, viscount Dundee, who fell in the moment of victory, 27 July, 1689.

KILMALDACH (Galway). This see was held with Clonfert, from 1202. St. Coleman was its first bishop, in the 7th century. It was valued, 20 Eliz. 1586, at 13l. 6s. 8d. per annum. It is united to Killaloe.

KILMAINHAM HOSPITAL (Dublin), the public asylum of aged and disabled soldiers in Ireland, built by Wren, was founded by Arthur, earl of Granard, marshal-general of the army in Ireland, 1675; and the duke of Ormond perfected the plan in 1679.

The term Treaty of Kilmainham was applied to an alleged agreement between Mr. Gladstone's government and Mr. Parnell and other land-beggars imprisoned in the Kilmainham gaol on 13 Oct. 1881. The government is said to have entered into a negotiation with them while they were there, May 1872. See Mr. J. Morley's "Life of Gladstone," 1873.

KILMALLOCH (Limerick). An abbey was founded here by St. Machado or Molach about 643; and an abbey of Dominicans was built in the 13th century. Haere. A charter was granted to Kilmallock by Edward VI., and another by Elizabeth in 1583. The town was invested by the Irish forces in 1584, but the siege was raised by the earl of Ormond. There was much fighting here in 1641 and 1642; see Fenian, March, 1867.

KILMORE (Armagh), an ancient town, whose bishops were sometimes called lieutenants, from Britney, and sometimes Triburmes, from Triburna, a village; but in 1855, the bishop of Triburna, by assent of pope Nicholas V., erected the parish church of St. Fedemid into a cathedral. Florence O'Connolly, the first bishop, died in 1231. Valued, 15 Jas. 1, with Ardagh, at 100l. per annum. The see of Elphin and Ardagh was united to it in 1841.

KILSYTH (central Scotland). Here Montrose defeated the Covenanters, 15 Aug. 1645, and threatened Glasgow.

KIMBERLEY, see under Griqualand. Kimberley's Act, see under Crime.

KIMMERIDGE CLAY. Rev. H. Montg announced his successful use of this clay for fuel and gas-making, March, 1874; practicability doubted.

KINDBURN, a fort, at the confluence of the rivers Bog and Deipper. Here Suarrow defeated the Turks, 28 June, 1758. Kinburn was taken by the English and French, 17 Oct. 1855. Three flouting French batteries, said to be the invention of the emperor, on the principle of horizontal shelling, were very effective. On the 18th the Russians blew up Ozakofu, a fort opposite.

KINCHAI, BATTLE OF, 27 May, 1904, see Russo-Japanese war.

KINDER-GARTEN (children's garden), a system of education devised by Froebel, but practically carried out by Mr. and Mrs. Ronge, in Germany, in 1839, and in England in 1851. The system, founded mainly on self-tuition, and enlightened by toys, games, and singing, is set forth in Ronge's "Kinder-garten," published in 1858; and has been largely adopted in English schools. The Frebel Society established 1874.

KINDRED, Table of, in the Book of Common Prayer, was set forth in 1593; see Lectionary, chap. xviii., R.C. 1490.

KINEMATICS (Greek kineo, I move), the science of motion. "Kinematism" is a method of treating certain diseases by movement. See Motion.

KINEMATOGRAPH or CINEMATO-

GRAPH, a machine invented by Mr. Thomas A. Edison, combining electricity with photography, by means of which the movements of the actors in a scene at the theatre (accompanied by their voices and the music) are reproduced upon a screen. The kinemagraph was described by Mr. Edison at New York 28 May, and in the press, 29 May, 1891; see Paris, 4 May, 1897.

KINETOSCOPE. An apparatus invented by Mr. Edison, for the continuous photography of objects in motion: the first series of photographs were of the strong man Sandow, reported, New York, 7 March, 1894.

By the theatrescope, invented by Mr. Rohl, W. Paul, kinetoscopic pictures projected on a full-sized lantern screen, were exhibited at the Royal Institute, 22 Feb. 1896. A ship in motion, with spectators walking on the shore, and other scenes were represented.

KING. German Kino, equivalent in meaning to the Latin Rex, Scythian Reis, Spanish Rey, Italian Re, French Roi, Hebrew Rosch. Rex is thought to be connected with the Hindu raja, derived from the Sanscrit roga, the root of which is args, argam, to possess. Rex therefore means possessor. Nimrod was the traditional first founder of a kingdom, about 2245 B.C. The "manner of the king" is set forth in 1 Samuel viii., 1112 B.C. Saul was the first king of Israel, 1005 B.C. Most of the Grecian states were originally governed by kings; and kings were the first rulers in Rome.

KING OF ENGLAND.—The style was used by Robert, 188; but the title Rex gentis Anglorum, king of the English nation, existed during the Heptarchy, see Britains. The plural phraseology, we, us, our, was first adopted among English kings by John . . . 1199
Pope Leo X. conferred the title of "Defender of the Faith" on Henry VIII. 1521
Henry VIII. changed law of Ireland into king 1542
That of the "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" at the union, when the royal style and title was appointed to run thus:—"Georgius Tertiis, in Gubernatione Regni, Fidei Defender," "George the Third, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, Defender of the Faith" (France being omitted) . . . 1 Jan. 1810
Hanover omitted in queen Victoria's style 21 June, 1837 Queen Victoria was proclaimed in all the important places in India, as "Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Indian and of the British dominions beyond the seas, king, defender of the Faith, emperor of India, proclaimed 1 Nov. 1851

The emperors of Germany, in order that their eldest sons might be chosen their successors in their own lifetime, politically obtained the title of "Empor of the German. The first emperor so elected was Henry IV . . . 1806
Richard, brother of Henry III. of England, was induced to go to Germany, where he disbursted vast sums under the promise of being elected next emperor; he was elected "king of the Romans" (but failed in succeeding to the imperial crown) . . . 1829
The title of "king of France" assumed, and the French arms quartered, by Edward III., in right of his mother, 1340; discontinued by Geo. III . . . 1807
The style "king of Rome" was revived by Napoleon I. for his son, born 20 March, 1811
The title "king of Italy" conferred on Victor Emmanuel II. of Sardinia by Italian parliament 17 March, 1861.
Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria assumes the title of king . . . 25 Oct. 1881

KING EDWARD'S HOSPITAL FUND, see Hospitals.

KING EDWARD'S SCHOOL, Birmingham, founded 1552; reorganised, 1878; comprises a high school for boys and a high school for girls; three grammar schools for boys, and four grammar schools for girls. Foundation freed from the control of the Endowment Commission by the Birmingham (King Edw. VI.) Schools Act, 1899.

KING-OF-ARMS: three for England,—Garter, Clarenceux, and Norroy. 14-papering-at-arms for Scotland, and Ulster for Ireland. These offices are very ancient: Clarenceux is so named from Lanvel, third son of Edward III., the sovereign who founded the order of the Garter; see Garter. Lionel having by his wife the honour of Clare, was made duke of Clarence; which dukedom afterwards deceasing to Edward IV., he revived the office of Clarence king-of-arms. The office of Bath king-of-arms, created in 1725, was changed to Gloucester king-of-arms, 14 June, 1726. Ulster was substituted, it is said, in lieu of Ireland king-of-arms, by Edward VI., 1553; but the monarch himself named it as a new institution.

KING'S ADVOCATE, a title of the Lord Advocate for Scotland. First appointed by James III. about 1480. King's Advocate was first entitled Lord Advocate in 1568. See under Advocate.

KING'S BENCH, or QUEEN'S BENCH, COURT OF, obtained its name from the king sometimes sitting here on a high bench, and the judges, to whom the jurisdiction belongs in his absence, on a low bench at his feet. This court in ancient times was called Curia Regis Reis. The court of queen's bench sat for the last time, July, 1875 (see Supreme Court). Chief justice Cockburn received the freedom of London, 9 March, 1870; said to be the first of his kind. The Queen's Bench Division of the high court of justice till 1883 consisted of the chief justice of England and four judges. The chief justice of the king's bench division is now chief justice of England; the exchequer and common plea division were abolished in 1881.
KING'S BENCH PRISON.

in 1802 "for discontinuing the queen's prison and removal of the prisoners to Whitecross-street prison." The buildings, used as a military prison, were pulled down and the site sold, 1879-80.

KING'S BOOK, or "Valor Ecclesiastici temp. Henrici VIII," the return of the commissioners appointed in 1534 to value the first fruits and tenths granted to the king.

KING'S BOUNTY, an annual grant of 1000l. for the Maunday royal alms distributed by the lord high almoner, began early in the reign of George III, and continued till 10 George IV, 1829. See Maunday.

KING'S COLLEGES, see Aberdeen and Cambridge. King's College, London, incorporated 14 Aug. 1829, and opened 8 Oct. 1831. It was incorporated with the university of London in 1837. The hospital was founded in 1839. The dining-hall and kitchen fell in, through drainage, 5 a.m., 6 Dec. 1869; no lives were lost. In consequence of the width of the walls of the professorial buildings, the council of the college issues an appeal to the public for additional funds (50,000l.), 24 Jan. 1891: new buildings of the school at Wimbledon opened by the duke of Cambridge, 6 July, 1894. The Christian Knowledge Society votes 5000l. payable in instalments, 4 Dec. 1891. The government annual grant of 1700l. was restored, irrespective of tests, 1 April, 1896. New laboratories opened by lord Lister, 30 Oct. 1900. The council passes a resolution (22-2) abolishing religious tests, theology excepted, 13 June, 1902; an appeal for endowment issued at a meeting, 10 Nov. 1902. Rev. A. C. Headlam, principal (April 1903), in succession to Dr. Robertson, consecrated bp. of Exeter. Department for Women is conducted in Kennington-square: certificates of proficiency are granted on passing the examinations. These are also in connection with King's College, Evening Classes in each faculty: certificates are granted to successful students. The Civil Service Department prepares students for the army and other civil services and other examinations, and for commercial life.

KING'S COUNTRY, (Ireland), formed out of confined property, and so named from Philip, king of Spain, the husband of queen Mary of England, in 1539.

KING'S CROSS MARKET, N. London, opened 7 Aug. 1808; did not succeed.

KINGSDOWN'S ACT, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 114 (1851), relates to wills.

KING'S EVIL (serofita), formerly supposed to be cured by the king's touch; the first being Edward the Confessor, in 1068. In the reign of Charles II. 92107 persons were touched; and, according to Wiseman, the king's physician, they were nearly all cured! Queen Anne officially an-announced in the London Gazette, 12 March, 1712, her intention to touch publicly. The custom was dropped by George I., 1714.

KING'S LYNN, see Lynn Regis.

KING'S PROCTOR, the name formerly given to a class of practitioners in the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical courts. The king's proctor is the official, now the solicitor to the treasury, who intervenes to oppose a petition for divorce if collusion or fraud are suspected.

KING'S REMEMBRANCER, see Exchequer, Court of.

KING'S SPEECH. The first from the throne is said to have been by Henry I., 1107.

KING'S THEATRE, see Opera-house.

KINGSTON, see Hull.—KINGSTON, Jamaica, was founded in 1655, after the great earthquake in 1692 which destroyed Port Royal; it was constituted a city, 1802. An awful fire here ravaged a vast portion of the town, and consumed 50,000 people on 8 Feb., 1782. Another fire in 1843; another great fire; town nearly destroyed; estimated loss about 3,000,000l., 5 deaths announced, 11 Dec. 1882. See Mansion House. The bishopric was established in 1850. The city destroyed by an earthquake, 14 Jan., 1917; see Jamaica.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES, Surrey, a municipal borough 12 miles from London. The town is of ancient origin and figures conspicuously in English history. Here was held the great council convened by Egbert, king of Wessex, and his son Ethelbert, 888. The coronation stone still standing near the market place records the crowning of seven of the Anglo-Saxon kings, from Edward the Elder to Ethelred II. King John granted a charter to the town, which he frequently visited, 1204-1215. King-ton-castle, now demolished, was taken by Hen. III. in 1245 during the civil war with Simon de Montfort. The town in 1647 was the headquarters of Fairfax in the civil war, 1642-1660. Gay's "Kitty," duchess of Queensberry, resided in the neighbourhood at Ham Common. The parish church contains some fine monuments; William Caxo the historian was once the rector. County council buildings were erected at the cost of 50,000l. in 1898. Population 1801, 4,438; 1841, 3,735; 1911 (est.), 3,812.

KINGSTON TRIAL. The duchess of Kingston was arraigned before the lords in Westminster-hall, on a charge of bigamy, having married first, capt. Herve, earl of Bristol, and next, during his lifetime, Evelyn Povepoint, duke of Kingston, 15-22 April, 1696. She was found guilty, but, on pleading the privilege of peerage, the punishment of burning in the hand was remitted, and she was discharged on paying the fees.

KINGSTOWN (Dublin). The harbour here was commenced in June, 1817. The name was changed from Dunberry in compliment to George IV., who here embarked for England at the close of his visit to Ireland, 3 Sept. 1821. Kingston railway from Dublin opened 17 Dec. 1834.

KNUTSFORD.

Cheshire. The foundation stone of St. Paul's college for the northern counties here was laid, 23 Sept. 1873.

FEMALE KNIGHTS. It is said that the first were the women who preserved Tortosa from the Moors in 1140, by their stout resistance. Large immunities were granted to the women and the descendants. Several female orders appear in the preceding list. Ladies have been admitted to several male orders.

KNIGHTS OF GLYN and KERRY in IRELAND. The heads of two branches of the family of Fitzmaurice, who still enjoy the distinctions bestowed on their ancestors by sovereigns in the 13th century. The 19th knight of Kerry died 6th Aug. 1869.

KNIGHTS OF THE SMITH, or of PARLIAMENT; summoned by the king's writ and chosen by the freetholders, first summoned by Simon de Montfort, in 1265, and in a more formal manner, 20 Jan. 1266. There are writs extant as far back as 1 Edward I, 1276. The knights are still girded with a sword when elected, as the writ prescribes.

KNIGHTS OF LABOUR. A large secret trade union in the United States, said to have been originated by a man named Uriah Stephens in Philadelphia in 1866, for protection of workmen against capitalists. They were energetic in the promotion of railway and other strikes, especially in Missouri in March, 1866. Headquarters at Philadelphia, number about 400,000, May, 1866. The society is condemned by the pope. Decline of the order reported Aug., 1888; active in Aug., 1876. Knights of Industry active in regard to strikes, 1863.

KNIVES. In England, Hallamshire (the country round Sheffield) has been renowned for its cutlery for five centuries; Chaucer speaks of the "Sheffield thistle." T. Hughes says that Richard Mathews on the Fleet-bridge was the first Englishman who made fine knives, &c.; and that he obtained a prohibition of foreign ones, 1563. Clasp or spring knives became common about 1650; coming originally from Flanders. — Knife-cutting machines were patented by Mr. George Kerr, in 1844 and 1852; others have been invented, by Masters, Price, &c.; see Forks.

KNOW-NOTHINGS, a society which arose in 1854, in the United States of N. America. Their principles were embodied in the following propositions (at New York, 1855).

1. The Americans shall rule America.
2. The Union of these States.
3. No North, no South, no East, no West.
4. The United States of America—as they are—one and inseparable.
5. No sectarian interferences in our legislation or in the administration of American law.
6. Hostility to the assumption of the pope, through the bishops, &c., in a republic sanctified by Protestant blood.
7. Thorough reform in the naturalisation laws.
8. Free and liberal educational institutions for all sects and classes, with the Bible, God's holy word, as a universal text-book.

A society was formed in 1855 in opposition to the above, called Knighthood of All People. Both bodies were absorbed into the two parties, Democrats and Republicans, at the presidential election in Nov. 1856.

KOH-I-NOOR, or "Mountain of Light," the East India diamond; see Diamonds.

KOLA, a West African nut, from which is obtained, by grinding, a stimulating and sustaining drug, much used by the natives in long journeys, enabling them to endure thirst and hunger. Kola nuts are much prized in the Soudan, the presentation of some of these nuts being esteemed a special honour. Known to traders since the 17th century. Dr. Daniell in 1805 discovered that the nuts contained an alkaloid identical with that found in tea. Caffé, maté and guanima. Called also Guru nut.

KOLIN or KOLIN (Bohemia). Here the Austrian general Daun gained a signal victory over Frederick the Great of Prussia, 18 June, 1757. In commemoration, the military order of Maria Theresa was instituted by the empress-queen.

KOLN, see Cologne.

KOMORN or COMORN (Hungary), an ancient fortress town, often taken and retaken during the wars with Turkey. Near it the Hungarians, under gen. Klappka, defeated the Austrians, 11 July, 1849, but surrendered the town 1 Oct.

KONIEH (formerly Leontium). Here the Turkish army was defeated by the pasha of Egypt, after a long sanguinary fight, 21 Dec. 1832.

KONIGGRATZ (Bohemia). Near here was fought the decisive battle between the Austrians commanded by marshal Benedek, and the Prussians commanded by their king William I., 3 July, 1866. Prince Frederick Charles halted at Kamminew on Monday, 2 July, his troops commenced their march at midnight, and the first shot was fired about 7:30 a.m. 3 July. The attack began at Sadowa (after which the battle is also named) about 6 o'clock, and a desperate struggle ensued, the result appearing uncertain, till the army of the crown prince of Prussia arrived about 12:30. When Chlam, who had been taken and lost seven times by the Prussians, was taken for the eighth time, the fate of the day was decided, and the retreat of the Austrians, at first orderly, became a hasty disastrous flight. About 40,000 men were engaged in this battle, one of the greatest in modern times. The Austrians are said to have lost 174 guns, about 40,000 killed and wounded, and 20,000 prisoners. The Prussians lost about 10,000 men. The victory gave the supremacy in Germany to Prussia, unity to North Germany, and Venetia to Italy; and led to the legislative independence of Hungary.

KONIGSBERG, the capital of east Prussia, was founded by the Teutonic knights in 1255, and became the residence of the grand master in 1357. It joined the Hanseatic league in 1355. University founded, 1544. It was ceded to the elector of Brandenburg in 1577, and here Frederick III. was crowned the first king of Prussia in 1581. It was held by the Russians 1758-64, and by the French in 1807. Here king William I. and his queen were crowned, 18 Oct. 1867; his monument unveiled by the emperor, 2 Sept.; the emperor at a banquet ensures the nobles for opposing his plans, promises additional grants to the provinces, and declares that he gives the Divine right, 6 Sept. 1869. Population, in 1816, 117,847; in 1840, 221,070. Koningens-berg, etc. Germany, 25 July, 1874.

KONIGSTEIN TUN (Nassau, Germany), most opulent, was built by Frederick Augustus, king of Poland, in 1725. It was made to hold 233,467 gallons of wine; and on the top, which was walled in, was accommodation for twenty persons to regale themselves. The famous tun of St. Bernard's was said to hold 800 tons; see Heidelberg Tun.

KOOKAS, a warlike reforming sect in N.W. India, founded by Bahad Ram about 1815, and after his death, about 1855, headed by Ram Singh, who preached the restoration of the old Sikh religion, which venerated cattle and punished their slaughterer. After several outrages against the Mahometans, an outbreak of the Kookas took place near Loodiania, which was rigorously suppressed, 15 Jan. 1872, by commissioner Cowan, who ordered 40 prisoners to be blown from cannon, 17 Jan. Several others were tried and executed by commissioner Forsyth soon after. For this severity Mr. Cowan was ordered to be dismissed, and Mr. Forsyth removed to another station, April, 1872. The Kooka leaders claim 800,000 followers; but the probable number is about one-twelfth.

KORAN or ALCORAN (AL KURAN), the sacred book of the Mahometans, was written about 610, by Mahomet (who asserted that it had been revealed to him by the angel Gabriel, thirty years), and published by Abu-bekr about 635. Its general aim was to unite the professors of idolatry and the Jews and Christians in the worship of one God (whose unity was the chief point inculcated), under certain laws and ceremonies, exacting obedience to Mahomet as the prophet. The leading article of faith preached is compounded of an eternal truth and a necessary fiction, namely, that there is only one God, and that Mahomet is the apostle of God. Gibbon. The Koran was translated into Latin in 1413, into French, 1647; into English by Sale, 1734; and into other European languages, 1763 et seq. It is a rhapsody of 6600 verses, divided into 114 sections; see Mahometanism, &c.

KOREISH, an Arab tribe which had the charge of the Caaba, or shrine of the sacred stone of Mecca, and strenuously opposed the pretensions of Mahomet. It was defeated by him and his adherents, 623-30.

KOSSOVA, see Cossova.

KOSSUTA AFFAIR. Martin Koszta, a Hungarian refugee, when in the United States in 1850, declared his intention of becoming an American citizen, and went through the preliminary forms. In 1853 he visited Smyrna, and on 21 June was seized by a boat's crew of the Austrian brig Hussar. By direction of the American minister at Constantinople, captain Ingerham, of the American sloop St. Louis, demanded his release; but having heard that the prisoner was to be clandestinely transported to Trieste, he demanded his surrender by a certain time, and prepared to attack the Austrian vessel on 2 July. Koszta was then given up. On 1 Aug., the Austrian government protested against these proceedings in a circular addressed to the European courts, but eventually a compromise was effected, and Koszta returned to the United States.

KOYUNJIK, the site of the ancient Nineveh (which see).

KRAAL, a Dutch name for a South African village. See Zululand. Women visitors excluded from the Kaffir kraal in the Savage South African exhibition, Earl's Court (opened May, 1891), 28 Aug.; the action upheld by Mr. Justice Cozens-Hardy, 8 Sept. 1891.
KRAO, a hair female Burmese child exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, Jan. 1883; thought incorrectly by some to be a specimen of the missing link between man and the anthropoid apes.

KRASNOI (central Russia). Here the French defeated the Russians, 15 Aug. 1812; and here they were themselves defeated after a series of conflicts, 14-18 Nov. following.

KREMLIN, a palace at Moscow, built by Demetri, grand-duc of Russia, about 1367. It was burnt down in Sept. 1812, and rebuilt in 1816; partly burnt about 23 July, 1879.

KRIEGSPIEL, see War Game.

KROMSCHRÖDER GAS, a hydro-carbon (air saturated with petroleum spirit), was tried in May, 1873, at Great Marlow, for street lighting, and reported successful.

KROUMIRS, see Tunis.

KRUPE'S CAST STEEL Factory, see Essen.

KRYPTON, a new gas discovered by prof. Ramsay by means of the spectroscope, reported 6 June, and exhibited at the Royal society, 8 June, 1898.

KU KUX KLAN, the name of a secret society in the southern states of the Union, principally in Tennessee in North America, bitterly opposed to the ruling men. Early in 1868, this society issued lists of proscribed persons, who, if they did not quit the country after warning, became liable to assassination. General Grant endeavoured to suppress this society in April. Its repression by the militia in Arkansas was ordered Nov. 1868, and it became the subject of legislation at Washington, June, 1871.

KULDIJA, a revolted province of China, was seized by Russia in 1871, and restored by treaty in 1879.

KULTUR-KAMPF, the conflict in Prussia respecting worship; see Prussia, 1873 seq.

KUNERSDORF, BATTLE OF, see Cunnersdorf.

KUNOBITZA, in the Balkan. Here John Hunniades, the Hungarian, defeated the Turks, 24 Dec. 1443.

KURDISTAN, Western Asia (the ancient Assyria), subject partly to Turkey and Persia. In Oct. 1880, the Kurds, warlike and agricultural tribes, nominal Mahometans, invaded and ravaged Persia, and were subdued after fierce conflicts with their chief, Obeid-ullah, a Turkish sheikh, Nov.-Dec. 1880. In 1881 he went to Constantinople and was well received, but kept in a kind of honourable restraint, Sept. 1881. In Sept. 1882 he escaped to Kurdistan and incited the Kurds to revolt against Persia; captured by the Turks; rescued by his son, Nov. 1882; said to have died at Mecca in 1883. See Armenia, 1892 seq.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, see Maimind.

KUSTRIN or CUSTRIN (Prussia), a fortified town, besieged and burnt by the Russians, 22 Aug. 1758; taken by the French in 1806; given up, 1814.

KYOTO, KIOTO or MIANO, for over 1,000 years the capital of Japan, with many fine Buddhist temples, lies about 26 miles inland from Osaka. The singing girls of this city are famed for their graceful dances; and the pottery, porcelain, brocades, enamels, bronze work, &c., are greatly admired. Visit of prince Arthur of Connaught, who witnessed a display of jiyutsu. 8 Mar. 1906.

KYRLE SOCIETY (named after John Kyrle, who died 1724, exiled to Pope as the Man of Ross), started by Misses Miranda and Octavia Hill in 1875, and founded in 1877 by prince Leopold, princess Louise, the duke of Westminster, and others, with the object of "bringing beauty home to the people," by means of decorative art, gardening, music, literature, &c. First public meeting held 27 Jan. 1881.
LABORATORY. The Royal Institution laboratory, the first of any importance in London, was established in 1802, and rebuilt, 1872. In it were made the discoveries of Davy, Faraday, Tyndall, Frankland, Dewar, and Rayleigh; see Royal Institution. The Royal Laboratory, Woolwich Arsenal, was reorganised in 1855. First state laboratory to detect adulteration in commerce, etc., near King's college hospital, 36 rooms, erected under Sir John Taylor of the office of works, reported 5 Oct. 1857; see Chemical.

LABOUR COLONIES, see Unemployed.

LABOUR COMMISSION. The relations between capital and labour having been greatly disturbed in recent years, especially since 1888, leading to many strikes, the government were induced to appoint a royal commission "to inquire into the relations between employers and employed, and to report whether legislation can with advantage be directed to remedy any evils that may be disclosed, etc."

At 14:2 the persons nominated, 13 April, 1891, were the following: the marquess of Hartington (duke of Devonshire), sir Robert Peel, the earl of Derby, sir M. Hicks-Beach, Mr. Mundella, Mr. Courtney, Mr. Jesse Collings, Mr. Burt, sir F. Peacock, Mr. Tom Mann, Mr. Plimsoll, with special chairman of public companies and employers of labour. Secretaries: Mr. John Barnett and Mr. Geoffrey Edge. Miss Orme, Miss Abra, Misses, Miss Cole, and Miss Irwin were appointed to subcommittees. March, 1892. First meeting, the marquess of Hartington in the chair. April, 1892. The first report laid before parliament. 1 May, 1891. Motion was carried, 1 May, 1891. Evidence closed, 1 Feb. 1892. Adjournment, see din. 14 Feb. 1892. The report of the 1st. report, issued 21 April, 1892, is the result of the study of the abundant evidence. The recommendations are negative or conditional in regard to legislation respecting the terms of labour and the settlement of disputes by means other than arbitration.

LABOUR QUESTION. The relations between capital and labour have been much discussed in recent years. See Germany, 1889-91; Berlin, Munich, Trades, Union, Shopping, Gas Light, Washington, Labour Day, 1 May, 1887-5, United States, 1 Sep. 1887-5, Unemployed.

Labuan was given up to the Borneo company in 1898. By a proclamation dated 30 Oct. 1906, the boundaries of the colony of Singapore were extended to as to include the colony of Labuan, with effect from 1 Jan. 1907. Labuan has been incorporated for administratively purposes in the settlement of Singapore. Population of Labuan, 1910 (est.), 9,230. See Singapore and Borneo.

LABURNUM. Cytisus Laburnum, called also the golden chain, was brought to these countries from Hungary, Austria, &c., about 1576. Ash.

LABYRINTHS. Four are mentioned: the first, said to have been built by Daedalus, in the island of Crete, to secure the Minotaur; the second, of Arcinia, in Egypt, in the isle of Meris, by Psannicus, king of that place, about 665 B.C.; the third, at Lemnos, remarkable for its sumptuous pillars, which seems to have been a stelae-like grove; and the fourth, at Clusum, in Italy, erected by Perseus, king of Etruria, about 520 B.C. Pliny. The labyrinth of Woodstock is connected with the story of Fair Rosamond; see Rosamond. The Maze at Hampton Court was formed by William III. in the 17th century.

LAC, see Lakh.

LACE is said to have been made in the 14th century in France and Flanders. Its importation into England was prohibited in 1483; but it was used in the court costume of Elizabeth's reign. Dresden, Valenciennes, Mechlin, and Bruges have long been famous for their fine lace. An accurate statement as to the weight of Flanders thread has been frequently sold for four pounds in London; and its value, when manufactured, has been increased to forty pounds, ten times the price of standard gold. A framework knitter of Nottingham, named Hammond, is said to have invented a model of applying his stockinet-frame to the manufacture of lace from studying the lace on his wife's cap, about 1758. Maceloch. So many improvements have been made in this manufacture, particularly by Heathcote (1800, 1817, &c.), Morley and Leaver (1811, &c.), that a piece of lace which about 1800 cost 17s. 4d. may now be had for 7s. (1853). Grev. The process of "gasiing," by which cotton lace is said to be made equal to fine linen lace, was invented by Samuel Hall of Lasford, near Nottingham. He died in Nov. 1802. Irish lace exhibition at the Mansion House, London, 25 June-7 July, 1883. Scheme for encouraging the Irish lace manufacture supported by the government, June, 1884.

LACED-EMON or LACONIA (Tekauaitn), see Sparta.

LA CROUSE. Originally a game played by the Canadian Indians, it was adopted successively by the French and English settlers, and introduced into the United States and Great Britain. The game is played with an indiarubber ball, 8 or 9 in. in circumference, and a long stick, 5 or 6 ft. in length, curved at the top like a bishop's crook (crosse, whence the name), across which strings of deer-skin are stretched diagonally forming a net. The object of the game is to throw the ball through goals situated at each end of the field. The players are usually 12 a side. The rules of the game were systematized by Dr. Beers in 1860. In 1867 the La Crosse Association of Canada was founded, and an Indian team visited Great Britain. The principal associations in Great Britain are the North of England Association, formed 1880, and the South of England Association, 1882, and the English Union, 1892, which governs all international matters, including the laws of the game.

LACTEALS (absorbent vessels connected with digestion), were discovered in a dog by James Aschlin of Cremona, 1622, and their termination in the thoracic duct by Perquet, 1651; see Lymphatics.

LADIES NATIONAL AID ASSOCIATION, formed to contribute to the relief of the sick and wounded in the Sudan and Egypt. Organized by the duchesses of Buccleuch, St. Albans, and Marlborough, the marchioness of Salisbury and others, Feb. 1885.

LADOCEA, in Arcadia. Here Cleomenes III. king of Sparta, defeated the Athenian league, 220 B.C.

LADRONES ISLES (N. Pacific), belonging to Spain, discovered by Magellan in 1520. He first touched at the island of Guam. The natives having stolen some of his goods, he named the islands the Ladrone, or Thieves. In the 17th century they obtained the name of Marianna islands from the queen of Spain. See Spanish-American War.

LADY. The masters and mistresses of manor-houses, in former times, served out bread to the poor weekly; and were therefore called Ladrons and Le- days—signifying bread givers (from lief, a loaf); hence Lords and Ladies. Wedgwood considers this fanciful, and derives the words from the Anglosaxon, ladorfe, a lord; and lade, a loaf. (March 25), a festival instituted about 1520, according to some authorities, and not before the 7th century according to others; see Annunciation. The year, which previously began on this day, was ordered to begin on Jan. 1, in France in 1894; and in Scotland, by the Colonial Office, on the 17th Dec., 1893, not in Eng-LAND. About 18th August, 1899, great flights of these insects alighted on the S.E. coasts of England, and arrived as far as London; a similar event occurred in 1897.

LADYSMITH, a town in Natal, about 60 miles by rail N.W., Pietermaritzburg. It derives its name from the wife of a former governor. It came into prominent notice 1899-1900, during the South African war, when Ladysmith was isolated and invested by the Boers (Nov. 1899). Gen. Sir George White and his forces, and the naval brigade under Capt. (now Rear-Admiral) Latham, whose naval guns rendered great service, were shut up (but making gallant sorties during the interval) until relieved, 28 Feb. 1900, by the Natal Carbineers and Imperial horse, under Lord Durnford, see South Africa War. Visited by Mr. Chamberlain during his tour in S. Africa, Jan. 1901. The partial evacuation of the town by sudden and extraordinary rising of the Klip river, 22 Jan. 1901.

LAPFELDT, Holland. Here marshal Saxe defeated the English, Dutch, and Austrians, 2 July, 1747.

LAGOS, an island in the Bight of Benin (Africa), was assaulted and taken by the boats of a British squadron, under commodore Bruce, 26, 27 Dec. 1831. This affair arose out of breaches of a treaty for the suppression of the slave-trade. In 1840, the place was ceded to the British government, and treated as a settlement: Henry Stanhope Freeman, first governor. Lagos was constituted a distinct colony in 1855, comprising several native kingdoms. Area of island 4 square miles, protectorate 26,700 square miles. Population, 1901 (est.), 45,189, Island, 41,000; protectorate 1,165,000. See Gold Coast Colony.

Treaty with the king of Jen securing freedom of trade signed at Lagos by delegates from Jen, 26 Jan. 1852. The Jen and Egba tribes are free at Lagos and the Gold Coast; checked by the arrival of troops under major Dudden and col. Scott, April; the Jen tribes resided in the island, before the Colonists' expedition, and their villages taken, 12 May 1869. Total defeat of the Jen, surrender of the king, Jen tele-occupied, army dispersed, 17-20 May. Absolute, the Egba capital, visited by sir T. Carter, reported, 12 June 1863. Colonial treaty with the Egbas, about Feb., confirmed, 15 Aug. 1863. Treaty of the governor with the chiefs at Jen Benin to abolish human sacrifice, 23 Dec. 1852, &c., 4 Nov. 1864. Destructive effects of the increased importation of cheap cotton cloths reported, 1855.

Native rising in the Hunteiland, Capt. Bowes deteats the king of Youba, and bombards Jen, 12 Nov. 1897; the king murdered, about 3 Nov. 1897. Bombs attack the British, and are repulsed, at March, 1897; defeated again with loss at Oku Ini, April; totally defeated, then chief Adam, killed in flight, early March, 1897. Great local meeting of chiefs and natives, 31 Jan. Various posts on the N.E. frontier occupied by the British; the French retire to Bosassa, a British force mistakes for French is attacked by Batuts, who are repelled (about 300 killed by Capt. Honfey) reported, 31 Dec. 1898. LAKE DWELLINGS, contain relics of the stone, iron, and bronze ages. Herodotus (about 450 B.C.) described the Preonians as living on platforms in Lake Prakas. In 1853, Dr. Keller discovered the remains of lake habitations which had been supported on piles of wood in several ages ago. His book was published in England in 1866. Similar relics discovered in lake Constance, March, 1862; they have also been discovered in Britain and various parts of Europe, Africa, and South America; they are now considered to be evidence of a step in human progress. The artificial fortified islands termed "Crommages" discovered in some Irish lakes are attributed to the 9th and 10th centuries. They LANCASTER.

LAMIAN WAR, 323 B.C. (excited by Demosthenes, the orator), between Athens and her allies and Antipater, governor of Macedon. Antipater fled to Lamia, in Thessaly, and there besieged. He escaped thence and defeated his adversaries at Cranon, 322 B.C.

LAMMAS-DAY, the 1st of August, one of our four cross-quarter-days of the year. Whitsun tide was the first, Lammas the second, Martinmas the third, and Candlemas the last; and such portion of the year was once equally common with the present divisions of Ladyday, Midsummer, Michaelmas, and Christmas. Some rents are yet payable at each of these quarterly days in England, and very generally in Scotland. Lammas probably comes from the Saxon hlaumdesse, loaf mass, because formerly upon that day our ancestors offered bread made of new wheat. Anciently, those tenants that held lands of the cathedral church of York were by tenure to bring a lamb alive into church at high mass.

LAMPEATER COLLEGE (Cardiganshire), was founded by bishop Burgess in 1822, and incorporated 1828.

LAMPS. The earthen lamp of Epictetus the philosopher sold after his death for 3000 drachmas. Lamps with horn sides said to be the invention of Alfred. London streets were first lighted with oil-lamps in 1681, and with gas-lamps in 1814. A lamp "constructed to produce neither smoke nor smell, and to give considerably more light than any lamp hitherto known," was patented by M. Aimé Argand in 1784, and was brought into general use in England early in the nineteenth century. On his principle are founded the lamps invented by Carell about 1803, and since 1825, the moderator lamps of Levassoure, Hadrot, and Neuhazer. See Safety Lamp. Paradin oil and naphtha spirit are now much used in lamps. The Water Safety Lamp invented by Mr. Dovell was tried and approved 2 June, 1890. The flame is extinguished by the water if the lamp is overturned. The Kitson oil lamp, in which petroleum is burnt as gas, used successfully in Portland-place, May, 1901. See Petroleum. Dr. Kostin's invention for the automatic lighting and extinguishing of gas lamps successfully tried end Jan., 1908.

LANARK (W. Scotland), was a Roman station, and made a royal burgh 1103.

LANCASHIRE, was created a county palatine by Edward III, for his son John of Gaunt, who had married the daughter of Henry first duke of Lancaster, in 1359, and succeeded him in 1362. The court of the duchy chamber of Lancaster was instituted in 1376. On the accession of Henry IV. in 1399 the duchy merged into the crown. Net revenue to queen Victoria in 1888, 30,000£.; total receipts, 86,287£.; total receipts in 1893, 81,747£.; net revenue, 13,460£.; total receipts 102,753£.; net revenue, 12,410£. Revenue in 1913, 105,776£.; 1914, 103,147£.; 1916, 103,488£.; 1918, 102,772£.; 1919, 103,220£. For chancellors, see Grey and other administrations. See County.

LANCASTER, supposed to have been the Abbatium of the Prior and convent of Lancaster was granted by William I. or II, to Roger de Poitou, who erected a castle upon its hill. It was taken by the Jacobites, Nov. 17, and Nov. 17, 1745. It was LANDWEHR. (German, land-defence.) A force so named was raised in Austria in 1806, and in Prussia in 1813, against the French. This force, the militia of Germany, especially of Prussia, was very effective in the war with Austria in 1806, and in that with France in 1870.

LANGDALE'S ACT. LORD, 7. Will. IV. § 1 Vict. c. 20 (1857), relates to copyrights, &c.

LANGENSALZA (N. Germany). Here the Hanoverian army on its way to join the Bavarians was attacked by the Prussians, who were defeated with the loss of about a thousand killed and wounded, and 912 prisoners, 27 June, 1866. The victory was of little avail, for the Hanoverians were soon surrounded by Fah-kenstein, and compelled to capitulate on honourable terms on 29 June.

LANGOBARDI, see Lombards.

LANGSIDE (S. Scotland), where the forces of the regent of Scotland, the earl of Murray, defeated the army of Mary queen of Scots, 13 May, 1588. Mary fled to England and crossed the Solway Frith, landing at Workington, in Cumberland, 10 May. Soon afterwards she was imprisoned by Elizabeth.

LANGUAGE must either have been revealed originally from heaven, or the fruit of human invention. The latter opinion is embraced by Horace, Lucretius, Cicero, and most of the Greek and Roman writers; the former by the Jews and Christians, and many modern philosophers. Some suppose that Hebrew was the language spoken by Adam; others say that the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Arabic are only dialects of the original tongue. "And the whole earth was of one language and of one speech" (Gen. xi. 1). George I. in 1724, and George II. in 1750, appointed regius professors of modern languages and of history to each of the universities of England.

The original European languages were thirteen, viz. Greek, Latin, German, Slavonic, spoken in the east; Welsh; Biscayan, spoken in Spain; Irish; Albanian, in the mountains of Epirus; Tartarian; the old Hebrew, spoken by the Jewish remainders in Capua; the Chaldee, in the north of Hungary; and the Funic, in east Friesland.

From the Latin sprang the Italian, French, Spanish, and Portuguese.

The Turkish is a mixed dialect of the Tartarian.

From the Tartarian sprang the present German, Danish, Swedish, Norwegian, English, Scotch, &c.

There are 144 known languages, or rather dialects, in the world; of these, 127 are Asiatic; 27 European; 27 African, and 124 American languages and dialects.

Lasting in 1684 and 1687 professor Max Muller lectured on the "Science of Language" at the Royal Institution, London. He divides languages into three families: 1. Indian (Sanskrit, &c.); 2. Northern European (Indo-Frisian, and Fenn.; Sanskrit, dialects of India; Gipsy). 3. French (Farois, Attouchois, &c.).

Northern Division. 1. Celtic (Cymric; Cornish, Welsh, Manx, Scoto-Irish, &c.); 2. Latin, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, French, &c. 1. * Emigrant Linguists—Anax Montanus, editor of the Antwerp Polyglott Bible (1526-58); Sir Wm. Jones (1745-94); Cardinal Giuseppe Mazzei (1747-1832) is said to have known 114 languages or dialects, and to well; in 1787 Neidhart (1822-1831) knew 20 languages in 1837, and more afterwards; Hans Conen von der Gabelentz knew many languages; he died 3 Sept. 1874, aged nearly 67. Solomon Cesar Malan (1827-94), eminent in Oriental languages, see Indian Institute.

Hlyric (Albanian); Helene (Greek, and its dialects); Wende (Lettic; Old Prussian; Slavonic dialects, Behemian, Russian, Polish, Lithuanian, &c.); Tartic (High German, Modern German); Gothic; Anglo-Saxon; Dutch; Frisian; English; Scandinavian; Old Norse, Danish, Swedish, Norwegian, Icelandic.

H. Semitics: 1. Southern Arabic (including Ethiopic and Amharic); Middle Hebrew (Hebrew, Samaritan, Phoenician inscriptions). Northern, Aramaic (Chaldee, Syriac, Cuneiform inscriptions of Babylon and Nineveh).

H. Turanian (from Tur, swiftness). 1. Northern Division. Tungusic (Chinese, &c.); Mongolic; 2. Tartic; Samoyed and Finn; 3. Southern Division. Tair (Siamese, &c.); (Himalayas). Malayic (Polynesia, &c.); Gaugeric; Lusitic (Barbese, &c.); Munda; Tanimul.

Modern Language Association, founded in 1850; first president, prof. Max Muller; annual meetings held.

LANGUE D'OC, see Troubadours.

LANGUEDOC (a province, S. France), formed part of the Roman Gallia Narbonensis; was named Gothia, as having been held by the Visigoths 409, who were expelled by the Saracens, in turn driven out by Charles Martel in the 8th century. In the dark ages the country was called Septimania (probably from its containing seven important towns): afterwards Languedoc (from its dialect, see Troubadours), about 1270, when annexed to the monarchy. It suffered during the persecutions of the Albigenses and Huguenots.

LANDSWOLD, near Bath (Somersetshire). The parliamentary army under sir Wm. Waller was here defeated, 3 July, 1643.

LANTERNS of scraped horn were invented in England, it is said, by Alfred; and it is supposed that horn was used for window lights also, as glass was not generally known, 872-901. Stow. London was lighted by suspended lanterns with glass sides, 1415.

LANTHANUM, a rare metal discovered in the oxide of cerium, by Mosander in 1839.

LAOCOON, an exquisite work of Grecian art, in marble, modelled by Agesander, Athenodorus, and Polydorus, all of Rhodes, and other eminent statuary (about A.D. 70): it represents the death of the Trojan hero, Laocoön, priest of Neptune, and his two sons, as described by Virgil. Æneis, ii. 206. It was discovered in 1506 in the Sette Selle near Rome, and purchased by pope Julius II. It is now in the Vatican.

LAODICEA, see Seven Churches.

LAON (N. France). A succession of actions between the allies (chiefly the Prussians) and the French, was fought under the walls of the town, which ended in the defeat of the latter with great loss, 9-10 March, 1814. Laon surrendered to the Germans 9 Sept. 1870. As the last man of the garde mobile left the citadel, a French soldier, in contravention of the capitulation, blew up the powder magazine, causing great destruction to the town and fortress. The grand-duke William of Mecklenburg-Schwerin was bruised, and 95 German riflemen and 25 French garde mobiles were killed; general Theobald Du Hane, the commander, was wounded. The French attributed the explosion to accident.

LA PEROUSE'S VOYAGE. In 1785 La Perouse sailed from France for the Pacific, with the Boussole and Astrolabie under his command, and was last heard of from Botany Bay, in March, 1788. Several expeditions were subsequently dispatched in search of Peronse; but no certain information was obtained until Captain Dillon, of the East India ship Research, ascertained that the French ships had been cast away on the New Hebrides, authenticated by articles which he brought to Calcutta, 9 April, 1822.

Lapland or Sameland (N. Europe), nominally subject to Norway in the 13th century, and now to Sweden and Russia. Several Laplanders were exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, Nov. 1877.

La plata, the capital of the Argentine province of Buenos Ayres, which see, was founded in 1582. Population in 1882, 65,000; 1910 (est.), 80,000. See Wrecks, 1874.

Larcey, French, larcen; Latin, latrocinium; see Theft.

Larentalia, see Laurentalia.

Largs (Ayrshire, S. Scotland). Here the great expedition of Haco of Norway was finally defeated by Alexander III. after a succession of skirmishes, 3 Oct. 1263.

La rothière (France). Here the French, commanded by Napoléon, defeated the Prussian and Russian armies, with great loss, after a desperate engagement, 1 Feb. 1814.

Laryngoscope, an instrument consisting of a concave mirror, by which light is thrown upon a small plane mirror placed in the cavity of the mouth. By its means the vocal cords of the interior of the larynx, &c., are exhibited, and have been photographed. It was invented by Señor Manuel Garcia, and reported to the Royal Society 21 May, 1855. One constructed by Dr. Turek was greatly modified, in 1857, by Dr. Üzerman, who exhibited its successful action in London in 1862. A similar apparatus is said to have been constructed by Mr. John Avery, a surgeon in London, in 1846. The British Laryngological and Rhinological Association was founded in 1888.

Death of Señor Manuel Garcia, inventor of the laryngoscope, aged 84 (born in Madrid 13 Mar. 1821); 7 July, 1906.

La Salette, see Pilgrimages.

Lateran, a church at Rome, dedicated to St. John, "the mother of all the churches," was originally a palace of the Laterani, a Roman family, and was given to the bishops of Rome by Constantine, and inhabited by them till their removal to the Vatican in 1357.

Lathe. The invention is ascribed to Talus, a grandson of Deucalion, about 1430 B.C. Pliny ascribes it to Theodore of Samos, about 600 B.C. Great improvements have been made in recent times.

Lathom-House (Lancashire) was heroically defended for three months against the parliamentarians, by Charlotte, countess of Hertford. She was relieved by prince Rupert, 27 May, 1644. The house was, however, surrendered 4 Dec. 1645, and dismantled.

Latin Kingdom, Empire, &c., see Latium, Eastern Empire 1224, and Jerusalem.

Latin Language, a member of the Aryan family, and one of the original languages of Europe, from which sprang the Italian, French, and Spanish; see Latinum. A large portion of our language is derived from the Latin. It ceased to be spoken in Italy about 581; and was first taught in England by Aedelmin, brother of Ina, in the 7th century. The use of Latin in law deeds in England gave way to the common tongue about 1000; was revived in the reign of Henry II.; and again was replaced by English in the reign of Henry III. It was finally discontinued in religious worship in 1558, and in convervavmg and in courts of law in 1731 (by 4 Geo. II. c. 25). A corrupt Latin is still spoken in Rome. The foreign pronunciation of Latin (q, uh; a, i, e, &c.) was adopted in English universities and many schools about 1875-6. For "Latin name," see Latium.

Latin Union (Monetary), that of France, Italy, Belgium, and Switzerland, to maintain the use of the same coinage, from 1874 et seq.; reconstituted in 1885; arranged to be continued from year to year, autumn 1889; renewed till 31 Dec. 1893, Oct. 1894; conference at Paris, 9 Oct. 1895; convention in Greece, Dec. 18, 1898.

Latitatum, an ancient writ, directing the sheriff to apprehend persons to be brought before the king's bench court, had its name from its being supposed that the person named therein, and not the bill, would not be found in the county to be taken by bail. The writ was abolished by the Uniformity of Process act, 23 May, 1832.

Latitude. First determined by Hipparchus of Nice, about 160 B.C. It is the extent of the earth or the heavens, reckoned from the equator to either pole. Maupertuis, in 1737, in latitude 69°20, measured a degree of latitude, and made it 6943 miles. Swanberg, in 1803, made it 69493. At the equator, in 1744, four astronomers made it 6973; and Lambton, in latitude 12, made it 69743. Maloque, in England, made it 69458. Cassini, in France, in 1718 and 1740, made it 69412; and Biot, 69769; while a recent measurement in Spain makes it 6983—less than at the equator, and contradicts all others, proving the earth to be an oblate spheroid (which was the opinion of Cassini, Montfoucl, Euler, and others), instead of a prolate spheroid; see Longitude.

LAW'S BUBBLE. John Law, of Edinburgh (born 1881), was made comptroller-general of the finances of France, up to the strength of a scheme for establishing a bank, and an East India and a Mississippi company, by the profits of which the national debt of France was to be paid off. See MISSISSIPPI. He first offered his plan to Victor Amadeus, king of Sardinia, who told him he was not powerful enough to ruin himself. The French ministry accepted it; and in 1716, he opened a bank in his own name, under the protection of the duke of Orleans, regent of France, and the decided rich subscribed for shares both in the bank and the companies. In 1718 Law's was declared a royal bank, and the shares rose to upwards of twenty-fold the original value; so that, in 1719, they were worth more than eighty times the amount of all the current specie in France. In 1720 this fabric of false credit fell to the ground, spreading ruin throughout the country. Law died in poverty at Venice in 1729.—The South Sea Bubble in England occurred in 1720; see South Sea.

LAWN TENNIS is an offspring of tennis (which see). Major Whitelock is the reputed originator of the game introduced by him in 1854, under the name of Squashracket, a compound between tennis and badminton. Various modifications have taken place since. LEAP-YEAR or BISSEXTILE, originated with the astronomers of Julius Cesar, 46 B.C. They fixed the solar year at 365 days, 6 hours, comprising, as they thought, the period from one vernal equinox to another; the six hours were set aside, and at the end of four years, forming a day, the fourth year was made to consist of 366 days. The day thus added was called intercalary, and was placed a day before the 23rd of February, the sixth of the calendar, which was reckoned twice, hence called bissextile or twice sixth. This added day with us is Feb. 29th; see Calendar. This arrangement makes the year nearly three minutes longer than the astronomical year; to obviate this, 1700, 1800, and 1900 were not leap-years, but 2000 will be one; see Calendar and Time.

LEARNING AND THE ARTS, flourishing among the Greeks, under Pisistratus, 535 B.C., and especially under Pericles, 444 B.C., and still with the Romans at the commencement of the Christian era, under Augustus. The Greek reeuses caused their revival in Italy, particularly after the taking of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453, and the invention of printing shortly before,—the period of the Renaissance. Leo X. and his family (the Medici) greatly promoted learning in Italy, in the 15th century; when literature revived in France, Germany, and England; see Literature, and authors under Greek, Latin, English, and other languages.

LEGITIMISTS.

LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY, for reforming abuses, &c., established Nov. 1873.

LEGATES (legatus). Roman ambassadors; and also governors of the provinces into which Augustus divided the empire, 27 B.C. Legates are also ambassadors from the pope. The legate's court in England, erected in 1516 by cardinal Wolsey, to prove wills, and for the trial of offences against the spiritual laws, was soon discontinued.

LEGATIONS were the twenty administrative divisions in the states of the church, governed by legates, the term comes from the Latin legatus, and are now included in the kingdom of Italy; see Rome.

LEGHORN, Livorno, Tuscany, a mere village in the 15th century, owes its prosperity to the Medici family. It suffered dreadfully by an earthquake in 1741; and was entered by the French army, 27 July, 1790, but the British property had been removed. It was held by the French 1790-9 and retaken, 1800. It was unsuccessfully attacked by the British and Italian forces in Dec. 1813. The Austrian occupied the city from the insurgents, 15 May, 1849, and quelled a small insurrection, July 6, 1857. In June, 1857, above 60 persons were killed at the theatre, through an alarm of fire; see Tuscany and Italy. Population, 1890, 104,960; 1910 (est.), 110,125.

LEGION, a corps of soldiers in the Roman armies, said to have been formed by Romulus, when it consisted of 3,000 foot and 300 horse, about 720 B.C. When Hannibal was in Italy, 216 B.C., the legion consisted of 5,200 soldiers; and under Marius, in 182 B.C., it was 6,200 soldiers besides 700 horse. There were ten, and sometimes as many as eighteen, legions kept at Rome. Augustus had a standing army of 45 legions, together with 25,000 horse and 37,000 light-armed troops, about 5 B.C.; and the peace establishment of Adrian was thirty of these formidable brigades. A legion was divided into ten cohorts, and every cohort into six centuries, with 68 vexillaries, or standard, guarded by ten men. The peace of Britain was protected by three legions. See Thundering Legion.

LEGION OF HONOUR, a French order embracing the army, civil officers, and other individuals distinguished for services to the state; instituted by Napoleon Bonaparte, when first consul, 19 May, 1802, to replace the old suppressed orders of knighthood, &c. The order was confirmed by Louis XVIII. in 1815, and its constitution modified in 1816 and 1851. The honour was conferred on many British subjects who distinguished themselves in the Russian war, 1854-6, and in the Paris exhibitions of 1855, 1867, 1878 and 1889. The palace and offices were burnt by the communists, 23 May, 1871. The Legion comprised upwards of 54,000 members in 1887. The alleged traffic in decorations caused such excitement Oct. 1887, as was measured by the chamber, regimen, 16 July: plans for re-organisation proposed, Oct.; gen. Davout made grand chanceller of the reconstituted council, Dec. 1895; great outcry on his removal and the appointment of gen. Florentin, end Nov. 1901. See France.

LEGITIMISTS, a term (since 1814) applied to those who support the claims of the elder branch of the Bourbon family to the throne of France, whose representative, Henry, duc de Bordeaux, called conte de Chambord, born 29 Sept. 1820, died 21 Aug. 1883. They held a congress at Luverne on 21-23 June, 1882, and agreed to continue a pacific policy. The party was active in Feb. 1871-5. Their efforts to recover power have proved ineffectual; see France.
LEMURS.

LEMURGO, a fortress on the Adige, N. Italy, one of the Quadrilateral. It was captured by the French in 1796, but reverted to the Austrians in 1813. It was surrendered to the Italians in Oct. 1866.

LEMAYNO, Lombardy. Here the emperor Frederick Barbarossa was defeated by the Milanese and the Austrians in 1176, and the treaty of Constance ensued in 1183.

LEICESTER (central England), a bishopric for a short time in the 8th century, returned two members in the reign of Edward I. Here Richard III. was buried, 23 Aug. 1485; and here cardinal Wolsey died, 29 Nov. 1530. During the civil war, Leicester was taken by Charles I., 31 May, and by Fairfax, 17 June, 1645. The stocking manufacture was introduced in 1850. New town-hall opened, 8 Aug. 1876. New Abbey park opened by the prince of Wales, 29 May, 1882. Population, 1841, 211,581; 1911, 252,739.

Race occasioned by a strike, quelled by the police, 8-12 Feb.; end of strike, 11 Feb. 1830. Great opposition to vaccination 1830-1831; sanitary precautions strictly enforced, 1833-1839.

Water famine caused by long drought, Sept. 1803; relieved by great exertions and heavy rains, Nov. 1804.

Royal agricultural society's show held here in 1862; again, 22 Jan. 1879.

New reservoir and waterworks opened at Charnwood Forest, 10 Sept.

New art and technical schools opened by the bishop of London, 30 Oct. 1877.

Mr. & Mrs. Emily Bolton leave here about 1860, to Leicester charities; and, &c., to other charities, &c., 26 July, 1893.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie's gift of 25,000L. for a public library, accepted, 26 June, 1896.

New wing (memorial to Queen Victoria) to the infirmary, opened, 24 July, 1896.

Canon Clayton appointed dean of Leicester, 1 Jan. 1897.

 Trade union congress held here 1877; again 7 Sept., 1895; employed 23,900 of Leicester men; left the union 4 June, 1898; reached the metropolis, 11 June, 1895.

Death of Queen Victoria, 21 June, 1887.

Missionary exhibition, opened, 17 Oct. 1897.

LEICESTER SQUARE, London. See Globe. The square, after remaining some time in a disputed state, was renovated by Mr. Albert Grant (died, aged 68, 30 Aug. 1869), who bought up the enclosures, and presented it to the Metropolitan Board of Works, 2 July, 1874.

LEIGHTON (W. Carlow), a see founded by St. Laurence, about 628. Burchard, the Norwegiun, the son of Gormund, founded or endowed the priory of St. Stephen of Leighton. Bishop Dorn, appointed in 1152, was murdered by his archdeacon, Maurice Cavenagh, who was hanged on the spot where the crime was committed. Burtiant. In 1689 Leighton was united to Ferns; the combined see united to Osory in 1835; see Fern and Bishop.

LEININGEN (or LINANGE), a principality partly in Bavaria, Baden, and Hesse, mediatised in 1869. The present prince Ernest, born 9 Nov. 1819, a captain in the British navy, is the son of prince Charles, the half-brother of queen Victoria; Frederick, dowager princess of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, the queen's half-sister, died 23 Sept. 1872, aged nearly 65. Her son, count Gleichen, afterwards prince Victor of Hohenlohe, born 1833, died 31 Dec. 1891. He entered the British navy in Sept. 1848, and was long in active service, especially in the Crimean war. He was also an eminent sculptor. The first husband of the duchess of Kent, prince Emich of Leiningen, died 4 July, 1844.

LEANSTER, a kingdom in 1167, now one of the four provinces of Ireland. The abdication of Devorgilla, wife of O'Rara, a lord of Connacht, by Dermot king of Leinster in 1112, is asserted to have led to the landing of the English and the subsequent conquest. The province of Leinster gave the title of duke to Schomberg's son in 1660. The title became extinct in 1719, and was conferred on the family of Fitzgerald in 1726.

LEIPSIC (Saxony), an ancient city, famous for its university (founded 1409) and its fair (1458). At Breitenfeld, near here, Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, defeated the Imperialists, under Tilly, 7 Sept. 1631; and the Imperialists were again defeated here by the Swedes, under Torgersen, 23 Oct. 1642. Here took place, on 16-18 Oct. 1813, "the battle of the nations," between the French army and its allies, commanded by Napoleon (100,000), and the Austrian, Russian, and Prussian armies (240,000 strong). The French were beaten chiefly owing to 17 Saxon battalions, their allies, turning upon them in the heat of the engagement. 80,000 men perished on the field, of whom more than 10,000 were French, who also lost 65 pieces of artillery, and many standards. The victory was followed by the capture of Leipsic, of the rear-guard of the French army, and of the king of Saxony and his family. The 200th anniversary was celebrated 18 Oct. 1883. The Leipsic book fair began 1828. The new Supreme Court for all Germany, opened here 1 Oct. 1879. Population in 1891, 333,272; 1910 (est.), 589,975.

LEITH, the port of Edinburgh, was burnt by the Earl of Hertford in 1544. It was fortified by the French portions of Queen Mary in 1560, and surrendered to the English. The "Agreement of Leith" between the superintendents and ministers was made, Jan. 1572. The docks were begun 1720. Leith was made a burgh in 1833. Population, 1851, 64,749; 1910 (est.), 84,333.

LEITHA, a river dividing the Austrian territories; see Austria.

LEIGHTON HILL, near Dorking, Surrey, said to have been a Roman station, and has a view of eleven counties, being about 1000 feet above the sea level. The lofty tower on its summit was erected in 1716 by Mr. Richard Hull the then owner of Leighten Hill Place. He died 18 Jan. 1772 and was buried within the tower.

LELEGES, a Pelasgic tribe which inhabited Lucania about 1400 B.C., and after many contests merged into the Helenes, see Hellas.

LE MANS, a French city, department of the Sarthe. Here the retreating French general Chasny was overtaken and defeated by the Germans under prince Frederick Charles and the grand-duke of Mecklenburg, after some conflicts: 10, 11 Jan. 1871. Le Mans was attacked 12 Jan. by the six days' fighting about 22,000 French made prisoners.

LEMURES. The ancients supposed that the soul, after death, wandered over the world, and disturbed the peace of the living. The happy spirits were called Lores famuliariæ, and the unhappy, Lemures. The Roman festival, Lemuralia, kept on 9, 11, 13 May, is Mythically said to have been instituted by Romulus about 747 B.C., to propitiate the spirit of the slaughteredRemus.
LENNIE MUTINY. See Mutinies, 1875.

LENT (from the Saxon, levecen, spring). The forty days' fast observed in the Greek, Roman catholic, and Jewish churches from Ash Wednesday to Easter-day. The commencement of Lent varied, but in the 8th or 9th century Ash Wednesday became the first day. Lent was first observed in England by command of Ercobenct, king of Kent, in 690 or 691. Baker's Chron. Flesh was prohibited during Lent; but Henry VIII. permitted the use of shell meats, and proclaimed in 1533, which continued in force until, by proclamation of James I., in 1619 and 1625, and by Charles I., in 1627 and 1631, flesh was again wholly forbidden; see Ash Wednesday, Quadragesima.

LEON, KINGDOM OF, see under Spain.

LEONARDS' ACTS, Lord St. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 55; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58 (1859-60), relate to legal proceedings.

LEONINE CITY (Città Leonina or Borgo), formerly a suburb, now included in the city of Rome, was founded by Leo IV., pope 847-55, and named Leonis. It comprehends the castle of St. Angelo, the hospital of St. Spirito, the Vatican palace and gardens, and St. Peter's. Its possession was allotted to pope Pius IX. when the Italian royal troops entered Rome, 20 Sept. 1870. About 1500 inhabitants of the Leonine city voted for union with the kingdom of Italy, 2 Oct. 1870.

LEONINES, hexameter and pentameter verses, rhyming at the middle and the end, are said to have been first made by Leoninus, a canon, about the middle of the 12th century, or by pope Leo II. about 682.

LEOPOLD'S PRINCE, ANNUITY ACT (passed 7 Aug. 1874), provided for him 15,000l. a year, from 7 April, 1874, when he came of age.

LEPANTO (near Corinth), Battle of, 7 Oct. 1571: when the combined fleets of Spain, Venice, Genoa, Malta, and Pius V., commanded by don John of Austria, defeated the whole maritime force of the Turks, and completely checked their progress.

LEPROSY, a skin disease, described in Leucitcias xiii. (B.C. 1400), which prevailed in ancient times throughout Asia. It has now almost disappeared from Europe. It chiefly affected the lower classes, yet occasionally proved fatal to the very highest personages. Robert Bruce of Scotland died of leprosy in 1329. A hospital for lepers was founded at Granada, by queen Isabella of Castile, about 1504, and a large number of leper houses were founded in Britain. Dr. Edmondson met with a case in Edinburgh in 1809.

The great increase of leprosy in the Sandwich Islands compelled the government to isolate the lepers, and large numbers were transported to Molokai, where they endured much suffering. Since 1873 Father Joseph Damién (de Veuster), R. C. Belgian missionary, devoted his whole life most successfully to their general relief, and finally died of their disease, aged 50, 10 April, 1889 (succeeded by Father Wendelin). Other missionaries, male and female, are continuing his labours. The Father Damien Memorial Fund, under the auspices of the prince of Wales, was founded about 15 June, 1883; and on 29 June it was determined to set up a memorial statue of Father Damien at Kalawao, and to establish a fund for the medical treatment of the disease in the United Kingdom, and for the promotion of the study of it at home and abroad—especially in India.

Sir Henry B. Loch founds a hospital at Robben island, Cape Colony. 8 April, 1890
National Leprosy Fund; subscription dinner at the Hotel Metropole, the prince of Wales in the chair, 13 Jan.

The Albert Victor leprosy hospital at Calcutta founded.

The hon. sir Dinshah Manockjee Petit presents 100,000 roupies to found a leper hospital at Bombay, announced.

The British leper commission arrived at Calcutta, Nov. 1896; they report that there are about 100,000 lepers in India and Burmah; that leprosy is not increasing, and may probably be reduced by sanitation; that it is not generally hereditary or contagious, and originates chiefly in dirt; they recommend judicious isolation.

Miss Kate Marslen honoured by queen Victoria for her exertions among the Siberian lepers, about 24 Oct. 1892; her book published.

Mr. J. Hutchinson reports, from investigation, the primary cause of the disease in S. Africa the eating of badly-cured salt fish, March, 1902.

LETTRÉS DE CACHET, sealed letters issued by the kings of France since about 1670, by virtue of which those persons against whom they were directed were thrown into prison or exiled. The National Assembly decreed their abolition, 1 Nov. 1789.

LETTUCE, introduced into England from Flanders about 1520. It is said that when queen Catherine wished for a salad, she had to send to Holland or Flanders for lettuce.

LEUCTRA, in Beeotia, N. Greece, where the Thebans under Epaminondas defeated the superior force of Cleombrotus, king of Sparta, 8 July, 371 B.C. 4000 Spartans, with their king, were defeated. The Spartans gradually lost their preponderance in Greece.

LEIDES, from the German, Leute, people, native feudal vassals, faithful to the German and French sovereigns in the 6th and 7th centuries.

LEITHEIN (S. Prussia); see Lissa.

LEYANT (the East), a term applied to Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, &c. Levant companies, in London, were established in 1581, 1593, and 1605.

LEYELLERS, a fanatical party in Germany, headed by Murner and Sterck in the 16th century, who taught that all distinctions of rank were usurpations on the rights of mankind. At the head of 40,000 men, Murner commanded the sovereign princes of Germany and the magistrates of cities to resign their authority, and on his march his followers ravaged the country. The landscape of Hesse at length defeated him at Frankenhansen, 15 May, 1525; 700 of the enthusiasts fell in the battle, and the rest fled; their leader was taken and beheaded at Mulhausen. The English "Levellers," powerful in parliament in 1647, were put down by Cromwell in 1654, and their leader Lilburn was tried and acquitted. At the period of the French Revolution a secret society was formed in England. A "Loyal Association" was formed against them by John Reeves, Nov. 1702.

LEVELS. The great level of the Fens is a low-lying district of about 2000 square miles, in Lincolnshire, Huntingdonshire, Cambridgeshire, and Norfolk, said to have been overflowed by the sea during an earthquake, 378. It was long afterwards an inland sea in winter, and a noxious swamp in summer, and was gradually drained—by the Romans, the Saxons, and especially by the monks during the reign of the Plantagenet kings. One of the first works of a large scale was carried out by Morton, bishop of Ely, in the reign of Henry VII. A general drainage act was passed by the advice of lord Burghley, in 1601, but little work was done till the reign of James I. who, in 1621, invited over the great Dutch engineer, Cornelius Vermuyden, to assist in the general drainage of the country. After completing several great works, Vermuyden agreed (in 1629) to drain the "Great Level." He was at first prevented from proceeding with his undertaking through a popular outcry against foreigners; but eventually, aided by Francis, earl of Bedford, in spite of the great opposition of the people, for whose benefit he was labouring, he declared his great work complete in 1632. He also reclaimed much valuable land at Ashborne, in Lincolnshire, 1629-30, and many Dutch and French protestants settled here about 1631; and a few of their descendants still remain. There are the Middle, Bedford, South, and North Levels. The drainage of the Great Level employed the talents of Bonne (about 1587), and of Telford (1831), and of other eminent engineers. The Middle Level commission cut through certain barrier banks, and replaced them by other works.

LEXICON, see Dictionaries.

LEXINGTON (Massachusetts), Battle of, at the beginning of the war of independence. The British obtained the advantage, and destroyed the stores of the revolted colonists, but lost in the battle 273 men, killed and wounded, 19 April, 1775. The hostilities thus commenced continued to 1783.—LEXINGTON, a town in Missouri, U.S., fortified by the Federal troops, was attacked by the confederate general Price, on 29 August, and after a gallant resistance by colonel Mulligan, surrendered on 21 Sept. 1861.

LEYDEN (Holland), Lingumum Batavorum, important in the 13th century. Between 31 Oct. 1573, and 3 Oct. 1574, when it was relieved, it endured two sieges by the armies of Spain, during which 6000 of the inhabitants died of famine and pestilence. In commemoration the university was founded, 1575. In 1609 two thirds of the population perished by a fever, which, it was said, was aggravated by its improper treatment by professor De la Boe. The university was almost destroyed by a vessel laden with 10,000 lb. weight of gunpowder blowing up and demolishing a large part of the town, and killing numbers of people, 12 Jan. 1607. The Leyden jar was invented about 1745, by Kleist, Muschenbrock, and others; see Electricity. Population, 1800, 34,421; 1810 (est.), 39,863.

The third centenary of the foundation of the university was celebrated jubilally, 3 Feb. 1875. The Spinoza museum opened at Rhynsburg.

LEWES (Sussex), where Henry III. king of England, watershed by Montfort, earl of Lancaster, and his son Edward, afterwards Edward I., were taken prisoners. One division of Montfort's army, a body of Londoners, gave way to the furious attack of prince Edward, who, pursuing the fugitives too far, caused the battle to be lost; see Evesham. Population, 1871, 11,274; 1881 (est.), 12,600.

expressed in a parliamentary report of a book published by Stockdale, 7 Nov. 1836. Lord Denman, in giving judgment, said he was not aware that the authority of the house of commons could justify the publication of a libel—an opinion which led to some proceedings on the part of the house of commons against Mr. Stockdale. 1837-39.

Wendell's were given in his favour, and in Nov., 1839, the sheriffs took possession of Hansard's premises. This caused much excitement in parliament, and they were ordered to appear at the bar of the house of commons, and were formally committed to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, 21 Jan., but immediately discharged; the conflict was maintained by the law officers and the commons till . . . May, 1840. A law was passed giving summary protection to persons employed in the publication of its reports and papers 14 April.

The secrecy of the law in respect to newspapers relaxed by lord Campbell's act. 6 & 7 Vict., c. 66, 1843.

A bill relieving newspapers from actions for libel in reporting speeches at lawful public meetings, read third time in the commons, Aug, 1867, but dropped; read second time April, and withdrawn. 7 July, 1868.

Wason v. Walter ("Times")—parliamentary reports and fair comments, declared no libel. 25 Nov., 1866.

Newspaper Libel Act passed 27 Aug., 1884.

LIBERALS, a name given to the more advanced Whigs and reformers since 1828. The party held office under Earl Grey, Viscount Melbourne, Earl Russell, Viscount Palmerston, Mr. W. E. Gladstone, and the earl of Rosebery. See Admiistration.

The Liberal, a paper begun by Byron, Shelley and Leigh Hunt, 4 numbers only published 1823.

New city liberal club; earl Granville, president; organised 1826.

New liberal club for need end, founded 25 June, 1832.

A new liberal cry proposed "Free church, schools, and land" (Mr. Chamberlain) autumn, 1835.

Mr. Gladstone resigned the leadership of the party in the commons from actions for libel in reporting speeches at lawful public meetings, read third time in the commons, Aug, 1867, but dropped; read second time April, and withdrawn. 7 July, 1868.

LIHEFIELD (Staffordshire). The see of Mercia (at Lichfield) was founded 675; restored to the see, 1073; to Coventry, 1102. In 1121 the see of Lichfield was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry.

In 1837, the archdeaconry of Coventry was added to the see of Worcester, and Dr. Samuel Butler became bishop of Lichfield. This see has given three saints to the Roman Church: and to the British nation one lord chancellor and three lord treasurers. It is valued in the king's books at £57, 18s. 2d. Present income, 4,212 £ sterling, 1851, 4,945 £ (est.), 1890.

Lichfield cathedral was first built about 626; the present structure was finished by Roger de Clinton, the 17th bishop, in 1145. Walter de Langton (bishop in 1299), built the chapel of St. Mary, now taken into the chapel and under bishop Hezworth (1428) the cathedral was perfected. The building was despoiled at the Reformation, and was severally injured in the parliaments in which its monuments, its fine sculpture, and beautifully painted windows, were demolished. It was repaired at the restoration, 1660, and in 1751, and by Robert G. Scott, 1860, and 1874.

In Lichfield the king Richard II. kept his Christmas festival, 1327, when 2,000 tons of wine and 2,000 melons were consumed. A charter was granted to Lichfield, constituting it a city, by Edward VI. 1544. It was abolished to the county in 1782.

LICHEFIED HOUSE, COMPACT, said to have been made between the Whig government and Daniel O'Connell in 1815 at Lichfield-house, 23, St. James's-seat.

LICINIAN LAWS. In 373 A.D., C. Licinius Stoio and L. Sextius, tribunes of the people, promulgated various regulations or laws to weaken the power of the patricians and benefit the plebeians; one was to relieve the plebeians from their debts; another enacted that no person should possess more than 500 jugera of the public land, or more than 100 head of large cattle, or 500 of small, in the Roman states; and the third, that one of the consuls should be a plebeian. After much opposition these were carried, and L. Sextius became the first plebeian consul, 376. Another law, 350 n.c., of this name, imposed a severe penalty on party clubs, or societies assembled for election purposes; and another, about 105 n.c. (brought forward by P. Licinius Crassus), limited the expenses of the table.

The American life-boat, composed of cylinders lashed together, sailed from New York, 4 June, 1867, navigated by three men, capt. John Miles and Messrs. Miller and Millane, and arrived at Southampton, 25 July following.

Life-preserver, the apparatus of capt. Manby (brought into use in Feb. 1858), effects a communication with the distressed vessel by a rope, thrown by a shot from a mortar, with a line attached to it. For the night, a night-ball is provided with a hollow shell of thick pasteboard, and a fuse and quick match, and charged with fifty balls, and a sufficiency of powder to inflame them. The fuse is so graduated that the shell shall explode at the height of 300 yards. The balls spread a brilliant light for nearly a minute, and give a clear view of every surrounding object. In 20 years, 52 vessels and 410 of their crews and passengers have been saved. Capt. Manby died 18 Nov. 1854, aged 89. See Rockets.

Exhibition of life-boats, life-rafts, &c., at the London Tavern opened 15 April, 1873.

Hull Life-Boat reported good on trial in East India docks 1 Oct. 1874.

Capt. Boyton's life preserving dress (of India rubber), with means for signalling at sea, tried by him on the Thames south bank, 23 Jan. and 6 March, at Cowes, before queen Victoria; while in the water he fired rockets, caught fish, &c. 5 April, 1875.

Capt. Boyton crossed the Channel from Gravelines to the South Bank of the Thames in 24 hours last May, Christison's Life-saving raft tried on the Thames, could not be sunk. 17 March. Edmund Thompson's Life-raft, partially successful off Poplar 23 May, 1875.

Rev. R. L. Berthon's collapsible Life-boat taken out by the Esquiline, and proved to be successful 13 Sept. Wm. George, Imperial War Office, chief inspector of life-boats for 32 years. 18 Aug. 1875.

The Mexico wrecked near Southport; the Lytham life-boats saved 12 lives; the Southport and St. Anne's life-boats equipped without urging themselves; 25 of the crew perished 9 Dec. 1875.

The Storm King patent life-boat 30 feet long, with its inventor, capt. Jorgensen and a man named Nelesen, left London 12 Sept., 1879, encountered heavy gales; arrived at Cape Town 2 March, 1879.
light discovered by Reamur, and after him by Cassini, and calculated by Roemer (1676) and Bradley (1725). Its velocity ascertained to be about 186,284 miles in sixteen minutes, or nearly 670,616 miles in a second, which is a million of times swifter than the velocity of a cannon ball, about 1047. The light of the sun takes eight minutes and a half to arrive to us: it is sent through space to the earth. See Emission Theory, Optics. Photography, Caramelence, Fluorescence, Koulen Rays, Radiation, Fuscin.

FEASIBILITY OF LIGHT. Direct determination by the tooth-wheel method by Fizeau agreed with a result of about 299,860 miles, calculated by Foucault, with the revolving mirror, gave 298,000 kilometres in a second of mean time. In 1874, Crookes's improved tooth-wheel apparatus gave 299,464 kilometres in a second of mean time.

Mr. C. F. Wool, Secretary (which see), considered that he had demonstrated the mechanical action of light by experiments with delicate balances, which for the first time placed the force of the sun's rays on the earth to be 234 tons to the square mile. 1875.

His apparatus was termed Radiometer (which see). After much investigation, Mr. Crookes admitted that the action was due to radiation, but to difference of heat-absorption and the reaction of residual air.

Mr. Crookes at the Royal Society announces experiments respecting an ultra-gaseous state of matter, supported by the emission theory. Dec. 4, 1875.

Dr. A. van der Mon, Secretary (which see), reported to the Royal Society that the electric light acts on vegetation like solar light.

LIGHT BRIGADE. See Bahadurca.

LIGHTHOUSE, called Pharos (now phare, French; faro, Italian), from one erected at Pharos, (which see); near Alexandria, Egypt, 550 feet high, said to have been visible forty-two miles, about 283 miles. There was one at Messina, at Rhodes, &c. The light was obtained by fires. A coal-fire light was exhibited at Tynemouth castle, Northumberland, England. The first true lighthouse erected in England was the Eddystone lighthouse (which see) in 1758-60. Lights were exhibited in various places by the corporation of the Trinity-house early in the 17th century.

LIGHTHOUSES.

The light to a 4 years old, height 4 feet, weight 2 cwt, on the jetty at Sunderland, Durham, was moved forward towards 1 foot without stopping the illumination, for the superintendence of Mr. John Murray, october 10, 1609.

Glass reflectors were used in 1603, and copper ones in 1707. A common candle light was discovered about 1711. Fresnel's Duplex system of 1856, which was exhibited about 1735, was adopted for the first time in England by Messrs. Williams, at the direction of the corporation of the Trinity-house, July 3, 1735.

The most brilliant artificial light ever produced derived from magnetoelectricity by a machine devised by Professor Holmes was first employed at the South Foreland, near Dover, on December 1, 1767, and at Dungeness in 1768.

Mr. Holm's arrangement, and a similar one constructed by M. Sturm, were shown at the International exhibition, London, in 1851.

Mr. B. While apparatus for producing a most powerful magnetic electric light, on trial in northern lighthouses, 1858.

Long light (which see) employed at the S. Foreland light, 1855.

Gas light tried successfully at Howth Bailey lighthouse, Dublin Bay, July, 1856.

Mr. Wigram's triflament glass light, fitted with a glass box, was used in the belt, and prisons forming a cupola: tried near Dublin: approved by Dr. Tymbull, July, 1857; further improvements by Mr. J. R. Wigham, shown, Dec. 1854.

C. W. Siemens' magnetic electric light used at the Lizard, June, 1858. The cost of erecting the three great British lighthouses viz., the Skerryvore (west coast), 155 feet high, £1,156; the Bishop Rock, Scilly Isles, 145 feet high, £1,576; and the Bell Rock, Scotland, 117 feet high, £1,315.

Important experiments at South Foreland on electricity, gas, and oil as illuminants, June, 1858. Report adopted by Trinity House; electric light brightest, but most expensive; gas and oil nearly equal; oil recommended for practical purposes; electricity for special purposes. Bill to establish Headlands, etc., about 25 Aug. 1858.

Telegraphic and telephonic communication established between life-boat stations in Liverpool bay, lighthouses, &c., also between other stations on the Welsh coast, made by Jan. 1857.

New lighthouse on the Admiralty pier, Dover, completed, announced 25 Dec. 1856.

New lighthouse on Lundy island, Bristol channel, opened 16 Nov. 1857.

Little Crosby lighthouse on the Mersey destroyed by fire during a gale, 5 deaths, 2 Feb. 1858.

New lighthouse at Cape G_timer, N. France, opened 15 Feb. 1859.

Donghagie lighthouse burnt down, 12 May 1859.

New lighthouse at Pendine, Carmarthen, opened 26 Sept. 1860; and another on the Foreland, Bristol channel, 28 Sept. 1860; new one on Beachy Head, 14 feet high, opened, 2 Oct. 1863.

Lizard lighthouse illuminated with a single electric light, said to be the most powerful in the world, Oct. 1863.

Death of Mr. John R. Wigham, aged 73, inventor of the Wigham light, and of several kinds of fog signals and apparatus now in general use, 16 Nov. 1866.

Report of the royal commission appointed in 1866 to inquire into Lighthouse administration in the United Kingdom, issued as a parliamentary paper, 11 Feb. 1868.

New lighthouses: Beachy Head (1890) on fore-shore; in lieu of one on the cliff; Peeler Pt. Fog Signal Sta, near Plymouth (1892); Dungeness (1894), to replace old lighthouse; Portland Bill (1896) in lieu of two lighthouses on Portland; Berry Head, near Torquay (1896); Strumble Head (1898); Rileford Bar (1897); and Ramsgate, Northumberland (1900).

The new lighthouses at south and east ends of Lundy were established in 1859 in lieu of old lighthouse in the centre of the island.

LIGHTING UP (Towns, &c.), see London, 1834, 1835; Gas and Electric Light.

LIGHTNING-CONDUCTORS. were first set up for the protection of buildings by Franklin shortly after 1752, when he brought down electricity from a thunder-cloud. Richmann, of St. Peterburg, was killed while repeating these experiments, Oct. 1753. The first conductor was erected at Plymouth, Aug. 1752, and above 800 persons perished. In 1762, Mr. Watson recommended conductors to be used in the navy; and they were employed for a short time, but soon fell into disuse from want of skill and attention. Mr. (afterwards sir William) Snow Harris devoted his attention to the subject from 1829 to 1854, and published a work in 1853, detailing his experiments.
LIGHT SHIPS.

In 1830, above thirty ships were fitted up with his conductors, and in 1842 his plans were adopted, and his conductors are now manufactured in the royal dockyards. In 1854 parliament granted him $5,000. A lightning research committee formed, June 1792, with a view to the better protection of buildings, 2,200 observers in the United Kingdom, and others abroad.

LIGHT SHIPS, floating beacons guarding dangerous sandbanks and shoals. Those round the English coast are under the control of Trinity-house. The first English light vessel was placed at the Nore in 1825, and there were 51 in position off the coast of England in June, 1910.

Cable Ships are stationed at Haslido, Shipwash, Kentish Knock and North Goodwin.

Wireless Ships at Cross Sand, South, Tongue, East Goodwin, Gull and South Goodwin.

Submarine hills are established at the following light vessels - Spurn, Outer Dowsing, Cross Sand, South, Outer Gabberd, Tongue, East Goodwin, Royal Sovereign, Overs, Nab, Shambles, Breacks, St. Goven, and Morecambe Bay, also one on sea bottom. 1,950 miles from North Stack, Holyhead.

LIGNY (near Fleurus, Belgium), where Napoleon defeated the Prussian army under Blücher, 16 June, 1815; see Waterloo.

LIGUORIANS, or ReDEEMPtorists, a Roman catholic order, established in 1732 by Alfonso de Liguori, approved by pope Benedict XIV., 1749.

LIGURIANS, a Celtic tribe, N. Italy, invaded the Roman territory, and were defeated 238 B.C. They were not subjugated till 172 B.C.—The Ligurian Republic, founded in May, 1797, on the ruin of Genoa, was incorporated with France in 1805; and then merged into the kingdom of Italy.

LILAC TREE, Syringa. The Persian Lilac from Persia was cultivated in England about 1638; the common lilac by Mr. John Gerard about 1597.

Lille (formerly Lille), N. France, has a strong citadel by Vauban. It was besieged by the duke of Marlborough and the allies; and, though deemed impregnable, was taken after three months’ siege in 1692. It was restored by the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, in consideration of the demolition of the fortifications of Dunkirk. Lille sustained a severe bombardment from the Austrians, who were obliged to raise the siege, 7 Oct. 1792. Population, 1809, 188,272; 1901, 215,431; 1909, 205,022.

LILI-BURLEO, part of the refrain of a popular song ridiculing the Irish priests, 1808. The words are attributed to Lord Wharton, the music to Henry Purcell.

Lily, a native of Persia, Syria, and Italy, was brought to England before 1490; the martagon from Germany, 1570.

Lily-beam, a strong maritime fortress of Sicily, besieged by Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, 270 B.C., and relieved by the Carthaginians 275 B.C. It was taken by the Romans, 241 B.C., after a siege of nine years, which led to the end of the second Punic war.

Lima (Peru). In 1531, Pizarro, marching through Peru, was struck by the beauty of the valley of Rímac, and there he founded this city, and gave it the name of Ciudad de los Reyes, or city of the Kings, 1535. Here he was assassinated, 26 June, 1547. Awful earthquakes occurred here, 1580, 1673, 1857, and 28 Oct. 1746. In 1854-5, thousands perished by yellow fever. Mr. Sullivan, the British consul, was assassinated at Lima, 11 Aug., 1857; see Peru, 1872, 1881-3. Buildings injured by an earthquake, 20 Sept., 1897. The church of San Francisco, founded by Pizarro, 1535, burnt, 29 Sept., 1893; Earthquake of 1855 was experienced for 30 years, causes great damage, 4 Mar., 1904. Population, 1903, 105,000; 1909, 140,894.

Limburg (Netherlands), a duchy in the 10th century; acquired by the dukes of Brabant about 1288; added to Burgundy about 1429; passed to the house of Austria in 1717; became one of the United Provinces, 1679; conquered and annexed to the French republic, 1795; restored to the Netherlands, 1815; divided between Holland and Belgium, 1839; completely separated from the German confederation by treaty, 11 May, 1867.

LimE or LImEX TREE, probably introduced in the 15th century. The vines in St. James’s park are said to have been planted at the suggestion of Evelyn, who recommended multiplying odoriferous trees, in his “Fumifugium” (1661). A lime-tree planted in Switzerland in 1410, existed in 1720, the trunk being thirty-six feet in circumference.

LIME-LIGHT, produced by the combustion of oxygen and hydrogen or carburetted hydrogen on a surface of lime. This light evolves little heat and does not vitiate the air. It is also called Drummond Light, after its inventor, Lieut. Thomas Drummond, who successfully produced it as a first-light in 1826, and employed it on the ordnance survey. It is said to have been seen at a distance of 112 miles. It was tried at the South Foreland lighthouse in 1827. Lieut. Drummond was born, 1797; died 15 April, 1830. To him is attributed the maxim that “property has its duties as well as its rights.”

Limerick, anciently Lumnecath (S. W. Ireland). About 550, St. Munchin is said to have founded a bishopric and built a church here, which latter was destroyed by the Danes in 853. Donald O’Brien, king of Limerick, founded the cathedral about 1250. Limerick obtained its charter in 1545, when John Spencer was its first mayor. In 1641, the king’s forces destroyed Limerick, and the chief of the town, Sir John Buttle became mayor, but was then driven from the city by Sir Maurice T集中. This event is commemorated in the “Limerick” song, which begins: “The winds that blow the soli-"...
LIMITATIONS, STATUTE OF.

LIMITATIONS. Statute of, 21 James I. c. 16, 1623. By it actions for trespass or debt, or simple contract, must be commenced within six years after the cause of action, and actions for assault, nuisance, or imprisonment within four years. The Real Actions Limitation act, 1874, came into operation 4 Jan. 1879.

LIMITED LIABILITY. An act for limiting the liability of joint stock companies, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 85 (1852), which was several times amended 1854-7, 1876-8. On 31 May, 1864, "39 joint stock companies had been formed and registered on the limited liability principle, and 658 had ceased to exist." Much calamity in 1866 was occasioned by the abuse of the system. The Companies act of 1862 was amended in 1867, 1241 registered in 1874, 1791 registered in 1886; total 1862-89, 25042. The principle adopted by some joint stock banks in 1790. New Companies act passed, 8 Aug. 1862. See under Banks.

Companies act 1862, to amend companies acts of 1855-6, to render liable manager of companies law 1862, to consolidate the companies act of 1862 and the acts amending 31 May 1862, 27 July 1864; came into force 4 April 1869.

LIMOUSIN MURDERS, N.-central France. Several barbarous murders, especially of aged people, took place here, Jan., Sept., Nov. 1875, and Jan. 1877; several persons denounced, proved innocence. In June, 1874, one Petit, accused of similar murders at Nogent and other places, in Nov. 1875, and Jan. 1874. Executed at Chartres, 20 Sept. 1874.

LINCHELLES (N. France), where the allied English and Dutch armies defeated the French, 18 Aug. 1793. General Lake commanded three battalions of foot-guards.

LINCOLN, the Roman Lindum Colonia, and at the period of the conquest rich and populous. It was taken several times by Saxons and Danes. The castle was built by William I. in 1086. Without Newport-gate upon Lincoln plain was fought the battle between the partisans of the empress Maud, commanded by the earl of Gloucester, and the army of Stephen, in which the king was defeated and taken prisoner, 2 Feb. 1141. Louis, duc de Bourbon, by the discretion late 19th century, the last year of king John's reign, was acknowledged by them as king of England here; but the nobility, summoned by the earl of Pembroke to Gloucester to crown Henry III., marched against Louis and the barons, and defeated them in a most sanguinary battle (at Fair of Lincoln), 20 May 1217, and Louis withdrew. The battle of Hogwarts, 20 Nov. 1882. Population, 1881, 37,355; and, 1901, 31,222. Mr. J. H. Buxton, owner of Lincoln, prophesies 1877, "solvency to Lincoln charities. Jan. 1905. Lady Edwardes awards a memorial to Lord Buxton, 14 July, 1911. Rev. W. MacCarthy appointed the first bishop of Grantham, 29 Sept. 1914.

LINCOLN, BISHOPRIC OF, Sleaford or Lincoln and Sleaford, two distinct sees in Mercia, were united about 1078, and the see was removed to Lincoln by Bishop Remigius de Fescamp, who built a cathedral (1089), afterwards destroyed by fire, but rebuilt by bishop Alexander (1127) and bishop Hugh of Burgundy. The diocese is very large, although the dioceses of Ely (1109), Oxford, and Peterborough (1541) were formed from it, and were further enlarged in 1837. The see was valued at the dissolution of monasteries at 2065l. per annum; and after many of its manors had been seized upon, it was rated in the king's books at 894l. tros. 1d. Present income, 4500l. It has given three saints to the church of Rome, and to the civil state of England six lord chancellors. The great bell of the cathedral, called Great Tom of Lincoln, weighs four tons eight pounds.

LINCOLN'S-INN (London), derives its name from Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, who erected a mansion on this spot in the reign of Edward I., which had been the bishop of Chichester's palace. It became an inn of court, 1441. The gardens of Lincoln's-inn-fields were laid out by Inigo Jones, about 1620, and erroneously said to occupy the same space as the largest pyramid of Egypt, which is 764 feet square; Lincoln's-inn square being 821 feet by 625 feet 6 inches. William lord Russell was beheaded in Lincoln's-inn-fields, 21 July, 1683. The square (formed in 1683) was enclosed with iron railings about 1737. The new hall and other buildings were opened, 30 Oct. 1843, and the square planted. The theatre in Lincoln's-inn-fields was built in 1665; rebuilt in 1744; made a barrack in 1759, and pulled down in 1848. The fields (enclosed in 1735) opened to the public (cost 12,000l.) by sir John Hutton, L.C.C., 23 Feb. 1895.

LINCOLN TOWER. Westminster Bridge Road, was erected, by the united subscriptions of Hutton and Americans, as a memorial of the abolition of slavery, and of Abraham Lincoln, president. The foundation-stone was laid by general Schenck, then American minister here, 9 July, 1874; and the head stone was placed by the Rev. Newman Hall, minister of Surrey chapel, 28 Sept. 1875. The tower, which is 220 feet high, cost about 7000l. The church, named after the church of the same name, was opened in 1881.

LINDISFARNE, or HOLY ISLAND, on the coast of Northumberland, became a bishop's see, 665. It was ravaged by the Danes under Regnar Lodbrok in 714, and the monastery destroyed by them in 875. The bones of the bishop, St. Cuthbert, who died in 687, were conveyed, among other places, to Chester-le-street, and thence to Ripon, 1059, and finally to Durham, where see.

LINEN. Pharoah arrayed Joseph in vestures of fine linen, 17:46 c.c. (Gen. xii. 42.) First manufactured in England by Flemish weavers, under the protection of Henry III. 1253 A company of linen weavers established in London 1356 The art of staining linen known about 1350 A company of weavers in the reign of James I. and other Presbyterians who fled from persecution in succeeding reigns, planted themselves in the northeast part of England, and established the linen manufacture, which was liberally encouraged by the lord deputy Wentworth in 1634; by William III. 1696 Hemp, flax, back-thread, and yarn, from Ireland, permitted to be exported duty free. 1696
Lingam, an ancient Hindu god (much worshipped by women), who had many temples in Délhi, before the Mahomect conquer. One of his idols set in gold, diamonds, and other precious stones, was sold by Messrs. Phillips of Bond Street, London, for 2,450l., 5 Dec. 1888.

Linlithgow - Bridge (near Edinburgh), near which the forces of the earl of Angus, who held James V. in their power, defeated the forces of the earl of Lennox, who, after receiving promise of quarter, was killed by sir James Hamilton, 1526. Mary, queen of Scots, was born in the palace of Linlithgow, 8 Dec. 1542, James V., her father, dying of a broken heart, 14 Dec., in consequence of which defeat by the English at Solway Moss, 25 Nov. previous.

Linnean system of botany, arranged by Linne or Linnaeus, a Swedish, 1735-33. He classified the plants according to the number and situation of the sexual parts, and made the flower and fruit the test of his various genera. Linnaeus lived from 1707 to 1778. His library and herbarium were purchased by sir James E. (then Dr.) Smith, and given to the Linnean Society in London, which was instituted in 1788, and incorporated 26 March, 1802; at Milan, about 20 Sept. 1802.

The centenary of the foundation of the Linnean Society celebrated; gold medals were presented to sir Joseph Hooker, and sir Richard Owen.

Death of Mr. William Sawyer, F.R.S., aged 79, 24 May, 1833.

Darwin-Wallace celebration to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the famous joint contributions held at the Institution of Civil Engineers.

Lion and unicorn, the former English, the latter Scottish, became the supporters of the royal arms on the accession of James I. in 1603. The lions is borne square at base of Nelson monument, designed by sir Edwin Landseer, were uncovered, 31 Jan. 1867.

Lions. True lions belong to the old world exclusively. They existed in Europe, Egypt, and Palestine, but have long disappeared from those countries; their present country being Africa. A lion named Pompey died in the Tower of London in 1765 after 70 years confinement.

Van Amburgh was very successful in taming lions; he tamed 5 lions at Chatham; and Massaari (John McCarthy) was killed by a lion, 3 Jan. 1787.

Mr. Bostock, a famous lion trainer, attacked at Bostock's hippodrome, Paris, and dangerously wounded, 27 Oct. 1895.

Lippau, see Hussites.

Lippe, a constitutional principality (N.W. Germany). Population, 1900, 140,000; 1910 (est.), 140,000. In Troubridge captured 1 Sept. 1824; succeeded his father, Leopold, 1 Jan. 1851; died 8 Dec. 1875—his brother Waldemar, born 18 April, 1824, succeeded; died 20 March, 1895; Charles Alexander (deranged), brother, born 1831, succeeded; disputed succession; count Ernst nominated regent and successor by a tribunal, July, 1897, died 26 Sept. 1904. Lippe became a member of the North German confederation, 18 Aug. 1866. The federal princes memorialised by the count regent on a difference with the emperor regarding a point of military etiquette, see Borussia, 1898, Times, 12 Nov. 1898. Settlement of the controversy, disputed succession, &c. postponed, 5 Jan. 1899. Count Leopold of Lippe-Biesterfeld, the eldest son of count Ernst, assumes on his father's death the regency, 26 Sept. 1894. Emperor William of Germany intimated by telegram to the count that he refuses to recognise his assumption of the regency, and that he will not permit the military to take the oath of allegiance. Government of the Principality submits to the diet statement setting forth the situation respecting the regency in regard to the protest of the emperor and of the government of Schaumburg-Lippe, and affirming that no manifestations against count Leopold's succession can have any legal effect; view of the emperor, law passed by the diet in 1898. The proposals of the government referred to a special committee, 5 Oct. 1904. See Times, 6 Oct. 1904, and for history of the disputed succession, Times, 27 Sept. 1904. Prince Charles Alexander (see above) died at St. Gilgenberg, near Bayreuth, where he had been a patient with a mental disease, 13 Jan. 1905.

The children's act, 1895, prohibited children under 14 years of age from entering public-houses.

Lisbon (Oli-sipo, and Felicitas Julia, of the ancients) was taken by the Arabs about 716, and became important under the Moorish kings, from whom it was captured by Alfonso I. of Portugal in 1147. It was made the capital of Portugal by Emanuel, 1566. Lisbon has suffered much by earthquakes, and was almost destroyed by one, 1 Nov. 1755; in Great Britain about 180,000l. was subscribed for the sufferers; see Earthquakes. The court fled to the Brazils, 10 Nov. 1807, and on 30 Nov. the French, under Junot, entered Lisbon, and held it until the battle of Vimeira, in which they were defeated by the British, under Sir Arthur Wellesley, 21 Aug. 1808. A military insurrection at Lisbon, 21 Aug. 1831, was soon suppressed, and many soldiers were executed; see Portugal. Population in 1890, 357,000; 1910 (est.), 416,000.

A pleasure boat on the Tagus upset, about 60 drowned, 15 May 1875. Lisbon State Tobacco Company, favoured by a decree of Sallabanda, ambassador in London, company promoted by baron Albert Grant and others; tramway could not be made; see Tram within. Great fire at the dockyard, 17 Oct. 1883.
LISMORE

Great excitement through the British ultimatum respecting East Minna (see Post Correspondent) Jan. 1894. Strike of bakers; 700 encamped outside the city, soldiers employed as bakers, 16 May 1894. The 45th anniversary of Vasco da Gama's first appearance in India, 20 May, 1895. Dr. Pestana, director of the Bacteriological institute, dies of plague contracted during his researches at Oporto. 15 Nov. 1895. Express train, cathedral, &c., sitting before 3,000 discovered, and Aug. 1895. King Carlos and the crown prince assassinated while driving through Lisbon; the future Manuel was also wounded, 1 Feb. 1896.

LISMORE (S. Ireland). St. Carthagin, first bishop, 611, says: "Lismore is a famous and holy city, of which the first man of the world where a woman dare enter." The castle (built by King John when earl of M. reton, 1185), burnt in 1615, was rebuilt with great magnificence by the duke of Devonshire. The cathedral, built 1694, was repaired by Cormac, son of Murchus, king of Munster, about 1193. The bishopric was united to that of Waterford, about 1193, and both to Cashel in 1197.

LISSA (or Leutheum, Silosi). Here the king of Prussia vanquished Charles of Lorraine; 60,000 Austrians were slain, 5 Dec. 1757.—Lissa, in Poland, was lost in rains by the Russian army in the campaign of 1757.—Lissay, an island in the Adriatic. Near here the Italian fleet, commanded by Persano, was defeated with severe loss by the Austrian fleet, commanded by Tergotzl, 29 July, 1796. The Austrians had 23 vessels, 11 of which were ironclads, and the Austrians had 22 vessels, 7 only being ironclads. Persano, when in sight of the enemy, quitted his ship, the "R. D. L." and hoisted his flag on the "Obliterations." During the action, the ironclad in the British fleet, and exploded, and all on board perished (except 12 out of 200 men). The flagship of Persano was captured and sunk by the Austrians. The "R. D. L." disabled the Austrian line of battle ship "Kiev," and compelled her to run aground.

Ablaut Persano was tried for misconduct and dismissed the service (see Persano), 15 April, 1805.

Cape Was Hope in the Essex, with two other frigates, the "Essex," and "James," and the "Satisfaction." 1776. — "Tirante," Man and his ship, Capt. "Monty," defeated by a Franco-Venetian squadron which attacked him; he was taken prisoner, and the "Tirante" was wholly nailed, 1 March, 1811.

LITANIES. Greek litanies (application), were first used in processions, it is said, about 300, others say about 340. Litanies to the Virgin Mary were first introduced by pope Gregory I, about 595. The first English litany was commanded to be used in the Reformed churches by Henry VIII. in 1533.

LITERARY CLUB (at first called "The Club" and "Johnson's Club"), founded by Dr. Johnson and sir Joshua Reynolds, in 1764. Hawkins, Topham Beacker, Goldsmith, Burke, and Bennet Langton, were among the first members. The opinion formed of a new work by the club was speedily known all over London, and had great influence. Many eminent men have been members of the Club, including H. Walpole, the marquis of Lansdowne, and Bishop Blomfield; Dr. Milman, dean of St. Paul's, was in the chair at the centenary dinner, on 7 June, 1864.

LITERARY FUND, ROYAL, was founded in 1750, to relieve literary men of all nations, by David Williams* the friend of Benjamin Franklin, and incorporated in 1818. LITHIUM, the lightest metal known (specific gravity 0.59; atomic weight 7), is obtained from an alkaline substance termed lita; discovered by M. Arfwedson, a Swede, in 1817.

LITHOFRACTEUR, or "STONE-BREAKER," an explosive material, a modification of dynamite (composed of gun-cotton, nitro-glycerine, with the constituents of gunpowder, and other substances), invented by professor Engels of Cologne, and made by Kr.Bs., in 1869. It was occasionally used by the Germans in the 1870 wars, and was brought into report of for power and effect in the Nant Mawr quarries, near Shrewsbury, 9, 10 May, 1871, and again on 20 Feb. 1872, before the government explosive committee, with similar results.

LITHOGRAPHY (drawing on stone). The invention is ascribed to Alois Senefelder, about 1790, and shortly afterwards the art was announced in Germany, and was known as polyautography. It became partially known in England in 1801 et seq., but its general introduction is referred to Mr. Ackermann, of London, about 1817. Senefelder died in 1841. Improvements have been made by...

LITHOSCOPE. An instrument for distinguishing precious stones, invented by sir David Brewster; described by him Jan. 1864.

LITHOTOMY. The surgical operation of cutting for the stone, it is said, was performed by Ammonius, about 240 B.C. The "small apparatus," so called from the few instruments used in the operation, was practised by Celsus, about A.D. 17. The "high apparatus," was practised (on a criminal at Paris) by Colet, 1457; by Franco, on a child, about 1506; and in England, by Dr. Donglass, about 1519. The "great apparatus" was invented by John de Romanis, and described by his pupil Marianus Sanctus, 1524. The "lateral operation," invented by Franco, much performed in Paris by Frère Jacques, in 1697, has been greatly improved.

LITHOTRITY (or bruising the stone). The apparatus produced by M. Leroy d'Étiolles in 1822 has since been improved.

Prizes of 600 and 10,000 francs were awarded M. Jean Cuvial for his method of operation, 1827 & 1829.

LITHUANIA, formerly a grand-duchy, N. E. of Prussia. The natives (belonging to the Slavonic race) long maintained their independence against the Russians and Poles. In 1586, their grand-duke Jagellon became king of Poland and was baptized; Lithuania was not incorporated with Poland till 1501, when another duke Casimir became king of that country. The countries were formally united in 1569. The larger part of Lithuania now belongs to Russia, the remainder to Prussia.

LITTLE ENGLANDISM, a term defined by sir Edward Grey as an unwise antipathy to the British Empire, 18 July, 1901.

LITURGIES (from the Greek leitourgia, public, and ergon, work). The Greek and Roman liturgies are very ancient, having been committed to writing about the 4th and 5th centuries. The Romish church recognises four: the Roman or Gregorian, the Ambrosian, the Gallican, and the Spanish or Mosarabic. The Greek church has two principal liturgies: St. Charalambus's, and St. Basil's, and several others. Parts of these liturgies are attributed to the Apostles, to St. Ignatius, 250, and St. Ambrose (died 397), and to St. Jerome (died 420).

The present English Liturgy was first composed, and was approved and confirmed by parliament, in 1543. The offices for morning and evening prayer were then put into nearly the same form in which we now have them, and published 1549 and 1552.

At the solicitation of Calvin and others, this liturgy was revised and altered 1553. It was first read in Ireland, in the English language, in 1550, and in Scotland, where it occasioned a tumult, in 1629, and was withdrawn in 1638. The liturgy was revised by Whitehead, formerly chaplain to Anne Boleyn, and by bishops Parker, Grindal, Cox, and Pilkington, dean May, and secretary Smith.

John Knox is said to have used a liturgy for several years. The rev. Robert Lee, of Edinburgh, introduced a form of prayer in public worship, but gave it up when called to discontinue it in May, 1839, he soon after resumed it, and the discussion on the subject ceased only at his death, 14 March, 1868.

See Common Prayer.

LIVERIES OF THE CITY OF LONDON. The term is derived from the custom of the retainers of the lord mayor and sheriffs wearing clothes of the form and colour displayed by those functionaries. Liveries were regulated by statute in 1392, and frequently since. The nobility gave liveries to their retainers. See Companies.

LIVERPOOL (W. Lancashire), is supposed to be noticed in Domesday-book under the name Bonemarie, or Sowndescet. Soon after the conquest William granted that part of the country situated between the rivers Mersey and Ribble to Roger of Poitiers, who, according to Camden, built a castle here, about the year 1089. It afterwards was held by the earls of Chester and dukes of Lancaster. Liverpool is the second city of the Empire. The agreement of the Estates of the Corporation 136, in 1672, now over 12,500,000.£. Changes in the leases, &c., proposed by the Corporation postponed, Jan. 1888. Garston, 16,914 acres and 17,288 inhabitants, included within the city boundaries, Oct. 1901. - In other ancient records its appellations are Liverpoole and Liverpoo, probably in the ancient district the lower pool; though some have deduced its etymology from a pool frequented by an aquatic fowl, called the "Liver," or from a sea-weed of that name; and others, from its having belonged to a family of the name the Liver, whose antiquity is not sufficiently established to justify their conclusion.

The ocean steamers, £5,000,000, passed through the Mersey 15 Jan. 1838.

The Liverpool and Manchester Railway was opened 4 April 1830. It was the first inter-city railway in the world, and it connected Liverpool with Manchester. The railway was 31 miles long, with 14 stations along the way. It was a significant milestone in the development of the railway system in Britain and had a profound impact on the transportation and economic growth of the region.

The Liverpool and Manchester Railway was a crucial piece of infrastructure that facilitated trade and commerce between Liverpool and Manchester. It enabled faster and more efficient transportation of goods and people, supporting the growth of industries such as textiles and shipping, which were central to the economic development of the region.

In 1848, the Liverpool and London Railway was opened, further expanding Liverpool's rail network and connecting it to the wider national railway system. This expansion continued throughout the 19th century, with the opening of new lines to Manchester, Manchester, Chester, and the Wirral, among others.

The introduction of the ocean steamers, £5,000,000, passing through the Mersey in 1838 marked a significant transition in maritime transportation. Steamers were the new wave of transport, offering faster and more reliable voyages compared to sailing ships. This event symbolized Liverpool's strategic position as a hub of international trade.

By the late 19th century, Liverpool had established itself as one of the premier port cities in the world, handling a vast volume of goods and passengers. The railway network played a crucial role in supporting this growth, enabling the efficient movement of resources and people across the country and beyond.

LOCK HOSPITAL, established 1747; the asylum, 1757.

LOCKS, early used by the Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, and the Chinese. Denon has engraved an Egyptian lock of wood. Du Cange mentions locks and padlocks as early as 1381.
Barron's locks (on the many-tumbler principle) were patented in 1778; Bramah's, in 1789; and Chubb's "detector" locks in 1828.
Mr. E. Beckett Denison (aft. lord Grimthorpe, died 1893) invented a lock asserted to be secure against picking in 1852.
New locks have been produced by Messrs. Day and Newell, Yale, Andrews, and others, especially in America.
Mr. Hobbs, an American, exhibited his own locks in the Crystal palace, in 1851. and showed great skill in picking others.
A "Key Beacon" to aid in the recovery of lost keys (large 1s. per annum) established in London in 1833. Chubb's "panic door lock" for easy opening of doors in the house announced Oct. 1857.
Mr. F. J. Biggin's tubular lock, manufactured by a syndicate in London, May, 1890.

LOCOMOTIVES, see Railways. The use of locomotives and mechanically-propelled vehicles on ordinary roads in Great Britain is regulated by acts passed in 1861, 1862, 1878, 1888 and 1903 (Motor Car Act). See Carriages, 1886.

LOCRIANS, an ancient people of Northern Greece. They resisted Philip of Macedon, were aided by the Athenians and Thebans, and defeated by him at Cheronna, 6 or 7 Aug. 338 B.C.

LOCUSTS, one of the plagues of Egypt, 1491 B.C. (Erod. x.) The ravages of locusts in Cyprus greatly checked by the skill and energy of Mr. Richard Mattei and Mr. Samuel Brown, 1881 et seq. A swarm of locusts settled upon the ground about London, and consumed the vegetables; great numbers fell in the streets; they resembled grasshoppers, but were three times the size, and their colours more variegated. 4 Aug. 1878. They invaded Germany in 1749, Poland in 1750, 1757, 1816, and Warsaw in June, 1816. They are said to have been seen in London in 1857. Russia was infested by them in July, 1860; Algeria, severely, in 1866, 1874, 1880, and 1891-2; Sarabia in 1881; and Minnesota, blocks of lodging-houses, 1884; Cyprus, 1884 et seq.; X India, June, July, 1894; Morocco, Dec. 1891, June, 1892; Gibraltar, Algeria and Morocco, 20 April, 1893; Tokar, Soudan, Nov. 1896; Orange River colony, Dec. 1892. Poisoning with arsenic said to be successful in Natal, announced Sept. 1897.

LODGERS paying 10d. a year for a whole year for apartments without furniture, acquired the surcharge, by Reform act passed 15 Aug. 1867. Act to protect their goods from distrain, passed 16 Aug. 1871. The lodger franchise much increased by the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration act of 1878; and by the new Reform Bill, 6 Dec. 1884.

The assembled judges decide that with a non-resident landlord the lodger is a householder; with a resident landlord he must qualify as a compound householder.

LODGING-HOUSES. An act placing common lodging-houses under the watch of the police was passed in 1851. In that year a model lodging-house erected by prince Albert appeared at the Great Exhibition. Since then, blocks of lodging-houses for the poor have been erected by Baroness Burdett-

Coutts and others. Mr. Pembury's donation of 12 March, 1862, has been appropriated for a similar purpose; see Pembury and Rotman. On 10 Nov. 1863, the city of London voted 20,000£, and a piece of land in Victoria-street (now Farringdon-road) for the purpose. See London, 1845.

LODI (N. Italy). Napoleon Bonaparte, commanding the French army, totally defeated the Austrians, under Beauharnais, after a bloody engagement, at the bridge of Lodii, 10 May, 1796. The republican flag floated in Milan a few days after. Monument to Victor Emmanuel inaugurated, 16 Sept. 1883.

LOGARITHMS, the indexes of the ratio of numbers one to another, were invented by John Napier, baron of Merchiston, who published his canon, or table, in 1614. The invention was completed by Mr. Henry Briggs, at Oxford, who published tables, 1617-18. The method of computing by means of marked pieces of ivory was discovered about the same time, and hence called Napier's bones.

"LOGIA" (sayings or oracles) of our Lord, deciphered from a leaf of papyrus found at Oxyrynchus (Behnes) by Missess. Grenfell and Hunt, winter of 1894-7; fresh discoveries 1892-3.

LOGIC, "the science of reasoning." Eminent works on it are by Aristotle; Bacon, Novum Organum; Locke on the Understanding; and the modern treatises on Logic, by archbishop Whately, sir William Hamilton, and Mr. John Stuart Mill.

LOGHERIAN SYSTEM of musical education, commenced by J. B. Logier, in Jan. 1815, and introduced into the chief towns of the United Kingdom, Prussia, &c. He died in 1846.

LOG-LINE, used in navigation, about 1570; first mentioned by Donne in 1577. It is divided into spaces of 50 feet, and the way which the ship makes is measured by a half-minute sand-glass, which bears nearly the same proportion to an hour that 30 feet bear to a mile.

LOGOGRAPH, apparatus invented by Mr. W. H. Barlow, about 1874, to give graphic representation of the vibratory motions of the air-waves of speech, somewhat resembling a telegraphic message.

LOGOGRAPHIC PRINTING, in which the common words were cast in one mass, was patented by Henry Johnson and Mr. John Walter of the Times in 1785.

LOGRONO, see Najera.

LOI DES SUSPECTS, enacted by the French convention, 17 Sept. 1793, during the reign of terror, filled the prisons of Paris. The Public Safety bill, of a similar character, was passed, 18 Feb. 1898, shortly after Oresti's attempt on the life of the emperor, Napoleon III.

LOLLARDS (by some derived from the German lolten, to sing in a low tone, by others derived from the English verb to toll or lounge), the name given to the first reformers of the Roman Catholic religion in England, the followers of Wykcliffe. The sect is also said to have been founded in 1315 by Walter Lollard, who was burnt for heresy at Cologne in 1322. The Lollards are said to have devoted themselves to acts of mercy. The first Lollard martyr in England was William Sawtrey, parish priest of St. Osith, London, 12 Feb. 1401, when the Lollards were proscribed by parliament, and numbers of them were burnt alive. Sir John Cobham, 100, Oldcastle, a follower of Wycliffe, was burnt in 1852 by treason and condemned, Sept. 1413. He escaped to Wales, where he was captured, and brought to London and burnt, 25 Dec. 1418. Lollards' tower, part of the bishop's prison, was near St. Paul's. Dr. Maitland.

LOMBARDISTS, disciples of Peter Lombard, the schoolman, bishop of Paris, author of the "Book of Sentences," who died in 1164.

LOMBARD MERCHANTS, in England, were understood to be composed of natives of some one of the four republics of Genoa, Lucca, Florence, or Venice. Anderson. Lombard usurers were sent to England by pope Gregory IX. to lend money to convents, communities, and private persons who were not able to pay down the tenths which were collected throughout the kingdom with great rigour that year, 13 Hen. III. 1220. They had offices in the street named after them to this day. Their numerous transactions caused their expulsion from the kingdom in the reign of Elizabeth.

LOMBARDY (N. Italy) derived its name from the Lombards, a German tribe from Brandenburg, said (doubtfully) to have been invited into Italy by Justinian to serve against the Goths. Their chief, Albin, established a kingdom which lasted from 365 to 774. The last king, Desiderius, was deposed by Charlemagne. (For a list of Lombard kings, see Italy.) About the end of the 9th century the chief towns of Lombardy fortified themselves, and became republics. The first Lombard league, consisting of Milan, Venice, Pavia, Modena, &c., was formed to restrain the power of the German emperors, in 1167. On 29 May, 1179, they defeated the emperor Frederick Barbarossa at Legnano, and eventually compelled him to sign the treaty of Constantinople in 1188. In 1220 another league was formed against Frederick II, which was also successful. After this, petty tyrants rose in most of the cities, and foreign influence quickly followed. The Guelf and Ghibelline factions greatly distracted Lombardy; and from the 13th century to the present time, it has been, contended for by the German and French sovereigns. The house of Austria obtained it in 1748, and held it till 1797, when it was conquered by the French, who incorporated it with the Cisalpine republic, and in 1805 with the kingdom of Italy. On the breaking up of the French empire in 1815, the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, established by the allied sovereigns and given to Austria, who had lost her Flemish possessions. Lombardy and Venice revolted, and joined the king of Sardinia in March, 1848; but they did not support him well, and were again subjected to Austria after his defeat at Novara, 23 March, 1849. An armistice for the military offences was signed; the Great jealousy of Sardinia was felt by Austria after 1849. In 1857 diplomatic relations were suspended; and in April, 1859, war broke out; the Austrians crossing the Ticino and entering Piedmont. The French emperor declared war against Austria, and immediately sent troops into Italy. The Austrians were defeated at Montebello, 20 May; Palestro, 30 May; Magenta, 4 June; and Solferino, 2 July. By the peace of Villafranca (11 July), the largest Lombardy was ceded to Louis Napoleon, who transferred it to the king of Sardinia. It now forms part of the kingdom of Italy, to which Venice was also surrendered by the treaty of Vienna, 3 Oct. 1867. Population, 1891, 4,273,188; 1910 (est.), 4,600,350.

Lombok, an island in the Indian Archipelago, subject to the Dutch since 1863. See Holland, 1894, 4 seq.

Lonato (Brescia, N. Italy). Here Napoleon Bonaparte defeated Wurmser and the Austrians, 3 Aug. 1796.

London, the capital of the British empire. The earliest history is traditional. The Celtic name is said to have been Lyn-don, lake-forest; Tacitus, in the first century, calls it Londinium, and describes it as an important city; its site afterwards was called Augusta, an appellation frequently given to great cities; several other forms of the name appear in documents, such as Lundeniugyr, Londonia, and London-vic. In 1860, London and the suburbs were estimated to cover 121 square miles (11 miles each way, being three times as large as in 1800); in 1880, 124 square miles; in 1905, about 700 square miles. London was constituted an "administrative" county by the local government act, 1888, including as rateable value seven-eighths of Middlesex, about two-thirds of Surrey, and nearly one-third of Kent. The population of the "city" in 1861, 1,508,859; 1881, 2,255,008; 1891, 3,052,700; 1901, 3,751,927. London and suburbs, 1891 of seq, see table in article Population. Census of 27 boroughs in the county of London, 6,527,848, 31 March, 1901. Estimated population, to the middle of 1900, 4,539,538 (total, with Outer Ring, 6,527,848), 31 March, 1901. Population of corporation, 1871, 685,397; 1881, 956,241; in 1891, 1,213,612; expenditure, 1,104,481; in 1905, revenue, 1,213,206; expenditure, 1,187,231; revenue, 514,565; expenditure, 509,329.

Annual rateable value (metropolitan district), April, 1881, 27,105,488; the "city," 9,533,361; gross value, 43,614,632; rateable value of the county of London (exclusive of the "city"), 21,099, 443,483. The "city," 5,141,587; total net value of London (excluding the rates) on March 31, 1898, was 10,903,231. Revenue (estimated) London county council, 1910, 11,482,607; expenditure (estimated), 10,824,094. Gross debt, 52,116,000. The metropolitan police district extends over a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross, exclusive of the city of London, enclosing an area of 404 square miles. The "city" of London extends from London Bridge to the North Foreland. Tonnage entering and leaving the port, 1871, 1,700,000; 1885, 12,000,000; registered tonnage of vessels entering and leaving the port for 1908, 1,405,814 tons, as against 2,588,920 in 1904. The "city" returns 2 instead of 4 members to parliament by the act of 1885. "London Statistics," published by London county council, 1893, 1908. See Dock, Mayor, Metropolitan Board of Works, London Council County, Treaties, and City's Cost.

The town appears to have prospered under British, Roman, and Saxon rules, and to have been much indebted to Alfred and his successors, but suffered greatly by the Danes; it was not attacked by William I, by whom the citizens were conciliated, and its corporate government was recognized by his son Henry I. The city received many favours from the Plantagenet kings, but frequently resisted their exactions. London is governed by the lord mayor, the court of aldermen, the common council, and other offices. London was not included in the Municipal Corporations act, 1835. The London county council was constituted by the Local Government act passed in 1888.

It is still preserved in the city archives. This charter is in a beautiful Saxon character, a slip of parchment six inches long, and one breadth, and is in English as follows: "William the king greeveth William the bishop, and gostith the portreeve, and all the burgesses within London, French and English, friendly. And I acquit you, that I will that ye be all there law worthy as ye were in king Edward's days. And I will that every child be his father's heir, after his father's days. And I will not suffer that any man do any wrong God preserve you!

This terrible pestilence broke out in India, and spreading itself westward through every country on the globe, reached England. Its ravages in London were such that the common cemeteries were not sufficient for the interment of the dead, and various pieces of ground without the walls were assigned for burial-places. The records of the City register the particulars and the results of the actions of the Charter house, where upwards of 90,000 bodies were then deposited. This disorder did not subside till 1357. Legh."
This proclamation or decree was dated from Norwich, 7 July, 1560, and it was forbidden to erect new buildings where none had before existed in the memory of man. The ordinance of the metropolis was deemed calculated to increase the size of the city, create a trouble in governing such multitude of souls, multiplying of beggars and idle people and an increase of artisans more than could live together; impoverishing other cities for lack of inhabitants. The decree stated that lack of air, lack of room to walk and shoot, etc., arose out of too crowded a city. A proclamation to the same effect was also issued by James I.

LONG ISLAND or FLATBUSH (N. America), Battle of, 27 Aug. 1776, between the British troops under sir William Howe, and the revolted Americans, who suffered a severe defeat, after a well-fought action, losing 2000 men killed and wounded and 1000 prisoners.

LONGITUDE, determined by Hipparchus, at Nice, who fixed the first degree in the Canaries, 102 B.C. Harrison made a time-keeper, in A.D. 1759, which in two voyages was found to correct the longitude within the limits required by the act of parliament 12 Anne, 1714; and obtained the reward; see Harrison’s Timepiece. The chronometers of Arnold, Earnshaw, and Breguet, are highly esteemed. Chronometers are now received on trial at Greenwich Observatory. The act enabling the discovery of the longitude at sea was repealed in 1828. The Bayan des Longitudes at Paris was established in 1795.

LONGWY (N.E. France), a frontier town, was taken 22 July, by the allied army of Austrians and Russians, 22 July, 1812, the beginning of the great war. It was again taken 18 Sept. 1815. After a bombardment it surrendered to the Germans, 25 Jan. 1871.

LOOCHOO ISLES: N. Pacific; long nominally subject to Japan; with a newly independent king. Disputes between China and Japan respecting them, 1859; the isles annexed by Japan, 1879.

LOOM was used by the Egyptians. The weaver’s otherwise called the Dutch loom, was brought into use in London from Holland, about 1676. There were, in 1825, about 250,000 hand-looms in Great Britain, and 75,000 power-looms, each being equal to three hand-looms, making twenty-two yards each per day. The steam-loom was introduced in 1807; see Cotton, Electric-loom, Jacquard, Power-loom.

The needle-loom, invented by a German family in the United States, substituting needles for shuttles, successful in weaving ribbons, &c., exhibited in London Nov. 19.

LOSHAIU S, a preatory toleue Indian tribe, about 300 miles east of Calcutta. They frequently robbed the British tea plantations, killing the planters and carrying off their children. An expedition to chastise them was successful, Dec. 1871.

LORD, see Lady. When printed in the English Bible in small capitals Lord stands for Jehovah, the self-existing God, the name first revealed to Moses, 1491 a.c. Exod. vi. 3. When Lord is in ordinary type, it represents Omnium, lord or master.

LORDS. The nobility of England date their creation from 1066, when William Fitz-Osborn is said to have been made earl of Hereford by William I.; and afterwards Walter d'Evreux, earl of Salisbury; Cosi, earl of Northumberland; Henry de Ferecles, earl of Derby; and Gherbod (a Fleming) earl of Chester. Twenty-two other peers were made in this sovereign's reign. The first peer created by patent was Lord Beauchamp of Holt Castle, by Richard II. in 1387. In Scotland, Gilchrist was created earl of Annandale by Malcolm III. 1357. In Ireland, sir John de Courcy was created baron of Kingsale, &c., in 1181; the first peer after the obtaining of that kingdom by Henry II.

LORDS, HOUSE OF. The peers of England were summoned ad consilium, to consult, in early reigns, and by writ, 6 & 7 John, 1205; but the earliest writ extant is 44 Hen. III. 1263. The commons did not form a part of the great council of the nation until some ages after the conquest; see Parliaments. The house of lords is the spiritual as well as temporal peers of Great Britain. The bishops are supposed to hold certain ancient baronies under the king, in right whereof they have seats in this house. Some of the temporal lords sit by descent, and some by election; others by election, since the union with Scotland in 1707, and with

* Peers of England are free from all arrests of debts, owing the king his hereditary counsellors, therefore a peer cannot be outlawed in any civil action, and no attachment may be levied against his person; but execution may be taken upon his lands and goods. For the same reason, they are free from all attendance at courts leet or serjeants' terms; or, in case of a riot, from attending the peace commissioners. He can act as a justice of the peace in any part of the kingdom. See Baron, Earl, &c.

Ireland, 1801. In 1710, with the king's consent, a bill for hunting the power of the sovereign of creating peers, was introduced into the lords and twice passed, but twice rejected by the commons.—Scotland elects 12 representative peers, and Ireland 28 temporal peers for life. The house of lords in June, 1919, consisted of 3 princes of the blood, 2 archbishops, 22 dukes, 33 marquises, 124 earls, 40 viscounts, 334 barons, 25 bishops, and 16 Scottich and 28 Irish representative peers; in all, 610.

LORETO, near Ancona, Italy. Here is the Casa Santa, or Holy House, in which it is pretended the Virgin Mary lived at Nazareth, and said to have been carried by angels into Dalmatia from Galilee in 1291, and brought here a few years after. The lady of Loreto, gaudily dressed, stands upon an altar holding the infant Jesus in her arms, surrounded by angels. The statue was taken by the French in 1797; the holy image, which had been carried to France, was brought back with pomp, 5 Jan. 1803.

L'ORIENT (W. France). Lord Bridgeport off this port defeated the French fleet, 23 June 1795. The loss of the French was severe: that of the British inconsiderable. — The French flag-ship, L'Orient, blew up during the battle of the Nile, 1 Aug. 1798. Admiral Brueys and about 900 men perished. Strike and riot, 4, 5 Aug. 1893.

LORRAINE (Lotharingia), formerly a French now a German province, became a kingdom under Lothaire (son of the emperor Lothaire I.) about 855; and was divided at his death, in 860, part of it being made a duchy. From the first hereditary duke, Gerard, nominated by the emperor Henry III., in 1048, descended the house of Lorraine, represented now by the emperor of Austria, whose ancestor, the empress Maria Theresa, married in 1739 Francis, then duke of Lorraine, then of Tuscany. Lorraine, given to the dethroned king of Poland, Stanislaus L., for life, was, at his death, in 1792, united to France; see Nancy. Lorraine was the seat of war in Aug. 1870, and about the fifth part, including Metz and Thionville, was annexed to Germany at the peace, 20 Feb. 1871. Visit of the German emperor and empress, 15 Oct.; the statue of emperor Frederick (William) III., at Worth unveiled, 12 Oct. 1855.

LOTS. Casting lots, as an appeal to God, was sacred among the Jews, Deuteronomy xvi. 33: It was employed in the division of the land of Canaan, about 1441 B.C., by Joshua (XIV.), and in the election of Matthias the apostle, Acts v. 29. Acts i. 1. — Lots for life or death have been frequently cast. For an instance, see Wales, 1819, note.

LOTTERIES are said to have originated in Florence about 1350, and to have been legalized in France in 1539, and soon became common. They were prohibited by pope Benedict XIII. (1724-30), and sanctioned by Clement XII. (1730-40). See Art Union under Arts and Paris (exhibition 1881).

The first mentioned in English history took place 27 day and night, at the western door of St. Paul's cathedral. It contained 40,000 "lots" at 10s each lot, the profits were for repairing the harbours, and the prizes were pieces of plate.

A lottery, granted by the king, in favour of the colony of Virginia (prizes, pieces of plate), drawn near St. Paul's, 29 June-20 July, 1742. First lottery by means of money ballots, 1739. Lottery established (for more than 150 years) yielded a large annual revenue to the crown). 1753. Lottery in aid of the British Museum.

Hauerton-square lottery. 28 Dec. 1856. Twelve million national lottery tickets of one franc each, sold at Paris to pay prizes to exhibitors, and expenses of working men visitors, 1832; 1st prize worth 10,000,000 francs, 2nd prize 5,000,000 francs, total 130,000,000 francs. Drawing began 26 Jan. 1857.

Missing Word Competition. In 1852, some weekly periodicals occasionally printed a sentence in which one word was omitted, and offered a money prize to the person who correctly supplied the deficiency: no copies being lost. This was condemned by sir John Bridge at Bow-street as a species of lottery, and several persons were fined. This sentence was confirmed by Mr. Justice Stringer in the Chancery Court in the case of Barkey and others v. Pearson (in relation to Pearson's Weekly), and he decided that the 2,500 francs, which had been paid into court, should be returned to Mr. Pearson, to be distributed by him to the claimants, to whom the court could give no help, as the affair was illegal, 9 Feb. 1854. This was done. —See Trials, 4 June, 1859. The commission on lotteries and related literature issued its report, 15 Sept. 1863.

LOWESTOFT, a municipal borough, seaport, and popular watering-place on the coast of Suffolk, in proximity to the "breeds." The older part of the town, was built in front of the sea, is of considerable antiquity, and includes the parish church, 183 ft. in length, with a tower and spire, 120 ft. high, dating from the 14th century. Among its vicars were Whiston, the famous mathematician and translator of "Josephus," and Dr. Potter, primate of all England. In 1349, 1547, 1579 and 1603, Lowestoft was visited by plague. During the civil war Cromwell, in 1643, occupied the town.
It was partially destroyed by a great fire, 1644.

LOUVRE, in Paris, is said to have been a royal residence in the reign of Dagobert, 648. It was a prison-tower constructed by Philippe Augustus in 1204. It afterwards became a library, and Charles VI. made it his palace (about 1384). The new buildings, begun by Francis I. in 1528, were enlarged and adorned by successive kings, particularly Louis XIV.—Napoleon I., turned it into a museum, and about 1226; but was frequently attacked by the Danes. The French took it by assault, 6 Nov. 1806, and Napoleon incorporated it with his empire in 1810. On his fall in 1814 it became once more a free imperial city. It joined the North German confederation 18 Aug. 1866. The Elbe and Trave canal, connecting the North Sea and Baltic, opened by the emperor, 16 June, 1900. Population in 1900, 82,328; in 1905, 81,954.

LYRE. Its invention is ascribed to the Grecian Hermes (in Latin Mercury), who, according to Homer, gave it to Apollo, the first that played upon it with method, and accompanied it with poetry. The invention of the primitive lyre, with three strings, is ascribed to the first Egyptian Hermes. It is said that Terpander added several strings to the lyre, making the number seven, 673 B.C., and that Phrynis, a musician of Mitylene, added two more, making nine, 438 B.C.
MACADAMISING, a system of road-making invented by Mr. John Macadam, and published by him in an essay, in 1819, having practised it in Ayrshire. He prescribed stones to be broken to six ounces weight, and the use of clean flints and granite chippings. He received 10,000l. from parliament, was appointed surveyor-general of the metropolitan roads in 1827, and died in 1836; see Roads.

MACAO (in Quang-tong, S. China) was given to the Portuguese as a commercial station in 1580 (in return for their assistance against pirates), subject to an annual tribute, which was remitted in 1886. Here Cameos composed part of the "Luxad." The abuses of the Coolie trade by the Portuguese led to its abolition here by the British and Chinese governments in 1873. Outbreak of plague reported, 23 April, 1895.

MACARONI. This name, given to a poem by Theophilus Folengo, 1590, continues to designate thrilling performances, as buffoonery, puns, anagrams, "wit without wisdom, and humour without sense." His poems was so called from a nutritious preparation of wheat-four in tubes and threads. These poems, in Italy and France, gave rise to Macaroni academies, and in England to Macaroni clubs (about 1777), when everything ridiculous in dress and manners was called "Macaroni."

MACCABEES, a name of the Asmoneans, who commenced their career during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, 167 B.C. Mattathias, a priest, resisted the tyranny, and his son Judas Maccabeus, defeated the Syrians in three battles, 166, 165 B.C.; but fell in an ambush, 161 B.C. His brother Jonathan made a league with the Romans and Lacedaemonians, and after an able administration was treacherously killed at Ptolemais by Tryphon, 143 B.C. His brother and successor, Simon, was also murdered, 135 B.C. John Hyrcanus, son of Simon, succeeded. His son Judas, called also Aristobulus, took the title of king, 107 B.C. The history of the Maccabees is contained in five books of that name, two of which are included in our Apocrypha. Four are accounted canonical by the Roman Catholic church; none by Protestant communions.

The magnificent Maccabee chapel at Geneva, founded in 1415, by the cardinal Jean de Brezziere, president of the council of Constance and the place of his sepulture. The building, much injured and desecrated at the time of the Riformation, was finally renovated in 1833 and fitted up as a museum.

MACE a weapon anciently used by the cavalry of most nations, was originally a spiked club, hung at the saddle-bow, and usually of metal. Maces were also early ensigns of authority borne before officers of state, the top being made in the form of an open crown, and commonly of silver gilt. The lord chancellor and speaker of the house of commons have maces borne before them. Edward III. granted to London the privilege of having gold or silver maces carried before the lord mayor, sheriffs, aldermen, and corporation. 1354. It was with the mace usually carried before the lord mayor on state occasions, that Walworth, lord mayor of London, is said to have knocked the rebel Wat Tyler off his horse, for rudely approaching Richard II., a courier afterwards despatching him with his dagger. 13 July, 1347. Cromwell, entering the house of commons to disperse its members and dissolve the parliament, ordered one of his soldiers to "take away that bumbler," the mace, which was done, and the doors of the house locked, 20 April, 1653.

MACEDON (N. Greece). The first kingdom is said to have been founded by Caranus, about 761 B.C. It was successively under the protection of Athens, of Thebes, and Sparta, until the reign of Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, who by his political wisdom and warlike exploits made it a powerful kingdom, and paved the way for his son's greatness.

Nineteenth Century 1877

MAGDALEN, a very strong place in Abyssinia (which see). On Good Friday, 10 April, 1868, the troops of the emperor Theodore attacked the first brigade of the British army under sir Robert Napier, and were repulsed with great slaughter. On the next day all the European prisoners were given up, but Theodore himself refused to surrender; and on Easter Monday, 13 April, Magdala was stormed, and Theodore himself killed—it is said by his own hand.—British loss, 2 killed; 20 wounded: Abyssinian loss, about 500 killed and wounded out of about 5000. Magdala was burnt to the ground by the British, 17 April, 1868.

MAGDALENS AND MAGDALENETTES, communities of nuns. The order of penitents of St. Magdalen was founded 1272, at Marseilles. The convent of Naples was endowed by queen Santa, 1321. That at Metz was instituted in 1452. At Paris, 1392. The Magdalen at Rome was endowed by pope Leo X., in 1515, and favoured by Clement VII. in 1534. The Magdalen hospital, London, was founded in 1578, under the direction of Dr. Dodd. The asylum in Dublin was opened in June, 1760.

MAGDEBURG (Prussia). The archbishopric was founded about 697. The city suffered much during the religious wars in Germany. It was besieged and taken by the elector Maurice, Nov. 1550, and Nov. 1551; blockaded for seven months by the imperialists, under Wallenstein, in 1629; and barbarously sacked by Tilly on 10 May, 1631. It was given to Brandenburg in 1648, was taken by the French, 8 Nov. 1806; annexed to the kingdom of Westphalia, 9 July, 1807; restored to Prussia, Nov. 1813. Valuable literary collection burnt 6 April, 1891. Population, 1900, 229,665; 1910 (est.), 268,000.

The Magdeburg Experiment is shown by means of a hollow sphere, composed of two hemispheres, fitting air-tight. When the air is exhausted by the air-pump, the hemispheres are held together by the pressure of the atmosphere, and require great force to separate them. The apparatus was suggested by von Guericke, the inventor of the air-pump. He died in 1686. Braune.

MAGELLAN, STRAITS OF (connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans), was passed by Ferdinand de Magellanes (Magellan), a Portuguese, on 27 Nov. 1520. He gave the latter ocean its name on account of its calmness. Magellan completed the first voyage round the world, with a fleet of discovery fitted out by the emperor Charles V., but was killed in 1521. The Spaniards had a fort here, called Cape Famine, because the garrison perished from want.

MAGENTA, a small town in Lombardy, near which the French and Sardinians defeated the Austrians, 4 June, 1859. The emperor Louis Napoleon commanded, and he and the king of Sardinia were in the thickest of the fight. It is said that 55,000 French and Sardinians, and 7,500 Austrians were engaged. The former are asserted to have lost 4000 killed and wounded, and the Austrians 10,000, besides 7000 prisoners. The French generals Esparre and Clerc were killed. The arrival of general MacMahon during a deadly struggle between the Austrians and the French, greatly contributed to the victory. The contest near the bridge of Buffalora was very severe. The Austrians fought well, but were badly commanded. The emperor and king entered Milan on 8 June following; MacMahon and Regnault d'Angely were created marshals of France. A monument erected here in memory of the slain was solemnly inaugurated 4 June, 1872. The red dye, rosamine, obtained by chemists from gas tar, is termed magenta; see Amuric.

MAGI, an order of priests and teachers among the ancient Medes and Persians, with much political power. One of them who on the death of Cambyses espoused the cause of Darius claimed the throne of Persia, was deposed by Darius Hystaspes, 521 B.C., and a massacre of the Mazi followed. They retained their religious position till the later Roman empire. The constitution of the order is traditionally assigned to Zoroaster, the Zarathustra of the Zendavesta, whose time and very existence are uncertain, the 6th century b.c. being mentioned. He is said to have taught the knowledge of Ormuzd, the supreme good principle, to the Mazi, whom he classified as learners, masters, and perfect scholars, the possessors of all spiritual power, and the science of the age, see Parsees. The name Mazi has been applied to the "wise men" of Matt. ii., and the Parsees at Bombay are descendants of the Greeks or fire-worshippers.

MAGIC, see Alchemy, Witchcraft, &c. The invention of the Magic Lantern is ascribed to Roger Bacon, about 1260, but more correctly to Athanasius Kircher, who died 1680. David Salomon in a discourse at the Royal Institution on "Optical Projection," exhibited an arrangement of the magic lantern, in which by the use of lenses magnifying up to 4.50 diameters, he stated that he was enabled to magnify a postage stamp to the size of 21 acres, 20 Feb. 1802.
MAGISTRATES. 868 MAGNOLIA.

MAGISTRATES, see Justices. Stipendiary borough magistrates may be appointed by 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, 1833; and by 26 & 27 Vict. c. 97, 1853. Henry Fielding, the novelist, was acting magistrate for Westminster and Bow-street. There are 14 metropolitan police courts and 2 city courts. June, 1810.

MAGNA CHARTA. Its fundamental parts were derived from Saxon charters, continued by Henry I. and his successors. On 20 Nov. 1214, the archbishop of Canterbury and the barons met at St. Edmondsbury. On 6 Jan. 1215, they presented their demands to King John, who deferred his answer. On 10 May they were censured by the pope. On 24 May they marched to London, and the king was compelled to yield. The charter was sealed by John at Runnymede, near Windsor, 15 June, 1215. It was many times confirmed, by Henry III. and his successors. This last king's grand charter was granted in 1225, and was assured by Edward I.; see FoRests. The original MS. charter is lost. The finest MS. copy, which is at Lincoln, was reproduced by photographers in the "National MSS." published by government, 1865.

MAGNA GREGIA, the independent states founded by Greek colonists in South Italy, Sicily, &c. Cumae, in Campania, is said to have been founded in 734 B.C., Pandosia and Metapontum in 724 B.C. These states were ruined through siding with Hannibal when he invaded Italy, 210 B.C.

NAMEKIAN. (N. Italy.) Here Scherer and a French army were defeated by the Austrians under Kray, 5 April, 1792.

MAGNESIA (Asia Minor.) Here Antiochus the great, king of Syria, was defeated by the Scipios, 190 B.C. — Magnesia alba, the white alkaline earth used in medicine, was in use in the beginning of the 18th century. Its properties were developed by Dr. Black in 1755.

MAGNESIUM, a metal first obtained from magnesia by sir Humphry Davy in 1808, and since produced in larger quantities by Bussy, Daville, and especially by Mr. E. Sonnstadt, in 1824-3. Its light when burnt is very brilliant, and is so rich in chemical rays that it may be used in photography. Lamps made for burning magnesium wire were employed by the excavators of the tunnel through Mount Cenis. By its light photographs of the interior of the Pyramids were taken in 1865. Lakin's magnesium lamp (in which the metal is burnt in the form of a powder) was exhibited at the Royal Institution on 1 June, 1864, and before the British Association at Nottingham in Aug. 1865.

MAGNETISM. The attractive power of the lodestone or magnet was early known, and is referred to by Homer, Aristotle, and Pliny; it was also known to the Chinese and Arabians. The Greeks are said to have discovered the lodestone Magnesia in Asia, 1690 B.C. Roger Bacon is said to have been acquainted with its properties of pointing to the North (1294). The invention of the mariner's compass is ascribed to Flavio Gioia, a Neapolitan, about 1300; but it was known in Norway previous to 1266, and is mentioned in a French poem, 1150. See under Electricity.

Robert Norman, of London, discovered the dip of the needle about 1575. Gilbert's treatise "De Magnete," published 1600. Halley's theory of magnetic variations published 1701. H. W. observed that a suspended bar of iron becomes temporarily magnetic by position 1722. Artificial magnets made by Dr. Gowen Knight 1746. The variation of the compass was proved by Boulle, about 1680; the diurnal variation by Graham, 1722; and on which latter Canton made 4000 observations previous to 1756. Colburn compiled a torsion balance for determining the laws of attraction and repulsion, 1786; also investigated by Michell, Enfer, Lambert, Robinson, and others, 1750-1800. The deflection of the magnetic needle by the volition current was discovered by Osted 1819. Mr. Abraham invents a magnetic guard for persons engaged in grinding ears, 1830. The magnetic effects of the violet rays of light exhibited by Morelloni, 1814; polarity of a sewing needle so magnetised shown by Mrs. Somerville, 1825. Mr. Christie proves that heat diminishes magnetic force, 1832. Sir W. Snow Harris invents various forms of the compass, 1833. Magnetic north pole discovered by commander (after) James Clark Ross (during sir John Ross's second voyage) by Lamont, 1828; and verified by Dr. Buchan, 1831.

Electricity produced by the rotation of a magnet by professor Faraday, 1831; his researches on the action of the magnet on light, on the magnetic properties of flames, air, and gases (published 1834), on diamaagnetism (1834), on magneto-crystalline action (1842), on atmospheric magnetism (1850), on the magnetic force, 1851-1907. Magnetic observations established in the British colonies under the superintendence of col. Edward Sabine 1840, seq. Prof. Toddall proves the existence of diaphagmatic polarity 1856. Mr. Archibald Smith described the results of his investigations respecting the deviation of the compass in iron ships at the Royal Institution, 9 Feb., 1866. Wm. Robinson patented a method of making wrought iron from cast iron by the help of magnetism, 1847, patented, July, 1867.

In the 19th century knowledge of the phenomena of magnetism was greatly increased by the labours of Arago, Ampere, Hanstein, Gauss, Weber, Poggendorff, Sabine, Lamont, Du Moncel, Archibald Smith, sir Wm. Thomson (lord Kelvin), &c. (see Animal Magnetism.)

MAGNETO-ELECTRICITY, the discovery of professor Faraday; see under Electricity. Magneto-electricity has been applied to telegraphic and to lighthouse purposes. The South Foreland lighthouse, near Dover, was illuminated by the magneto-electric light in the winter of 1838-9 and 1849-50 (the light removed to Dungeness in 1861), the Lizards, by Dr. C. William Siemens's magneto-electric light, 1878. See further.)

MAGNOLIA. Magnolia l paniculata, from Brazil, 1688. The rare-leaved Magnolia, Magnolia macrophylla, from America, 1734. The dwarf Magnolia, Magnolia pumila, from China, in 1789; and (also from China) the brown stalked, 1789; the purple, 1760; and the slender, 1804.
MAHDIP (Guided by God), a name assumed by several Mahometan fanatics claiming to be divinely selected successors. An example is found in Ibn Tun евр, the Almohade Mahdi in the 12th century. See Babylon, and for the latest Mahdi see Baudan, 1881, et seq. A Mahdi rose in Bokhara, named Mahomed Abdallah Ben Oman, May, 1884. See Derrisheh. "Ten Years' Captivity in the Mahdi's Camp" by Father Ohrwinder, published 1880. Total defeat of the Khedives at Qudurnan, 2 Sept. (1883), again at Oudnehkuk, when he and his chief emirs were killed (see Baudan, 24 Nov. 1891), and consequent end of Mahdisms.

MAHOMEDPORE, see Mohedpore.

MAHOGANY, the wood of the Swietenia mahogani, a tree some 100 ft. high, native to the West Indies. The earliest notion of mahogany is in connection with the repairing of some of sir Walter Raleigh's ships at Trinidad, 1597. Said to have been brought to England at the end of the 17th century as balletst from the West Indies. First used for cabinet-work by a cabinet-maker named Woodston, and employed as a new material for furniture in the beginning of the 18th century.

MAHOMETANISM embodied in the Koran, includes—the unity of God, the immortality of the soul, predetermination, a last judgment, and a denial of the perfectibility of man. The Koran was revealed to him by the angel Gabriel during a period of twenty-three years. He enjoined on his disciples circumcision, prayer, alms, frequent abstinence, and fasting, and permitted polygamy and concubinage.

The Mahometan year, 123-124. Months; Shawall (begins 11 Jan., 1492); Dulkadad (9 Feb.); Dulliegin (3 March); Muharram (10 April); Sperhar (20 May); Rabia 1 (2 June); Rabia II. (3 July); Jomada I. (6 Aug.); Jomada II. (4 Sept.); Rajab (2 Oct.); Shaban (5 Nov.); Ramadan (6 Dec.).

(The dates are given in the best abancards.)

Mahomet, Mohammed (the name is spelled many ways), born at Meccah, 570 or 579. Announced himself as a prophet about 581.

Fled from his enemies to Medina (his flight is called the Hegira) 15 July, 622.

Defeats his enemies (the Korkish, the Jauis, &c.) 623.

Defeats the Christians at Muta 629.

Is acknowledged as a sovereign 630.

Dies, it is said, of slow poison, administered by a Jewess to test his diviné character 8 June, 632.

The Mahometans are divided into several sects, the two chief being the Sunnis, or the Orthodox (which recognizes Abi Bekker's father, in law of Mahomed, in preference to Omar and Ali), and the Shiites (Sectaries), or Fatimites, the followers of Ali, who married Fatima, the prophet's daughter.

The former (also called Summites) recognize the "Sunna" (traditions) sayings of Mahomet (supplementary to the Koran) which the Shiites regard as heretical. Many of the Shiites were murdered A.D. 680, and a miracle play and a festival in their honour are still observed.

The Ottoman empire is the chief seat of the Sunnites, the sultan being considered the representative of the caliphs. Persia has been for centuries the stronghold of the Shiites.

Their progress in France was stopped by their defeat at Tours by Charles Martel, in 732.

The Mahometan Arab, stern-faced and stern-eyed, conquered Arabia, North Africa, and part of Asia, in the 7th century; in the 8th they invaded Europe, conquering Spain, where they founded the caliphate of Cordova, which lasted from 756 to 1031, when it was broken up into smaller governments, the last of which, the kingdom of Granada, endured till its subjugation by Ferdinand in 1492; but the Moorish Mahometans were not finally expelled from Spain till 1609.

After a long contest, the Turks under Mahomet II. took Constantinople; he made it his capital and the chief seat of his religion.

Though considered to be declining, Mahometanism is calculated as including 250 millions amongst its votaries.

Comorosleel Tabyhe, a Mahometan, admitted to practise as an attorney in England, having taken the oaths upon the Koran Nov. 1838.

Budroomleel Tabyhe, a Mahometan, called to the bar 30 April, 1867.

The first Mahometan mosque in England erected at Mayfurl, Woking, Surrey, completed by the extravagances of Dr. W. Lether (not a Mahometan), Aug. 1885; the aumr of Afghanistan, by his son, presents 900 to the mosque, 4 June, 1895.

The representation of a play called Mahomed on the English stage, was stopped by request, aided by the intervention of the sultan 30 Dec., 1890.

A conference of Moslems produced against attacks on their religion, &c., London 22 May, 1893.

300,000 persons of Ceylon resolve to memorialise King Edward, asking him to withdraw order compelling Mahometan advocates to plead without uncovered heads 11 Dec., 1905.

Mahometan congress in St. Petersburg forbidden 29 Jan., 1906.

Lord Minto received a delegation at Simla, who presented an address from the Mahometan community of India 1 Oct.

All Mahometans have long been prominent among Mussulmans of India, feelings of loyalty to Britain 23 Oct.

Inauguration of the Hedjaz railway from Damascus to the Holy city 1 Sept. 1908.

MAHRATTAS, a people of Hindostan, who originally dwelt north-west of the Deccan, which they overran about 1676. They endeavoured to overcome the Mogul, but were restrained by the Afghans. They entered into alliance with the East India Company in 1767, made war against it in 1774, again made peace in 1782, and were finally subdued in 1818. See India (1805, et seq.), Mahrattah and Indoars.

MAID, see Huna Maid, Elizabeth baron, and John of . Aire, maid of Orleans.

MAIDA (Calabria) where the French, commanded by general Regnier, were signally defeated by the British under major-general sir John Stuart, 1 July, 1809.

MAIDEN, see Guillaumine.

MAIDENS of HONOUR. Anne, daughter of Francis II., duke of Brittany, and queen of Charles VIII. and Louis XII. of France (1483-1485), had young and beautiful ladies about her person, called maids of honour. The queen of Edward I. of England is said to have had four maids of honour (1272-1307); queen Victoria had eight; queen Alexandra has four.

MAIDSTONE, Kent, a British town, anciently termed the city of the Medway (Cacer Medwand), a possession of the archbishops of Canterbury in 1067-77. It was chartered by several kings, from Edward VI. to George II. The royalist Kentish men were here defeated by Fairfax, 1648. The archbishop's palace was built in 1348. All Saints' college, now in ruins, was founded in 1260 as a hospital for pilgrims travelling to Canterbury; it was suppressed during the reign of Edward VI. Hazlitt, the essayist, Woodlett, the engraver, and the rebel sir Thomas Wyatt were natives of the town, which previously sent two members to parliament, since 1885 sends one. Typhoid epidemic attributed to bad water: Farleigh water supply cut off, 2 Oct. 1875 (see Mansionhouse Fund. Population, 1901, 34,000).

MAIL-COACHES, for the conveyance of letters, were first set up at Bristol by Mr. John Palmer, of Bath, 2 Aug. 1774. They were employed for other routes in 1785, and soon became general in England. The mails first sent by rail in 1838.

MAILLOTINS (small mallets), a name given to certain citizens of Paris, who, in March, 1785, violently opposed the collection of new taxes imposed by the duke of Angouleme, the regent. They armed themselves with small iron mallets (taken from the arsenal), and killed the collectors; for which they were severely punished in Jan. 1383.

MAILING AND WOUNDING, see Enclosure Act.

MAIN PLOT, a name given to a conspiracy to make Arabella Stuart sovereign of England in place of James I. in 1603. Lord Cobham, sir Walter Raleigh, and lord Grey, were condemned to death for implication in it, but reprieved; others were executed. Raleigh was executed, 29 Oct. 1618.

MAINE, a province, N.W. of France, seized by William I. of England in 1646. It acknowledged prince Arthur, 1641; was taken from John of England by Philip IV. of France, 1644; was recovered by Edward III. in 1357; but given up, 1660. After various changes it was finally united to France by Louis XI. in 1481. — MAINE (N. America), was discovered by Cabot, 1497; and colonised by the English, 1620. It forms the boundary state of the union in 1820. Capital, Augusta. Population, 1900, 691,406; 1910 (est.), 810,200. The boundary line between the British and the United States territories in Maine was settled by the A-burton treaty, concluded 9 Aug. 1842. The Maine liquor law, prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and use of intoxicating drinks, with certain exceptions, was enacted in 1851. In 1872, it was officially reported to have greatly decreased drunkards and rendered the trade unprofitable.

Great treat at Camden: — warehouses and colossus destroyed.

The open house of Bath first held on 1 Nov. 1692.

Maine, United States; crime, buried by explosion in Havana haurion, 2 officers and 27 men killed, 13 Apr. 1861.

Cont of inquiry finds no evidence to fix the responsibility, but attributes the explosion to a mine underneath the vessel, repeated times, with a dumdum message from the person, at 2 March; the Spanish commission, after the discovery of the explosion, which was from within, report received at Washington on 30 March.

At M. Desert, 27 deaths by the breaking of a ferry-ship.

MAIWAND, Afghanistan, about 30 miles from Candahar. On 27 July, 1880, gen. J. Burrers marched from the Nukhind, and attacked the army of Aoyob Khan, about 20,000 men, and after four hours' severe conflict was compelled to retreat. About 350 of the British with many officers fell (including Lieut.-col. Galbraith, major G.F. Blackwood, captains Garriott, McMath, Cullen, Roberts, and others), especially officers of the 44th regiment; with about 700 of the native troops killed or missing. The British commanders were censured. Ayooob Khan did not improve his victory, and was totally defeated by gen. sir F. Roberts, 7 Sept. 1880. See MAZRA.

MAJESTY. Among the Romans, the emperor and imperial family were thus addressed, and also the popes and the emperors of Germany. The style was given to Louis XI. of France in 1461. Voltaire. Upon Charles V. being chosen emperor of Germany in 1490, the kings of Spain took the style. Francis I. of France, at the interview with Henry VIII. of England, on the Field of Cloth of Gold, addressed the latter as Your Majesty, 1520. James I. used the style "Sacred," and "Most Excellent Majesty."

MAJORCA, see Baleric Isles, and Minorca. Majorca opposed Philip V. of Spain in 1714; but submitted, 14 July, 1715. Its first railway, from Palma, capital of the Baleric isles, to Inca, 18 miles, opened, 24 Feb. 1875.

MAJUBA HILL (see Tsmannad). On Saturday night, 26 Feb. 1881, above 600 men under sir George P. Colley marching from the camp at Mount Prospect, ascended Majuba hill overlooking Laing's Neck, where the Boers were encamped, to surprise them. The attack of the Boers began 10.30 a.m. of the 27th. Fierce conflicts ensued; eventually overwhelmed by numbers and deadly fire, the British were routed and fled. Sir George Colley fell with his face to the enemy. Boer loss unknown, some say only one man. About 350 British engaged. Loss: killed, 3 officers and about 82 men; many wounded, 122 prisoners, and some missing.

MAKALAKA, see Mashona.

MALABAR (S.W. coast of Hindostan). The Portuguese established factories here in 1505; the English did the same in 1601. A murderous attack on the Hindus by the Mophah Musulmans, punished by the British, 8 April, 1894.

MALACCA, on the Malay peninsula, E. Indies, was made a Portuguese settlement in 1511. The Dutch factories were established here in 1640. The Dutch government exchanged it for Bencoolen in Sumatra in 1824, when it was placed under the Bengal presidency. It is now part of the Straits Settlements (which see).

MALAGA (S. Spain), a Phcenician town, taken by the Arabs, 714; retaken by the Spaniards, after a long siege, 1477; see naval battles, 1704. An insurrection against the provisional government was put down with much slaughter, 31 Dec. 1808. Population in 1887, 134,100; 1900, 150,197; 1910 (est.), 151,739.

MALAKHOFF, a hill near Sebastopol, on which was situated a redoubt, strongly fortified by the Russians during the siege of 1854-55. The allied French and English attacked it on 17, 18 June, 1855, and after a conflict of forty-eight hours were repulsed with severe loss; that of the English being 175 killed and 1120 wounded; that of the French 3338 killed and wounded. On 8 Sept. the French again attacked the Malakhoff at daybreak, the enemy's fire was heavy and, at noon the French flag floated over the conquered redoubt; see Sebastopol. In the Malakhoff and Redan were found 3000 pieces of cannon of every calibre, and 120,000 lbs. of gunpowder.
MALARIA. The parasite of malaria—i.e., ague and yellow fever—discovered by Laveran in 1880. The theory that mosquitoes conveyed the disease held also by King, Bignami and Manso. Major Ronald Ross (K.C.B. 1902) began his researches on sir Patrick Manson's theory in India in 1895, and proved deductively and experimentally that mosquitoes of the genus called Anophelles Gyllisberg conveyed the disease, 1897-98; continued by profs. Koch and Grassi and Drs. Bignami and Bastianelli, Dec. 1898. See Sierra Leone, Aug. 1899.

Elephantiasis, a tropical disease, also conveyed by the mosquito, reported, 12 Aug. 1900. Major Ronald Ross proves that the prime source of mosquito infection is the native children, whose blood contains the parasites. Sept. 1900 (he received the Nobel prize, Dec. 1902).

Drs. Samson and Low live perfectly free from fever in the worst malarial part of the Roman Campagna, near Ostia, without taking quinine or any other drug, by merely keeping within a mosquito-proof hut from an hour before sunset to an hour after sunrise, Aug. Sept. 1901; success in their campaign, with similar results by profs. Grassi and others. Committee appointed jointly by Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., and the Royal Soc. in 1898 for the investigation of malaria and mosquitoes and allied insects in tropical countries: 3,000 specimens sent to the Nat. Hist. museum, Cambridge, reported Sept. 1902 (researches continued 1903). Drs. Stephens and Christopher report malaria to be an infectious fever present in nearly every native hut, and its suppression doubtful, Times, 4 Aug. 1902. See also under Great Theory of Disease, 10 Nov. 1897.

Outbreak in the Punjab; authorities issue quinine in affected districts. 1 Oct. 1906.

Continues to spread in the Punjab, being worst at Ambetkar, where 6,534 deaths occurred daily; cons-ervancy at a standstill, scavengers smitten and trade suspended; whole city in mourning. 23 Nov. 1907.

Anti-malaria campaign in India, British West Africa, Austria-Hungary, Egypt, Jamaica, &c, 1909.

MALA VITA (evil life), the name of a secret society in south Italy; the highest of its three grades is the Camorrist. At Lavello, in Foggia, O.N. men were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment (from 5 to 10 years), reported 2 Oct. 1891; see Camorra.

Floods in southern Malaya destroy 93 miles of the Johore state railway, 1 Jan. 1910.

MALDON (Essex), built 28 h. c., is supposed to have been the first Roman colony in Britain. It was built by queen Boudicca, and rebuilt by the Romans; burnt by the Danes, A.D. 991, and rebuilt by the Saxons. Maldon was incorporated by Philip and Mary. Absorbed into the county, 1885. The singular custom of Borough-English is kept up here, by which the youngest son, and not the eldest, succeeds to the borough tenure on his father's death; see Borough-English.

MALICIOUS DAMAGES. The law respecting them was consolidated and amended by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. This act protects works of art, electric telegraphs, &c., 1861.

MALINES, see Mechlin.

MALINS' ACT, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, relating to the powers of women in regard to property, was passed in 1857.

MALMESBURY, Wiltshire, an old market-town. The abbey, founded about 1670, was several times destroyed by the Reptures and restored. Its chief was made a mitred abbey by Edward 111. Athelstan was buried in the abbey. Thomas Hobbes, the philosopher, was born here, 5 April, 1688. By the act of 1855, Malmesbury was disenfranchised and absorbed into the county. Population, 1861, 2,854.

MALO, ST. (N.-W. France). This port, as a great resort of privateers, sustained a tremendous bombardment by the English under admiral Bowes in 1603, and under lord Berkeley in July, 1605. In June, 1758, the British landed in considerable force in Canoeay bay, and went up to the harbour, where they burnt upwards of a hundred ships, and did great damage to the town, making a number of prisoners. It is now defended by a very strong castle, and the harbour is very difficult of access. Steamship 'lhibis, owned by London and South Western railway company, went ashore off harbour entrance in gale and snowstorm, 128 passengers and crew drowned, 18 Nov. 1875.

MALO-JAROSLAVITZ, near Moscow, central Russia: the site of severe encounters between the Russians and the retreating French army, 24 Oct. 1812. The latter were victorious, but with great loss.

MALPLAQUET (N. France). Here the allies under the duke of Marlborough and prince Eugene defeated the French, commanded by mar- shal Villars, 11 Sept. 1707. Each army consisted of nearly 120,000 choice soldiers. There was great slaughter on both sides, the allies losing 18,000 men, but capturing Mons.

MALT, barley prepared for brewing and distillation. A duty was laid upon malt in 1607; repealed but reimposed 1617, et seq. Important acts for the regulation of malt duties were passed in 1830 and 1837. In March, 1868, the rates were suspended, and all maltsters licensed by the United Kingdom. The duty on malt in 1863 amounted to £273,277. In 1864 the duty was remitted on malt used for cattle feeding; and in 1865, an act was passed allowing the excise duty to be charged according to the weight of the grain used. A parliamentary committee to consider repeal of malt tax was agreed to, 14 May 1867, without effect. In a motion to repeal the tax was negatived (244-17), 23 April, 1874. Tax abolished, 1880 (when it was 28½d. a bushel). It ceased 1 Oct. 1886.

Malt made and retained in the United Kingdom: in 1825, 36,205,453 bushels; in 1835, 42,290,698; in 1845, 35,307,845; in 1857, 44,545,096; in 1865, 46,106,000; in 1870, 56,775,614; in 1875, 61,001,670; imported, 1857, 8,314 cwts.; 1860, 9,224 cwts.; 1865, 4,950 cwts.; 1870, 11,210 cwts.

MALT (former Melita), an island in the Mediterranean, held successively by the Byzantines, Carthaginians, and Romans, which last ca-obtained leave of the caliph of Egypt to build a house for those who came on pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and whom they received with zeal and charity, 1345. They afterwards founded a hospital for the reception of pilgrims on the south corner of the Temple, at Jerusalem. They transferred their main establishment from Jerusalem to Rhodes, the island which they had captured, 1522. After the death of the grand master, Tommasi di Contar, in 1525, the order was governed by a deputation under the protection of Russia. In 1530, the emperor Charles V. gave them the island of Malta, 22 December, 1530. The order was restored in 1557; and again suppressed in 1559. St. John's Gate, Cirkewweli, a relic of their possessions, still exists. The emperor Paul of Russia declared himself grand master of the order in June, 1709. MAMELON, a hill, one of the defences of Sebastopol, captured by the French 7 June, 1855.

MAMELIESSES, originally Turkish and Circassian slaves, established by the sultan of Egypt as a body-guard, about 1620. They advanced one of their own corps to the throne of Egypt, May, 1260, and continued to do so until it became a Turkish province, in 1517, when the boys took them into pay, and filled up their ranks with renegades from various countries. On the conquest of Egypt by Bonaparte, in 1798, they retreated into Nubia; but, assisted by the Aramais, reconquered Egypt from the Turkish government. In 1803, Napoleon emboldened some of them in his guard. On 1 March, 1811, they were decoyed into the power of the Turkish pasha, Mehemet Ali, and slain at Cairo.

MAMERTINI, sons of Manners or Mars, were Companion soldiers of Agathocles. They seized Messina in Sicily, in 281, B.C., and when closely besiegéd by the Carthaginians, and Hiero of Syracuse, in 204, they implored the help of the Romans, which led to the first Punic war.

MAMMOTH, an extinct species of elephant (Elephas primigenius), the remains of which in the recent deposits of Northern Europe and Asia are sufficiently abundant to confirm the origin of fossil ivory. The first entire mammoth recorded is that recovered from the ice near the mouth of the Lena in 1860. Remains of this animal found at Harwich, in 1803, many disintegrated or washed out in great thaws in more recent years at places in Europe, Asia, and America. Mammoth, Mastodon, and Dinotherium are the three most prominent types of the fossil Proboscidea in the tertiary deposits.

Storms having displaced the shingle at Selsey, south of Chichester, fossil remains were found there in 1838, and 1839. by Dr. A. Smith Woodward, keeper of geology in the British Museum, and other experts, to be those of a young mammoth about the size of a small Indian elephant, reported 26 Mar. 1899.

MAMMOTH CAVE, Kentucky, 10 miles in length, consists of numerous grottos, rivers, caverns, and avenues, some of the last being covered with the most beautiful crystals of rock salt, temperature of the cave is about 59° Fahr. "The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky," by H. C. Hovey and R. E. Call, published 1867.

MAN, ANTIQUITY OF. In 1836, M. Boucher de Perthes found some rude flint implements, which he believed to be of human manufacture, mingled with remains of extinct animals in the old alluvium near Abbeville in Picardy, France, and also in 1847, near Amiens. Similar flints have been found in Sicily by Dr. Falconer, at Brixham by Mr. Pengelly, and in various parts of the world, demonstrating the remote antiquity of the human race.

Some burnt bricks found in the Nile are considered to be 30,000 years old, and some bones found in kasustrine deposits in Florida, 35,000 years old.

The "Engis skull" found by Schmerling in the valley of the Meuse, about 1834, is considered to be 35,000 years old.

Fossil human remains found in extinct volcanoes of St. Denis, near Puy en Velay, 1844.

A human jaw said to have been found in the drift at M. Abbeville, March, 1833. Sir Charles Lyell's "Antiquity of Man" was published in 1863 (4th edition, 1873), and Sir John Lubbock's "Prehistoric Times," 1865 (4th ed. 1880).

The skeleton of a man supposed to have been contemporaneous with the mammoth and cave bear was found with polished flint implements by M. Riviere in the Cavliin cavel near Montenay, 23 March, 1877.

"In our day the quaternary man is a fact universally accepted; but the tertiary man is a problem under discussion."—Bucklow 1857.

Flint implements found in Eoz., probable date 500 B.C. (termed the "paleolithic age") reported 1863 (?). S. Q. S.

Two skeletons (man and woman) in excellent preservation, found by Mr. W. Raleigh, Whitfield, Charnormsire, in a tunnel in the sand dunes at Nethermawr, probably of the neolithic age, reported.

MAN, ISLE OF, was subdued by Edwin, king of Northumberland, about 620; by Magnus of Norway, 998; by the Scots, 1269; occupied by Edward at the wish of the inhabitants 1290; recovered by the Scots in 1313; but taken from them by Montacute, afterwards Earls of Salisbury, to whom Edward III gave the title of king of Man, in 1343.

It was afterwards subjected to the earl of Northumberland, on whose attainder Henry IV granted it in fee to Sir John Stanley, 1410. It was taken from this family by Elizabeth, but was restored in 1610 to the earl of Derby, through whom it fell by inheritance to the Duke of Athol. He received from parliament 70,000l. for the purchase of his remaining interest in the revenues of the island in Jan. 1829.

The countess of Derby held the isle against the parliament forces for a time in 1651. The queen's landing there (cost 24,000l.) inaugurated by the bent governor, H. B. Loch, 1 July, 1872.

Act relating to the harbours and coasts, passed June, 1872. The first railway (from Douglas to Peel) opened, 1 July, 1873. Population, 1871, 5,684; in 1891, 5,657.

The Bishopric is said to have been presided over by Ambphilus about 360. Some assert that St. Patrick was the founder of the see, and that Germanus was the first bishop, about 447.

It was united to Sodor in 1143. The bishop has no seat in the house of lords; but Lord Auckland (bishop, 1847-51) sat by right of his barony.

Present incumbent, 1890.

The Tywandal, an independent legislative body, consists of two branches—1. The governor and council; 2. The house of keys; their acts receiving the royal assent. The house of keys was formerly elective; election by the people every seventh year was established by act of parliament, 1660; the property qualification for members has been suspended; houses of keys were granted in towns and villages conferred on women by royal assent in 1856.

New Customs Act passed in 1857.

According to Boucher, five hills, which had received the royal assent, one for the redistribution of seats in the house of keys, were promuluated to the legislature, in the open air on the Tywandal, on the 25th, by the governor, Spencer Worley, 23 March, 1874; ceremony shortened by bill passed, 7 Nov. 1895.

Manchester

Manchester (Lancashire), in the time of the Brunds, was one of their principal stations, and had the privilege of sanctuary attached to its altar, in the British language, Menye, a stone. It was the residence of one of the Brigantes, who had a castle, or stronghold, called Man cetum, or the place of tents, near the confluence of the rivers Medlock and Irwell. The site of this, still called the "Castle Field," was, about 70, selected by the Romans as the station of the Coloni Prioris Frisorum, and called by them Mancetum: hence its Saxon name Manchester, from which its modern appellation is derived. Lewis. Manchester constituted a harbour and port, 22 Dec. 1681. Population 1835, 553,381; 1841 (est.), 655,455.

MANCHESTER, BISHOPRIC OF. An order in council on Oct. 1878, declared that the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor should be united on the next vacancy in either, and that the bishop of Manchester should be immediately created within the jurisdiction of the archiepiscopal see of York; the county of Lancaster for that purpose to be detached from Chester. By act 10 Vict. (1847) the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor were to exist undisturbed, and that of Manchester was to be created.

1870 James Fraser, Jan. 1858; died 22 Oct. 1870.
1886 Jan. resigned, 1887.
1897 Edmund Arbuthnot Knox (bishop suffragan of Coventry).

MANCHURIA. N.E. division of the Chinese empire. Capital, Mukden. The Manchus conquered China in 1644, and founded the present Ch'in dynasty. The French (1858) and British (1860) have missionary stations there. Population about 21,500,000. The Japanese invaded Manchuria during the war of 1894-5. Prosperity increased by Russian immigration, 1877-9. See Great. For the massacres here, see China, July 14, 1891. Great mortality from cholera, July 7 seq. 1902. The occupation of the province by Russia caused strained relations with Japan, and resulted in the Russo-Japanese war (which see). Mukden occupied by Russian troops, 28 Oct. 1905 (see Battle of Mukden, 1-10 March, 1905).

MANERY, near Puerto de la Reyna, Navarre. Here took place a conflict between the republicans, under Mirones, and the Carlists, under Octavio, both claimed a victory, 6 Oct. 1873.

MANGANESE. Black oxide of manganese, long used to decolorise glass, and called Magnesia soralis, was formerly included among the ores of iron. Its distinctive character was proved by the researches of Pott (1740), Kain and Winteri (1770), and Scheele and Bergman (1774); it was first eliminated by Gahn. Manganese combined with potassium is called manganic chloride, from its rapid change of colour under certain circumstances. Forthofer employed it as a test for the presence of organic matter in water; Dr. Angius hastily successfully applied this test to air in 1858. The oxide is the important ingredient in Condyl's "disinfecting fluid." Manganese bronze is a metal produced by Mr. P. M. Parsons, inventor of white brass, 1876. Manganese steel produced by Messrs. Pilk & Co., 1887.

MANICA, a territory in S. Africa in Mashonaland, near Mozambique, which on account of its mines, the Portuguese vainly endeavoured to acquire in the 19th century. See Zambesi.

The territory was acknowledged to be under the influence of Portugal by the convention of Aug. 1869.

Dispute with Great Britain; delimitation referred to arbitration of Italy, March, 1854; boundary settled 30 Jan. 1857; further concessions, 22 Feb. 1890.

MANICHEANS, a sect founded by Manes, in Persia, about 261. It spread into Egypt, Arabia, and Africa. A rich widow, whose servant Manes had been, left him much wealth, after which he assumed the title of Apa Mene, and adopted the name of Christ, and announced that he was the paraclete or comforter that Christ had promised to send. He maintained two principles, the one good he called light, the other bad he called darkness. He rejected the Old Testament, and composed a system of doctrine from Christianity and the dogmas of the ancient fire-worshippers. Sapor, king of Persia, believed in him at one time; but afterwards banished him. He was burnt alive by Bahram or Varanes, king of Persia, in 277. His followers dispersed, and several sects sprang from them.

MANILLA (or Manila) (built about 1571), capital of the Philippine isles, a great mart of Spanish commerce. Manilla was taken by the English, 6 Oct. 1762, when the bishop archbishop engaged to ransom it for about a million sterling; never wholly paid. Manilla has suffered greatly by earthquakes. It was burnt to the ground in 1857, and partly destroyed by fire in 1886. In 1892, it was partly burned, and lost many lives. See earthquakes 1852, 1858, 1886. The destructive typhoon, 20, 21 Oct. 1882. Great fire; 4,000 houses burnt, many deaths. 1 April, 1893. Great fire, 30,000 persons homeless, reported 5 April, 1897; another fire, 200 houses burnt, reported, 7 February 1898. See Spanish-American War.

MANIPUR. Manipur, a small native state, N.E. India, adjoining Assam and Burmah; population, 1916 est., 2,25,000.

The state was for a long protected by the British from the attacks of the Burmans. In 1838, Gumblung Singh, the restored rajah, died, and was succeeded by his son, Chandra Kirti Singh, two years old. The regent, Nar Singh, a relative, usurped the government, and rebelled against the British. He was killed in 1856, when the young rajah was restored; a British resident being afterwards placed in the capital, with good effect. Much trouble was given by rival members of his family till 1864; he died in 1879, and was succeeded by his eldest son, a ward of the British administration. The eldest, Sura Chandra Singh, became maharaja, and appointed his eldest brother, Kula Chandra Phuya Singh, pahari, or lowest apparent, to act as his representative. He led several expeditions against the vassals. He was killed in 1897, and his brother, Tekendoji Singh, the senaputi, or MANIPUR.

On 21 Feb. 1891, Mr. James W. Quinton, chief commissioner of Assam, was directed to proceed with a sufficient force to Manipur, to recognise the regent, and to remove the senaputti. He entered Manipur

22 March, with 470 men and officers, civil and military, and was received by the regent and the senaputti, but could not succeed in getting the latter to attend a durbar or court. Mr. Quinton as an ultimatum required the surrender of the senaputti, the letter being taken by Mr. F. S.

C. Grimwood, political agent, without any result, 23

March. On the 24th, colonel Skene proceeded with 250 men to arrest the senaputti at his house within the fort, but was driven from the house and the settlement after a sharp struggle, during which bury was mortally wounded. The senaputti had escaped. About 10 a.m., the Manipur army opened fire on the residence, and about noon on the rear, and shelled it. About 4 p.m. the troops were drawn from the senaputti's house, and all the force was posted in the residence, which was seriously damaged by artillery about 5 p.m., and the ammu-nation began to fall short. About 7 p.m. negotiations were reopened by letter from Mr. Quinton, and the field was accepted, but the conditions offered by the regent could not be accepted. Having been invited by the senaputti halfway between the residence and the palace, Mr. Quinton took with him colonel Skene,

Mr. C. W. Grant, Mr. H. Goodison, and Lieut.

Simpson, unarmed, and without escort. After a long parley, the party entered the fort and were seen no more, and it was afterwards discovered that they were all killed, wounded or otherwise. The firing re-commenced about midnight. The ammunition having been greatly reduced, it was decided to retie from the residence, and to march across the country to meet cattle. Colonel Grant and the advancing party

This was done about 2 a.m. on the 25th, the party taking with them 17 wounded, and Mrs. Grimwood. There was no firing during the march, but a few skirmishes occurred.

About 10 a.m. they met captain Cowley's party, who supplied them with food and other assistance. They continued their march, arriving on 30 March, at Lakhimpur on the Cuchar frontier.

Lient. C. J. W. Grant hearing, on 27 March, of the disaster at Manipur, volunteered to attempt the relief of the British captives, and marched with 80 natives soldiers from the Burmah Horse, 25 March,entre-ing himself near Thobal, 31 March, held out against the attacks of the Manipurians (about 3,000) till 7 April, and resisted negotiations judiciously, and 4 killed.

About 10 a.m. on 25 March, attacked and dispersèd by general Graham's party, captain

Drury being especially successful, 25 April; three columns under gen. Graham and others from different directions entered Manipur, which the natives totally deserted, the regent, senaputti, and other princes having fled, 26 April; the palace had been blown up; the heads of Mr. Quinton and his companions were found in the enclosure.

Funeral ceremony was held over the slain bodies of Mr. Quinton and his companions, 29 April; general

Collett was left in command at Manipur, some of the troops returning. The Manipur army returned to their homes, May; the regent, his minister and the senaputti, were captured, May, 1891.

The regent, the senaputti, and prince Anga buna, a young brother, were tried for murder, and sentenced to life, and of them six were executed.

The sentences of death on the senaputti and the Tropical general, as implicated in the murders, were confirmed. The sentences on the regent and his younger brother committed to transportation for life to the Andaman Islands; forfeiture of all property, 16 March. Thereafter, 20 April.

The senaputti and the Tropical general hanged at Mayapur.

13 Aug.

It was decided that Manipur should still be ruled by a native rajah; and Oolah Chand, aged 5, great grandson of Narsing, was appointed rajah, 13 Sept.; dignity to be hereditary, subject to the government of India; an annual tribute to be paid; declaration communicated, Oct.

Heavy rain, causing destructive floods and loss of life. Lord Curzon held a durbar of about 4,250 here.

Rajah Chutia Chand installed to control 3, March, 1892.

MANITOBA, see Rupert's Land and Hudson's Bay (N. America). Manitoba was made a part of the confederation in 1870. Capital, Winnipeg.

Population, (1881), 154,447; (1891), 324,924; (1896), 593,085. Lieut.-governor, John C. Schultz; succeeded by J. C. Patterson, June, 1895; Hon. Sir D. H. McMillan, 1899. A Fenian attack on the colony was suppressed by American troops about 12 Oct. 1871; for insurrection in the neighbouring provinces in March, 1885, see Canada. For the Red River War see 1870. Disputes with the Dominion government respecting the priviliges of the Catholic schools, March & May, 1895; negotiations closed, the difficulty settled by compromise, 17 Oct. 1895; bill passed, 25 March, 1897; Catholic schools of Winnipeg taken over by the school board by agreement, Sept., 1901.

Bill by Mr. Campbell, attorney-general, introduced into the Manitoba legislature providing that children under 14 cannot marry, and that when they are under 18, the consent of the parents is necessary.

MANNHEIM (S. Germany), founded in 1606, became the court residence of the palatine of the Rhine in 1719, but its becoming elector of Bavaria in 1777 caused the removal of the court to Munich. Mannheim, surrendered to the French, under command of general Fredegon, 20 Sept. 1795. On 31 Oct. the Austrians under generalWarmser defeated the French near the city. Several battles were fought with various success in the neighbourhood during the wars of Napoleon I. Kotzebue, the popular dramatist, was assassinated at Mannheim, by Sand, a student of Wurtzburg, 2 April, 1819. Population, 1891, 163,603.

MANNHEIM (Greek, mẠnvo, thin), an instrument for measuring the rarity of the atmosphere, gases, and vapours. One is said to have been made by Otto von Guericke about 1600, and the "statical barometer" of Robert Boyle was a simple manometer. Various forms of the apparatus were devised by Ramsden (about 1775), by Roy (1777), by Cavalié (1789), and by Borydon and others. A manometer was constructed for the investigation respecting the elasticity of steam conducted by Prony, Arago, Dulong, and Girard, 1830.

MAXORS are as ancient as the Saxon times, and imply a territorial district with its jurisdiction, rights, and perquisites. They were formerly called barons, and still are lordships. Each lord was empowered to hold a court called the court-baron for redressing misdemeanours, and settling disputes between the tenants. Cabinet Lawyer.

MANSOURAH.

MESSINA EARTHQUAKE RELIEF FUND; opened 29 Dec., 1901; £14,000, received to Jan., 1911.

QUEEN VICTORIA NATIONAL MEMORIAL FUND; opened 26 March, 1901; total, £85,000, to Nov. 1910.

FUND FOR RELIEVING THOSE AFFECTED BY THE FLOODS IN PARIS; £65,000, raised up to 29 Mar.

The Queen's Unemployed Fund; opened in 1905, and spent in relief works, £13,000.

EARTHQUAKE IN JAMAICA, Jan. 1907; £2,000.

RED CROSS CRIPPLES' HOME; founded in 1906, and established at Alton, Hants; £60,000.

MANSOURAH (Lower Egypt). Here Louis IX. was defeated by the Saracens and taken prisoner, 5 April, 1250. He gave Damietta and 400,000 livres for his ransom. Mansourah suffered much by cholera, summer, 1883.

MANTES, a town in the department of Seine-et-Oise, France, is situated on the river Sine, about 35 miles from Paris. It possesses a handsome Gothic church, and contains other objects of antiquarian interest. Here, while besieging the town, William the Conqueror received the wound that caused his death, 1066.

MANTINA (Arcadia, Greece). Here — (1) the Athenians and Argives were defeated by Agis II. of Sparta, 418 B.C. (2) And here Epaminonds and the Thebans defeated the combined forces of Lacedaemon, Athens, and Arcadia, 362 B.C. Epaminonds was killed in the engagement, and Thebes lost its power among the Grecian states. The emperor Adrian built a temple at Mantinea in honour of his favourite Alcmeon. The town was also called Antigonia. Other battles were fought near it.

MANTS, a genus of remarkable insects, whose forms and colours of their bodies and wings gratify the leaves and twigs that envelop them. The praying mantis (mantis religiosa) derives its name from the peculiar position of its anterior pair of legs.

MANTUA (N. Italy), an Etruscan city, near which Virgil was born, 70 B.C. Mantua was ruled by the Gonzagas, lords of Mantua, from 1328 to 1708, when it was seized by the emperor Joseph II. It surrendered to the French, 2 Feb., 1707, after a siege of eight months; retaken by the Austrians and Russians, 30 July, 1709, after a short siege. After the battle of Marengo (14 June, 1800), the French again obtained possession of it. It was included in the kingdom of Italy till 1814, when it was restored to the Austrians, who surrendered it to the French, 11 Oct., 1815, after the peace.

MAORIS, see New Zealand.

MAPLE-TREE. The Acer rubrum, or scarlet maple, was brought here from N. America, before 1650. The Acer Negundo, or ash-leaved maple, before 1688. From the Acer saccharinum (introduced here in 1733) the Americans make good sugar.

MAPS, see Charts, and Mercator.

MARANON, see Amazon.

MARATHON (in Attica). Here, on 28 or 29 Sept. 490 B.C., the Greeks, only 11,000 strong, defeated the Persian army amounting to about 110,000. The former were commanded by Miltiades, Aristides, and Themistocles. Among the slain (about 6,700) is said to have been Hippias, who had been expelled from Athens, and was the instigator of the war. The Persian army was forced to retreat to Asia; see Greece.

Investigations in 1750 on the presumed site of this battle led to the discovery of vases, and the probable grave of the 90 Athenians who fell. Marathon races, see Olympic games.

MARBLE. Diporum and Scyllis, statues of Crete, were the first artists who sculptured marble, and polished their works; all statues previously being of wood, about 508 B.C. Pithoi. The edifices or monuments of Rome were constructed of, or ornamented with, fine marble. The ruins of Palmyra are chiefly of white marble. The marble arch, London, erected at Buckingham palace, 1839, was removed to Hyde-park, March, 1851.

MARBURG (W. Germany). The cathedral was founded, 1231; and the first Protestant university in 1527. It suffered much during the Seven Years' war, 1753-60.

MARCH, the first month of the Roman year, until Numa added January and February, 713 B.C. It is said that Romulus gave to this month the name of his supposed father. Though Ovid observes, that the people of Italy had the month of March before the time of Romulus, but placed it differently in the calendar. The year commenced on the 23d of this month till 1753; see Year.

MARCHES. The old boundaries between England and Wales, and England and Scotland. The Lords Marchers of the Welsh borders had vice-regal authority; the wardens of the Scotch marches were subordinate officers. These powers were abolished, 1536, and 1689.

MARCHFELD (Austria). Here Ottocar II. of Bohemia was defeated and slain by his rival, the emperor Rodolph of Hapsburg, 26 Aug., 1278; see Bohemia.

MARCHONTES, followers of Marcion, a heretic, about 150, who preceded the Manichees, and taught similar doctrines. Ceres.

MARCOMANLI, a people of Southern Germany, expelled the Boii from Bohemia, and, united with other tribes, invaded Italy about 167, but were repelled by the emperors Antoninus and Verus. They were defeated by the legion called, from a famed miracle, the Thundering Legion, 175; and finally driven beyond the Danube by Aurelian, 271.

MARENGO (N. Italy). Here the French army, commanded by Bonaparte, after crossing the Alps into Piedmont, attacked the Austrians, 14 June, 1800; his army was retreating, when the arrival of general Desaix turned the fortunes of the day. The slaughter on both sides was dreadful. By a treaty between the Austrian general Melas and Bonaparte, signed 15 June, the latter obtained twelve strong fortresses, and became master of Italy.

MARESCHALS or MARSHALS, in France, were the esquires of the king, and originally had the command of the vanguard to observe the enemy and to choose proper places for its encampment. Till the time of Francis I., in 1515, there were but two marshals, who had 500 horses per annum in war, but no stipend in time of peace. The number was afterwards greatly increased. Napoleon's marshals were renowned for skill and courage; see Marshal.

MARGARINE, see under Butter.

MARGATE. Kent, Royal sea-bathing infirmary founded 1792; enlarged 1852. The town-hall was erected in 1820. Population, 1881, 2,887; 1910 (est.), 30,000. New park, presented by Mr. J. Wood.

MARIAN PERSECUTION, see Protestant.

MARIGNANO (now MALEGNO), N. Italy, near Milan. Three battles have been fought near here—1. Francis I. of France defeated the duke of Milan and the Swiss, 13 Sept. 1515; above 20,000 men were slain. This conflict has been called the Battle of the Giants—2. Near here was fought the battle of Pavia (which see), 24 February, 1525—3. After the battle of Magenta, 4 June, 1859, the Austrians entrenched themselves at Malignano. The emperor sent marshal Baraguay d’Hilliers with 10,000 men to dislodge them, which he did with a loss of about 850 killed and wounded, on 8 June. The Austrians are said to have lost 1,400 killed and wounded, and 900 prisoners, out of 18,000 engaged.

MARINE BIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION. See Biology.

MARINER’S COMPASS, see Compass, and Magnatism.

MARINES, soldiers serving on ship-board, were first established with the object of forming a nursery to man the fleet. An order in council, dated 16 Oct. 1664, authorised 1200 soldiers to be raised and formed into one regiment. In 1665, the third regiment of the line was called the Marine Regiment; but the system of having soldiers exclusively for sea service was not carried into effect until 1668, when two marine regiments were formed. More regiments were embodied in subsequent years; and in 1731 the corps consisted of ten regiments, each 1000 strong. In 1759 they numbered 18,000 men. In the latter years of the French war, ending in 1815, they amounted to 31,200, and there were frequently more than 3,000 supernumeraries. The officers, as they are called, frequently distinguished themselves. The "Royal Marine Forces" (so named 1 May, 1802), now comprehend artillery and light infantry. Several of the present regiments of the line (infantry were originally employed as marines). The vote for 1857 was for 14,000 marines, inclusive of 3,500 artillery. F. H. Nicolai, Strength of English Marine Institution founded in 1872. Officers of the marines made equal in rank with those in the army and navy. Dec. 1882.

MARINE SOCIETY (for the maintenance and instruction of boys for the navy), was founded by Jonas Hanway, 1736, and incorporated, 1772. It instituted the first training ship on the Thames, 1756. H.M.S. Worsn郛 burnt, no deaths, 3 Jan. 1857; and the boys were removed to the Compteur.

MARINO, SAN, a republic in central Italy. Its origin is ascribed to St. Marinus, a hermit, who resided here in the 5th century. Its independence lasted for a short time, to Caesar Borgia, 1503, and to the pope, 1579; was confirmed by pope Pius VII. in 1817. A convention with Italy, 27 March, 1867. New extraterritorial rights with Great Britain ratified 1 Oct. 1880. Population, in 1861, 7833; in 1871, 7810; in 1891, about 8000; 1906, 6430.

MARIOLATRY, worship of the virgin Mary, began in the 4th century, greatly increased in the 10th.

MARIOMETTES, puppet plays. The fantoccioni, popular in Italy in the 15th century; in the 18th in England and Germany.

MARITIME EXHIBITION at Havre opened by representatives of the government 1 June, 1862; another at Havre, 7 May, 1857; a similar exhibition was opened at Naples by the prince of Piedmont, 17 April, 1871; at Paris, 10 July, 1875; at Liverpool, 11 May, 1886.

MARITIME LAWS, see Navigation Laws.

MARK, a silver coin of the northern nations, and the name mark-lab is still retained in Denmark.

MARKET, see Smithfield, Metropolitan Cattle Market, Billingsgate, Londonderry, Exeter, and Covent Garden Markets. There are also the Borough and Spitalfields markets (vegetables), Cumberland market, Hampstead-road (hay), and Shadwell (fish). New market constructed by Great Eastern Railway Co. at Bishopsgate street; opened, 1 July, 1882. Wholesale fish and poultry market opened, 19 Oct. 1882.

MARK'S ST. (Venice). The church was erected between 1627 and 1643. The Campanile (bell-tower), 323 ft. high, 42 ft. wide at base, fell to the ground, 14 July, 1902; some art treasures damaged, but the church saved.

The restorations of the Palace of the Dues were completed and exposed to view Nov. 1889.

MARLBOROUGH, a town in Wiltshire; a royal manor mentioned in Domesday book. King Henry III. passed the "Statutes of Marlborough" in the ancient castle in 1267. Marlborough returned two members to parliament since Edward I. Abso-ined into the county, 1882. The grammar school was founded by Edward VI. Population, 1901, 1400.—Marlborough House, Pall Mall, London, was built by Wren for the duke of Marlborough, 1709-10; was let to the princess Charlotte and prince Leopold in 1824; held by queen Adelaide, 1839-40, and became the residence of the prince of Wales, 1863.

MARLOWE MEMORIAL, a committee determined to erect a memorial to Christopher Marlowe, the dramatist (1594-93), in Canterbury, Dec. 1888. The statue unveiled by Mr. H. Irving, 10 Sept. 1891.

MARONITES, Christians in the East, followers of one Maron in the 5th century; they are said to have embraced the errors of the Nestorians, Monothelites. About 1180 they numbered 200,000, living in the neighbourhood of Mount Libanus, and were of service to the Christian kings of Jerusalem. They were reconciled to the church of Rome soon after. For an account of the massacres of the Maronites in 1860, see Greece.

MAROONS, a name given in Jamaica to runaway negroes. When the island was conquered from the Spaniards, a number of their negroes fled to the hills and became very troublesome to the colonists. A war of eight years’ duration ensued, when the Maroons capitulated on being permitted to retain their free settlements, about 1730. In 1735 they again took arms, but were speedily put down and many were transported. Brande.
MARRIAGE.

MARRINGER, village, near Saarbruck. The Virgin and Satan said to have been seen by children; and miracles wrought, 7 July, 1876. The priest, Neureuter, acquitted of the charge of imposture, April, 1879.

MAR-PRELATE TRACTS, virulently attacking episcopacy, were mostly written, it is believed, by John Henry, who was cruelly executed, 29 May, 1575, for writing seditious words against the queen (found about his person when seized). The tracts appeared about 1570. Some had very singular titles: such as: "An Amand for a Parrant," "Hay any Worke for Cooper?" &c. They were collected and reprinted in 1833.

MARQUE, LETTERS OF, see Privater.

MARQUESAS ISLANDS (Polynesia) were discovered in 1505 by Mendana, who named them after the viceroys of Peru, Marquesa de Mendoca. The group visited by Cook in 1774, and were taken possession of by the French admiral, Duperit Thouars, 1 May, 1842.

MARQUIS, a dignity, called by the Saxons marakin-reve, by the Germans markgräve, took its original from mark or March, a limit or bound (see Marche); the office being to guard or govern the frontiers of a province. Marquis is next in honour to a duke. The first Englishman on whom the title was conferred was the favourite of king Richard II., Robert de Vere, earl of Oxford, created marquis of Dublin, and placed in parliament between the dukes and earls, 1385. James Stewart, second son of James III. of Scotland, was made marquis of Ormond, in 1476, without territories, afterwards earl of Ross.

MARRIAGE was instituted by God (Gen. ii.), and confirmed by Christ (Mark x.), who performed a miracle at the celebration of one (John ii.). Marital ceremonies among the Greeks are ascribed to Cerops, king of Athens, 1554 B.C. See Age, Affinity.

MARRIAGES BY AGE. Among the Babylonians, at a certain time every year, the marriageable females were assembled, and disposed of to the best bidder. This custom is said to have originated with Assena, daughter of Belshazzar, about 1430 B.C.

MARRIES MURDERS, see Ratcliffe Highway.

MARC'S INSURRECTION. John, earl of Marc, proclaimed James III. at Brechin, Aberdeenshire, 6 September, 1715. He was defeated at Sheriffmuir, 13 Nov., and escaped from Montrose with the Pretender, 4 Feb. 1716.

MARSEILLES, a planet, next to the earth in order of distance from the sun: the spots on its surface were first observed by Fontana, in 1630. Two satellites named Photos and Deimos, were discovered by professor Asaph Hall, at Washington, U.S., 11 Aug. 1857.

MARSBURYS. M. Dubois de Paris suggests, that these satellites may be planetoids attracted by Mars. Atheria and another of these bodies having disappeared about the time of the discovery.

MARSAGLIA (Piedmont, N. Italy). Here the imperialists under Prince Eugene and the duke of Savoy were defeated by the French under Catani, 4 Oct. 1705.

MARSEILLAISE HYMN. The words and music are ascribed to Rouget de Lisle, or L'isle, a French engineer officer, who, it is said, composed it by request, 1792, to cheer the conscripts at Strasbourg. It derives its name from a body of troops from Marsailles marching into Paris in 1795 playing the tune. This account is doubted by some (1879). The author was pensioned by Louis Philippe, 1830, and died in 1839.

MARSEILLES. The ancient Massilia (S. France), a maritime city, founded by the Phoecines about 600 B.C.; an ally of Rome, 218 B.C. Cicerio styled it the Athens of Gaul, on account of its excellent schools. Population, 1798, 517,498.

MARTINIQUE.

MARTINIQUE (French West Indies), discovered in 1493 or 1502; settled by France, 1635. This and the adjacent isles of St. Lucia and St. Vincent, and the Grenadines, were taken by the British from the French in Feb., 1762. They were restored to France at the peace of the following year. They were taken, 19 Feb., 1793; restored at the peace of Amiens in 1802: again captured 23 Feb., 1809. A revolution in this island in favour of Napoleon was finally suppressed by the British, 1 June, 1815, and Martinique reverted to its French masters. Severe earthquakes occurred here in 1766 and 1839; at other times; 200 shocks in 1793.

Great destruction of life and property was caused by a cyclone and earthquake about 18 Aug., 1831, estimated deaths 325, besides losses by shipwrecks. Estimated loss $20,000,000.

Strike riots, incendiary fires in La France, troops fired on the mob, 6 men killed, 5-13 Feb.; dispute referred arbitration.

4-14 Feb., 1909: Destruction of St. Pierre, about 40,000 persons killed. Mont Pelée, a volcano 4,427 ft. high, about 45 miles behind the town, caused some loss of life and property in 1766 and 1831, and began again to show signs of activity at the end of April, 1902. Plumes of steam were thrown out, and St. Pierre was covered with ashes, 3-4 May; a stream of lava (25 ft. high) swept everything away before it to the sea, the Guérin factory and over 150 lives destroyed; the sea-receded 500 ft. and, returning, flooded St. Pierre, 5 May; reassuring reports were issued by the government, 2 May, but the eruptions increased in force, and finally, a little before 9 a.m., "with a terrific roar a huge column of white-hot sand, burning cinders and stones was thrown up to a height of 1500 ft. to the sky, and the volcano burst (spreading out for miles round even as far as Fort de France), and within ten minutes St. Pierre became a city of the dead," and the whole (about 15 sq. mi.) district a desolation.

The governor, M. Mouttet, his wife, the British and American consulate and their families, and about 40,000 were killed. The brig Bete, a cable ship, with men, and about 15 other vessels were totally lost; the Sainte-Françoise, French gun-boat, picked up in the English Channel by means belonging to the British s.s. Bermuda and others) resting about on wreck; the British s.s. Edmund was saved by the pluck and fortitude of Capt. Ed. Wm. Freeman, who with the crew being in the large disabled, managed to steer it to a place of safety; but out of 44 on board only 1 survived, and most of these were injured; many reports issued; reported change of government, 19 July.

Seven ratsers active, 19 May; the volume of search continued, 19 and 22 May; a torrent of ashes and mud destroyed what remained of the Brise-Neige, 24 May; new active crater, 24 May.

12-20 May, 1909: Active and general sympathy in Edward, 1st, total land 10,200.

Special American, British and French expeditions were sent to Martinique and St. Vincent to investigate the volcanic conditions of the West Indies. Special transit by the U.S. Navy, 1892: sent by the U.S. Navy, 1893: returned Aug.

Fresh outbreaks, June, and 18 July; again, 18 Aug., 1899: two of great violence, 22 and 24 Aug., 1899; the latter mowing down a town and three villages, 14 miles square, and many, hopelessly injured to wave sea, 9-29 Sept., and about 15 miles round, including the capital, Port-au-Prince, and many miles over to the island, destroying land over a mile long. 44,000,000 tons of mud, and interior of the island hot water, 11-20 Oct. 1899. Many lives lost.

1877: island under the rule of the Church, and 5,688 acres at 10 per cent.

1871: a large parish, N.W. London. The name is corrupted from St. Mary the Bourne, or brook.—Tyebourne. It was chiefly pasture land in 1760. The manor was acquired by the duke ofPortland in 1815. The hunting-grounds now form Regent's park (which see). The parishes of Marylebone, St. Pancras, and Paddington were made a parliamentary borough in 1832. By act of 1875 Marylebone alone returns two M.P.'s, constituted a municipal borough by act of 1859 (to aldermen, 40 councillors). St. Marylebone Churches Bill passed, 1835. Population, 1861 (est.), 1,235,668.

MASCAT.

MARTINMAS, 11 Nov., the feast of St. Martin, bishop of Tours, in the 4th century, is quarter day in parts of the north of England and in Scotland. The high sheriff of England and Wales are nominated on the morrow of St. Martin, 12 Nov.

MARTIN'S HALL, ST. (Long Acre, London), was opened as a concert-room for Mr. John Halliwell, on 11 Feb., 1850; burnt down 26 Aug., 1866; rebuilt, (1871) opened as the New Queen's theatre, by Mr. Alfred Wigan, 24 Oct., 1877. See Westminster, 1899.

MARTYRS. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was stoned, 33. The festival of the martyrs, of very ancient date, took their rise about the time of Polyarch, who suffered martyrdom about 169. St. Alban is the English protomartyr, 286; see Persecutions, Protestants, and Dissolution Era. The Martyrs' Memorial, Smithfield, erected by the Protestant Alliance, was inaugurated 11 March, 1870. The Martyrs' memorial church, St. John's-street, Clerkenwell, was consecrated 2 June, 1871.

MARY-ANNE. Secret republican associations, especially in France. The name was given to the republic of 1742, to the guillotine, and to little statues of Liberty.

MARYLAND, named after queen Henrietta Maria, one of the first thirteen United States of North America, was granted in 1632 to lord Baltimore, and settled by a company of English Romanists in 1634. It contains the district of Columbia, in which Washington is situated. It continued in the Union when the other slave states seceded in 1860 and 1861. The confederate army, under general Lee, after their victory at Bull Run, 30 Aug., 1862, crossed the Potomac and entered Maryland. They were followed by the federal army under McClellan. Severe conflicts ensued, especially on 17 Sept., at Antietam Creek, with great loss on both sides, each claiming the victory. The confederates retired into Virginia in good order, and it is said with much booty. Capital, Annapolis; population, 1850, 1,185,044; 1910 (est.), 1,380,000.

MARY-LE-BONE, a large parish, N.W. London. The name is corrupted from St. Mary at the Bourne, or brook.—Tyebourne. It was chiefly pasture land in 1760. The manor was acquired by the duke of Portland in 1815. The hunting-grounds now form Regent's park (which see). The parishes of Marylebone, St. Pancras, and Paddington were made a parliamentary borough in 1832. By act of 1875 Marylebone alone returns two M.P.'s, constituted a municipal borough by act of 1859 (to aldermen, 40 councillors). St. Marylebone Churches Bill passed, 1835. Population, 1861 (est.), 126,027.

MASKS. Masks of painted papyrus are said to have been occasionally worn by kings and priests in ancient Egypt. Horace attributes them to the Dendraians; yet, both says, the custom and time of their introduction were unknown. — Modern masks, and muffs, fans, and false hair for the women, were devised in Italy, and brought to England from France in 1572. See Iron Mask.

Mesorah (Hebrew, tradition), a collection of conjectural readings (Keris) of the Hebrew text of the Old Testament, with critical, grammatical, and exegetical remarks by various Jewish doctors, written between the tenth and thirteenth centuries, who also furnished the Masoretic vocal points.

The first Hebrew Bible, containing the Masorah, Targums, and comments, printed by Bomberg at Venice, 1518. The "Book of the Masorah, the Hedge of the Law," first printed at Florence, 1579.

Masquerades were in fashion in the court of Edward III., 1391; and in the reign of Charles II., 1660. Masquerades were frequent among the citizens. The bishops preached against them, and made such representations as occasioned their suppression, 9 Geo. I. 1724. They were revived and carried to a shameful excess in violation of the laws, and tickets of admission to a masquarade at Ranelagh were on some occasions subscribed for at twenty-five guineas each, 1776. Mortimer. At the close of a ball masque, given by Anderson, the Waziristan, 5 March, 1879. Covent-garden theatre was destroyed by fire.

MASQUES, precursors of the opera, introduced into England in the latter part of the 16th century; many were written by Ben Jonson, Beaumont and others; Hugo Jones designed the costumes, &c.; Wm. and H. Lawes, Bunster, Locke and others composed the music. A very costly one was held at the Middle Temple on the marriage of princes Charles, Duke of York, and Princess Maria, daughter of the Emperor of Portugal. The music by Henry Lawes, was represented at Ludlow castle in 1644; "Beauty's Awakening," arranged by Mr. Walter Crane and Mr. C. R. Ashbee, presented by the members of the Art Workers' Guild at the Guildhall, 22 June, 1897.

MASS, in the Roman church, is the office of prayers used at the celebration of the Eucharist, in memory of the passion of Christ, and to this every part of the service alludes. The general division consists in high and low; the first is that sung by choristers, and celebrated with the assistance of a deacon and sub-deacon; low masses are those in which the priests are rehearsed without singing. Mass was first celebrated in Latin about 344; it was introduced into England in the 7th century. Prostration was enjoined at the elevation of the host in 1241. Dr. Daniel Rock, in "The Church of our Fathers" (1849), describes an ancient MS. of "The Service of the Mass, called the Rite of Salisbury," compiled for that cathedral, by St. Edmund and others during the 12th century. The English communion service was adopted in 1549; see Missal and Retaliation.

Great fire at Lynn, a huge shoe-making town, 966 buildings destroyed, and about 150 persons instituted, estimated loss 3,000,000 dollars, at Nov. 29th.

MASSACRES. The following are among the most remarkable, probably exaggerated:

Before CHRIST.
Of all the Cæciliae in Sicily, 175. Ten thousand crucified and 5600 put to the sword for not surrendering unto Alexander, 311.
Of the Capuchins, friends of Humiliation, by Grenchus, 211. A dreadful slaughter of the Venetians and Ambassadours, near Ayl. by Marcus, the Roman general, 200,000 being left dead on the spot, 177.
The Romans throughout Asia, women and children not excepted, massacred in one day, by order of Mithridates, king of Pontus, 67.
A great number of Roman senators massacred by Comm., Manius, and Sentinus, 57. Again, under Sylla and Catiline, his minister of veterans, 42.
At Persea, Octavianus Caesar ordered 20 Roman senators and other persons of distinction to be sacrificed to the mazes of Julius, 39.

After CHRIST.
At the destruction of Jerusalem, 1,100,000 Jews were slain, thrown into the sea, or put to the sword, 1970.
The Jews, headed by one Ando, put to death many Greeks and Romans, in and near Cyrene, 115.
Cassius, a Roman general, under the emperor M. Aurelius, put to death 30,000 of the inhabitants of Seleucia, 175.
At Alexandria, many thousands of citizens were massacred by order of Catarsalis, 215.

The emperor Frederick is said to have put to death 400,000 of the barbarian invaders of Gaul, 277.

MATCHES, see Lucifer.

MATERIALISM, the doctrine held by those who maintain that the soul of man is not a spiritual substance distinct from matter, but is the result of a particular organisation of matter in the body. The term is rather loosely applied to the system of Epicurus, about 310 B.C.; Hobbes, about A.D. 1642; Priestley, about 1772; and many eminent men in the present day. It is not necessarily identical with atheism, see Animism.

MATERNITY CHARITY, ROYAL, Finsbury: founded 1757.

MATHEMATICS formerly signified all kinds of learning; but the term is now applied to the sciences relating to numbers and quantity; see Arithmetic. Among the most eminent mathematicians were Euclid, 300 B.C.; Archimedes, 287 B.C.; Descartes, died 1655 A.D.; Barrow, died 1670; Laplace, died 1827; Euler, died 1783; Legendre, died 1833; Laplace, died 1827; and Dr. Peachey, died 1858; Sir G. B. Airy, Bartholomew Price (died, aged 70, 29 Dec. 1818); J. J. Sylvester (died 15 March, 1897). J. Toddhunter (died 1884), and Prof. Arthur Cayley, born 16 Aug. 1821, barrister, 1856-99; wrote above 600 papers, 1852-91; much honoured abroad (died 29 Jan. 1895). Dr. Sophus Lie (born 12 Dec. 1842, died 18 Feb. 1899), the eminent mathematicians. Mary Somerville, born 1750, author of the "Mechanism of the Heavens," died 1876.

The London Mathematical Society was founded, 19 Jan. 1837.

John Thomas Crosley, author of the popular "Intellectual Calculator," died 24 April, 1829, aged 83.

MATHURINS, see under Trinity.

MATINS. The service or prayers first performed in the morning or beginning of the day in the Roman Catholic church. The French Matins were the massacre of St. Bartholomew, 24 Aug. 1572. The Matins of Moscow were the massacre of Prince Demetrius, and the Poles his adherents, in the morning of 27 May, 1666.

MATRIMONIAL CAUSES ACT, passed (1859). By the act passed 27 May, 1858, a magistrate may grant judicial separation with maintenance to a wife suffering from a husband's violent usage.

The act was amended in 1884.

MATTER is held to exist in three states: gaseous, liquid, and solid. Mr. William Crookes (1832), considers that there is a fourth state, "radiant matter," subtler than any of these, 1879-80. See Light.

MATTERHORN, a part of the main ridge of the Alps, about 14,836 feet high, S. Switzerland. After various fruitless attempts by professor Tyndall and other eminent climbers, in 1853, the summit was reached on 14 July, 1865, by Mr. Edward Whymper and others. During their descent, four of the party were killed. Mr. Hadow fell; the connecting rope brake, and he himself, lord Francis Douglas, the rev. Mr. Hudson, and Mr. Cruickshank, a guide, slipped down, and fell from a precipice nearly 4000 feet high. Miss Walker, with her father, ascended the Matterhorn, 22 July, 1871. Three gentlemen ascended without a guide, 21 July, 1870. Dr. W. O. Mosley, an American, was killed here, 14 Aug. 1879. Three persons attempting the ascent perished, 12 Sept. 1899; Dr. Bloch and Miss Bell killed here, 23 July, 1904.

MAUNDY-THURSDAY (derived by Spelman from mundum, a hand-basket, in which the king was supposed to give alms to the poor of the kingdom by order of the keeper, from dies mandati, the day on which Christ gave his grand mandate, that we should love one another), the Thursday before Good Friday. Wealthy. On this day it was the custom of our sovereigns or their almoners to give alms, food, and clothing to as many poor persons as they were able. It was begun in England by Edward III., when he was first crowned, 1327, and continued. There is a picturesque ceremony every year on the Thursday before Good Friday in Westminster abbey. Money is now given in lieu of clothing and provisions. For the former, 1 l. 15s. to each woman; 2 l. 5s. to each man; and for the latter, 1 l. 15s. to each. In addition there is the Maundy money, and as many pence as the sovereign is 5 years of age, in silver pieces—one penny, twopenny, threepence, and fourpence.

MAUR, ST., see Benedictions.

MAURITANIA (N. Africa), with Numidia, became a Roman province, 33 B.C. Augustus created (39 B.C.) a kingdom formed of Mauritania and part of Gutulia, for Juba II., a descendant of the ancient African princes. Sertorius Paulinus suppressed a revolt here, A.D. 42, when it was made a province, divided into parts. The country was subjugated by the Vandals, 429, and Greeks, 553, and fell into the hands of the Arabs, about 660. See Morocco, and Moors.

The Mauretanian steamship of the Council line, 79 ft. in length, by 12 ft. 6 in. beam, of 325 tons, launched at Wollaston, 23 Sept. 1897; eastern passage record, 4 days 17 hrs. 51 min.; average speed, 2373 knots; arriving at queenstown from New York, July 24th, shortest time for westward passage, 4 days 10 hrs. 51 min., arriving at New York — 30 Sept. 1899.

MAURITIUS, or ISLE OF FRANCE (in the Indian Ocean), was discovered by the Portuguese, 1505; but the Dutch were the first settlers in 1598. They called it after prince Maurice, their stadtholder, but on the acquisition of the Cape of Good Hope, they deserted it; and it continued unsettled until the French landed, and gave it a name and one of the finest provinces in France, 1715. This island was taken by the British, 2 Dec. 1810, and continued to them by the treaty of Paris in 1814. The bishopric was founded 1885. Sir Henry Barkly, governor, in 1883, succeeded by sir Arthur H. Gordon, 1870; sir George F. Bowen, 1879; sir J. Pope Hennessy, Dec. 1882; sir Charles C. Lees, Sept. 1880; sir Herbert E. H. Jerningham, April, 1893; sir C. Bruce, Jan. 1897; sir Arthur Guinness, 1891. Population, 1910 (est.), 414,350. Capital, Port Louis; population, 62,075. Revenue, 1918, 558,805.; expenditure, 541,420. Imports, 1,115,149.; exports, 2,239,000.; Debts, £41,351. Reports commenced 1866, 120 miles open 1908. By an awful hurricane, on 11 March, 1898, great damage was done to shipping and buildings, with much loss of life.

Discussions between sir J. Pope Hennessy and Mr. Clifford Lloyd and the council, April; Mr. Lloyd removed (made governor of the Seychelles); sir Horace Robinson as royal commissioner investigates the affairs, and suspends the governor from action, announced 23 Dec., 1886. Sir J. Pope Hennessy reinstated with alms in July, 1887; arrives at Mauritius 22 Dec., 1883. Violent hurricane, great destruction of buildings, shipping and crops; one-third of port Louis destroyed, 29 April; total number of deaths reported, 1,239. Relief committees; lion of 100,000,000. to the colony guaranteed by the British government about June, 1882.

Destructive cyclone, with loss of life 23 Feb., 1894. Statue of queen Victoria unveiled at St. Louis, 22 June, 1867.

Sir Gélcourt Auguste Antoine, able financier born 1785, died 6 June, 1869.

Visit of the duke and duchess of Cornwall, foundation stone of the Queen Victoria memorial at Port Louis, laid 5 May, 1901. The Seychelles, hitherto a dependency of Mauritius, constituted a separate colony 7 Nov., 1903. Great floods at St. Louis and district, 71 lives, recorded in 46 hours at Moka; 44 in, in, at, industrial estate — 8-9 June, 1904. Death of sir War, Hy, Marshal, K.C.M.G., formerly aud;orgeneral, b. 1827 — 21 July, 1895.

MAUSOLEUM. Artemisia married her own brother, Mausolus, king of Caria, Asia Minor, 377 B.C. At his death, 353, it is said she drank in liquor his ashes after his body had been burned, and erected to his memory at Halicarnassus a monument, one of the seven wonders of the world (350 B.C.), termed Mausoleum. She invited all the literary men of her age, and proposed rewards to him who composed the best elegie panegyric upon her husband. The prize was adjudged to Theopompus, 357 B.C. She died 352 B.C. The statue of Mausolus is among the antiquities brought from Halicarnassus by Mr. (of, sir) C. T. Newton in 1857, and placed in the British Museum. A mausoleum for the royal family of England was founded by queen Victoria at Frogmore, 15 March, 1862. Queen Victoria and her Prince Consort buried there.

MAUVE (French for malva, mallow), a dye produced by Dr. Stenhouse from lichens in 1848, now produced from Anilin (which see).

MAY, the fifth month of the year, received its name, some say, from Romulus, who gave it this appellation in respect to the senators and nobles of his city, who were denominated maiores; others supposed it was so called from Maia, the mother of Mercury, to whom they offered sacrifices on the first day. The ancient Romans used to go in procession to the grove of Egeria on May-day; see Mid-May-day. See under Working Men.

MAYNOOTH COLLEGE. (Ireland), founded by parliament, 1795, and endowed by a yearly grant voted for the education of students designed for the Roman Catholic priesthood in Ireland. An act for its government was passed in 1800. It contains about 500 students. Permanent endowment of this college (30,000l. for the enlargement of the buildings and 20,000l. annually) was granted by parliament, June, 1845. This occasioned much controversy in England, a motion being made for its abolition almost every session. The college was repaired and enlarged in 1890. By the Irish Church Act, passed 20 July, 1869, the annual parliamentary grant was to cease after 1 Jan. 1871; a compensation being made. The buildings were much injured by fire, 31 Oct. 1878; damage estimated at £40,000. The pictures and books were saved. The centenary celebrated, an international assembly of ecclesiastics present, 25-27 June, 1895. The king and queen visit the college (see Ireland, 1903), Mgr. Gargan, president since 1892, died aged 85, 27 Aug. 1903.

MAYORS ASSASSINATION.

Richard Southwell Bourke, earl of Mayo, was born 21 Feb. 1822. A lord Naas he was chief secretary for Ireland, in the Derby and Disraeli administrations, 1852, 1858-9, 1860-8. In Sept. 1868, he was appointed viceroy of India, and energetically fulfilled the duties. He was assassinated at Boor Bazar in the Andaman islands, on a visit of inspection, by Shere Ali, a convict, 8 Feb. 1872. The Indian government granted an annual pension of £1000 to the countess, and 20,000£, for the children; and 1000£, a year was added to lady Mayo's pension by parliament, voted unanimously, 22 July, 1872.

MAYORS OF THE PALACE.

The most of the Norman conquest, 1066, the chief officer of London was called port-warre, afterwards softened into port-gaerre, from Saxon words signifying chief governor of a harbour. He was afterwards called provost, but in Henry II's reign the Norman title of mayor (from which mayor) was brought into use. At first the mayor was chosen for life, but afterwards for periods of irregular duration; now he is chosen annually, but is eligible for re-election. In the City of London he must be an alderman, and have been sheriff. His duties commence on 4 Nov. In early times the mayor was always an M.P. for the city. The prefix baron is peculiar to the mayors of London, York, Rochester, Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham, Sheffield, Bristol (1882), Cork (1900), Sydney and Melbourne (1902), Cardiff (1904), and to the provosts of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dunfermline, Aberdeen and Perth. The dukedoms of Norfolk and Netherland, the marquis of Ripon, and the earls of Derby and Lowdale, and other peers were elected mayors, Nov. 1895. Many other peers-elect since then.

The first mayor of London, Henry Fitz Adam, held office for 24 years, appointed 1189 (see Sir Thomas Lacey, created lord mayor by Edw. III., 1334). Sir Henry Pickard, who had been lord mayor of London in 1837, summarily entertained in one day four monarchs: Edward, king of England; Charles, king of France; Alexander, king of Sicily; and David, king of Scotland; the Black Prince and many of the nobility being present. Nov. 1862. Sir John Norman, lord mayor, went by water to be sworn in at Westminster, and it is said instigated lord mayor's show.

The most costly pageant of the show had aside 1868. The lord mayor entertained the prime reagents of England, the emperor of Russia, king of Prussia, and numerous foreigners of high rank. 13 June, 1874. The lord mayor, Farncombe, gave a banquet to prince Albert and the mayors of most of the boroughs of the United Kingdom, in furtherance of the project of the great International Exhibition, 1851. 21 March, 1859. The lord mayor, sir F. Moon, entertained the emperor and empress of the French. 15 April, 1855.

The lord mayor, H. S. Phillips, entertained the king and queen of the Belgians, July; entertained by them at Brussels. Oct. 1866. The lord mayor entertained the viceroy of Egypt, 11 June; the sultan, 18 July, 1873; the shah of Persia, 20 June, 1875; the czar. 18 May, 1874. Lord Mayor Nottidge died while in office (the first since William Beckford, who died 21 June, 1790), 11 April, 1885.

It is now the custom when foreign rulers visit England for them to be entertained at the guildhall by the lord mayor, and during 1895-10 many European royalties, including the king and queen of Portugal, the king of Spain, the queen of Greece, president Loubet, ex-president Roosevelt and others, have been welcomed by the City Corporation.

Dangerfield, who secreted a bundle of sedition letters in the lodgings of one of his friends, and then gave information to the custom-house officers to search for smuggled goods, 23 Oct., 1679. After Dangerfield's apprehension, on suspicion of forging these letters, papers were found concealed in a meal-tub at the house of a woman with whom he cohabited, which contained the scheme to be sworn to, accusing the most eminent persons in the nation of treason,—particularly the ears of Shutesbury, Essex, and Halifax. On Dangerfield's being whirled the last time, as part of his punishment, 1 June, 1685, one of his eyes was struck out by a barrister named Robert Francis. This caused his death, for which his assailant was hanged.

MEAT, see Provisions.

MEAT-BISCUIT, said to have been invented by Cecil Borden, 1850. See Milk.

MEATH (Ireland). Many episcopal sees in Meath (as Conard, Duleek, and others of less note) were fixed at Conard, before 1115-2, when the division of the bishoprics in Ireland was made by John Paparo, then legate from Pope Eugene III.
Eugene was the first styled bishop of Meath, about 1174. Meath was valued, 30 Henry VIII., at 373/2. 128. per annum.

MECCA (in Arabi), the birth-place of Muhamed, about 571, whence he was compelled to flee, 15 July, 622 (the Hegira). On one of the neighbouring hills is a cave, where it is asserted he retired to perform his devotions, and where the greatest capital of the Koran was brought to him by the angel Gabriel, 604. Mecca, after being vainly besieged by Hoscem for the caliph Yazid, 682, was taken by Abdalmelek, 692. In 1803 it fell into the hands of the Wahabees, a Mahometan sect. They were expelled by the g. T. of Egypt in 1818, who retired in 1841. It is said that 100,000 pilgrims visited Mecca in 1848, and only 35,000 in 1850.
The grand sherif was assassinated by a fanatic, 21 March, 1880. Pilgrimage to Mecca still continues; annual average, about 300,000 in 1910.

Sultan reported to have decided to construct a railway (the Hijaz railway) from Damascus to Mecca, chiefly for the benefit of pilgrims: early 1900.
Line completed 25 miles 8. of Mezabir, 28 miles from Damascus; earthworks completed 40 miles further. Feb., 1902. Death of the grand sherif.
July 1, 1905. Inauguration of the Hijaz railway from Damascus to the Holy city.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS' INSTITU-TION. See under Engineers, 1847.

MECHANICS. The simple mechanical powers have been ascribed to heathen deities; the axe, wedge, winch, &c. to Daedalus; see Steam Engine, Motion.

Aristotle writes on mechanics about 350 B.C. The properties of the lever, &c., demonstrated by Archimedes, who died 212 B.C. He had the foundations of nearly all these inventions, the further prosecution of which is the beast of our age. Wallis (1698) The hand-mills or marts, were in use in the Romans.
MEDICAL INSTITUTIONS.

The water mill was probably invented in Asia; the first that was described was near one of the rivers in Armenia, and machines were made in Egypt, Sumeria, and Lydia in the 1st millennium B.C.

A water mill is said to have been erected on the river Tiber, at Rome, about 400 B.C.

Pupils wrote on mechanical boards about 400 B.C.

Hanging mills on the Tiber were in use in Greece, about 793 B.C.

Watermills were in general use in the 12th century.

Sulphur was obtained from a mill in Asia about 1400 B.C.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTIONS.

An institution for learning mechanics was established in 1798, by Mr. Birkbeck in Glasgow, 1800; the first mechanics' institute, properly so called, was organized in Mr. Birkbeck's in London, 1824; and many others since on a wider basis, the original idea being to teach mechanics the principles of their various trades. From the mechanics' institutes have sprung numerous workmen's social and recreative clubs, and technical and other educational organizations.

MECHANICS' MAGAZINE, weekly; established Aug. 1823; was incorporated with Iron, June, 1825.

MECHLIN or MALINES (Belgium), renowned for its lace manufacture, was founded in 833; the town was captured by the Normans in 934; sacked by the Spaniards, 1522; taken by the French, 1537, and by the English, 1589; and frequently plundered in the 17th and 18th centuries, but retaining its ancient privileges and the evil fortunes of the country. A Royal Catholic congress was held here Sept. 1807.

MECKLENBURG (S. Germany), formerly a principality in Lower Saxony, now independent of the two grand-duchies of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

The city of Mecklenburg-Schwerin is about 150 miles from Berlin. The city of Mecklenburg-Strelitz is about 60 miles from Berlin. The city of Mecklenburg-Thorn is about 100 miles from Berlin. The city of Mecklenburg is about 150 miles from Berlin.

During the Thirty years' war Mecklenburg was captured by Wallenstein, who became its duke, 1628; it was restored to its own duke, 1639. After several changes the government was settled in 1701, as it now exists in the two branches of Schwerin and Strelitz. In 1813 the dukes were made grand dukes. The dukes joined the new North German Confederation by treaty, 21 Aug. 1866.

1825. George, born 12 Aug. 1777; died 6 Sept. 1850.

The royal family of England is intimately allied with the house of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

MEDALS, see Numismatics.

The ancient medals resembled medallions. Modern medals began about 1553 in the 16th century with the works of Vitore Pisano, of Verona, who died 1456; and his followers. Charles I. authorized the presentation of a badge or medal for "forborn hopes" to soldiers, May, 1643. The house of commons resolved to grant rewards and medals to the fleet whose officers (Blake, Monk, Penn and Lawson) had maintained a glorious victory over the Dutch fleet, off the Texel, in 1653. Blake's medal of 1655 was bought by his majesty, William IV., for 50 guineas. In 1662 an act was passed for applying the tenth part of the proceeds of prizes for medals and other rewards for officers, seamen, and marines. Subsequent to Lord Howe's victory, 1 July, 1794, it was thought expedient to institute a naval medal. Medals were struck for the victory of Waterloo; a general war medal (for the war 1793-1814) was ordered in 1817; and special medals were given after the Kaffir and Chinese wars.

Medals were presented by the queen to persons distinguished in the war in the Crimea, 18 May, 1855. Medals were presented to men engaged in the war in the Crimea, 1855; and after Egyptian war, 1882, described by the queen at Windsor, 21 Nov., 1882; medals for the South African war, 1887; and for the South African war, 1900.

MEDICAL COUNCIL. The Medical Act, 1858, "to regulate the qualifications of practitioners in medicine and surgery;" was amended in 1860, and an important amendment act passed 1886. It established "the General Council of Medical Education and Registration of the United Kingdom." The Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons were placed on a joint examining board. The first meeting of this council took place on 23 Nov. 1858, when sir E. C. Brodie was elected first president (who on 30 Nov. was elected president of the Royal Society). He was succeeded by Mr. J. H. Green in June, 1860; by Dr. George Burrows, Jan. 1864; by Dr. George Edward Parget in 1870; and by Dr. Henry Wentworth Acland in 1874; Mr. John Marshall in 1887, and by Sir Richard Quain, bart., in 1891 (died, 1898); Sir W. Turner, 1898; Dr. D. MacAllister, 1903; Sir R. Douglas Powell, R.t., 1915. The first Medical Register was issued in July, 1859. In 1862 the council was incorporated by parliament, and authorised to prepare and sell a new Pharmacopoeia, which was published as the "British Pharmacopoeia," in 1864. New editions have appeared since.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE. That branch of medical science which deals with such subjects as the action of drugs in poisoning, bloodstains, insanity, &c., in determining criminal and civil responsibility in respect of legal questions.

MEDICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON, founded 1773. Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, founded 1803.

MEDICI FAMILY, the restorers of literature and the fine arts in Italy, were chiefs or signori of the republic of Florence from 1431, in which year Cosmo de' Medici, who had been banished from the republic, was recalled and made its chief; he ruled for thirty years. Lorenzo de' Medici, styled "the Magnificent," and the "Father of Letters," ruled Florence from 1469 to 1492. Giovanni de' Medici (pope Leo X.) was the son of Lorenzo. Rosee. From 1569 to 1577 the Medici family were hereditary grand dukes of Tuscany (which see). Cattarina de' Medici became queen of France in 1547, and regent in 1550. She plotted with the duke of Alva to destroy the Protestants in 1568. The Medici family became extinct 1737; on the death of Gian Gastone, 7th grand duke. In 1743 the electress palatine, the only sister of the above, died; the last of the Medici.

MELBOURNE ADMINISTRATIONS.

On the retirement of earl Grey, 1 July, 1834, viscount Melbourne became first minister of the crown, 15 July. When viscount Althorp became earl Spencer, on his father's decease, Nov., same year, lord Melbourne waited on the king to receive his majesty's command as to the appointment of a new chancellor of the Exchequer, when his majesty said he considered the administration at an end. Sir Robert Peel succeeded, but was compelled to resign in 1835, and lord Melbourne returned to office. His administration finally terminated, 30 Aug., 1841, sir Robert Peel again coming into power; see Administrations.

FIRST ADMINISTRATION, July, 1834: resigned Nov., 1834.

Viscount Melbourne, first lord of the treasury.

Marquis of Lansdowne, lord president.

Earl Mulgrave, privy seal.

Viscount Althorp, chancellor of the exchequer.

Viscount Melbourne, viscount Palmerston, and T. Spring Rice (afterwards lord Monteagle), home, foreign, and colonial secretaries.

Lord Auckland, admiralty.

W. C. Perceval (afterwards lord Melbourne), and C. P. Thomson (afterwards lord Sydenham), boards of control and trade.

Lord John Russell, paymaster of the forces.

SECOND ADMINISTRATION, April, 1835.

Viscount Melbourne, first lord of the treasury.

Marquis of Lansdowne, lord president.

Viscount Duncannon, privy seal, and woods and forests (succeeded by earl of Clarendon, Jan., 1840).

T. Spring Rice, chancellor of the exchequer (succeeded by Francis T. Baring, Aug., 1835.)

Lord John Russell, home secretary (succeeded by marquis of Normandy, Aug., 1835).

Viscount Palmerston, foreign secretary.

Viscount Bick, secretary for war (succeeded by T. B. Baring, Sept., 1836)

Lord John Russell, home secretary (succeeded by earl of Minto, Sept., 1837).

Wm. Lamb, born in 1775; became M. P. for Westminster, 1822; secretary for Ireland, 1824; succeeded his father as viscount Melbourne, 1826; died 21 Nov., 1845.
MENSURATION.

Sir John C. Holhousen, board of control.
C. Poulett Thomson, board of trade (succeeded by Henry Labouchere, Aug. 1839).

Lord Holland, chancellor of Exchequer (succeeded by Earl of Clarendon, Oct. 1839).

The chancellorship in commission; Sir C. Petyt (afterwards Lord Cottenham), became lord chancellor, Jan. 1839.

MELEGANO. See Marignano.

MELÉNITE, an explosive invented by M. Turpin, a French chemist; approved by the French War Minister, Dec. 1886.

The missile landed, notice by the chamber of deputies, May, June, 1881. M. Turpin and captain Trifone sentenced to imprisonment, exile and fines for receiving money for communications respecting melinite to foreigners, 17 June, 1891.

MELFI (Apulia, S. Italy) was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, 14 Aug. 1851: about 600 persons perished.

MELODISTS' CLUB, founded in 1825 by admirers of Dibdin; prizes were offered.

MELODrama, in which dialogue was formerly interspersed with music, began in Germany in the 18th century, and was introduced here by Thomas Holcroft.

MELORA or MELORIA, a small island in the Mediterranean, near which the Pisian fleet defeated the Genoese, in 1241, capturing many bishops going with much treasure to a council. The total destruction of the Pisian fleet on 6 Aug. 1284, by the Genoese near the same place, after a most sanguinary conflict, was considered to be the just punishment of their impiety.

MELOS (now Milo), one of the Cyclades in the Egean sea, early colonised by the Spartans. During the Peloponnesian war the Melians adhered to Sparta, till the island was captured, after seven months' siege, by the Athenians, who massacred all the men and sold the women and children as slaves, 416 B.C. A statue of Venus, found here in 1820, was placed in the Louvre, 1834.

Many statues, etc., discovered by excavations, reported...

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT (Charges and Allegations) ACT, passed 13 Aug., 1888. See under Ireland and Fertilizers.

MEMEL, an important commercial port in Prussia, built about 1252 by the Livonian order. It was fortified by the Teutonic knights, 1404. It was almost totally destroyed by fire, 4 Oct., 1854.

MEMONEUM or RAMESELON (Thebes, Egypt), the first Egyptian monument (1455: Brugsch), the tomb of Osymandyas, according to Durckheim, now considered to be that of Rameses III., about 1200, Brugsch.

MEMORIAL HALL, see Independents.

MEMORY, see Macmonico.

MEMPHIS, an ancient city of Egypt ("of which the very ruins are stupendous"), is said to have been built by Menes. It included several grand temples with the tombs of the kings. The invasion of Cambyses, 525 B.C., began the ruin of Memphis, and the founding of Alexandria, 331 B.C., completed it. It was restored by Septimius Severus, A.D. 202. In the 7th century, under the dominion of the Saracens, it fell into decay.

MEMPHIS, Tennessee, U.S., on the Mississippi, was taken from the Confederates by the federals after a severe conflict, 6 June, 1862.

The cyclorama of Memphis as it might have appeared at the departure of the Israelites from Egypt 1441 B.C., painted by Herr Edmund Börsinger, was exhibited at Niagara-hall, Westminster, Jan. 1892.

MENAGERIE, see Zoology, Tower.

Mr. Phineas Taylor Barnum's great menagerie at Bridgeport, Connecticut, burnt; a great many animals perish; loss about 150,000. 20 Nov. 1887. Mr. Barnum purchased the old Woodward's collection Jan. 1888. See Barnum.

MENAI STRAIT (between the Welsh coast and the Isle of Anglesey). Suetonius Paulinus, when he invaded Anglesey, transported his troops across this strait in flat-bottomed boats, 59. In crossing this strait, a ferry-boat was lost, with fifty persons, chiefly Irish, 4 Dec. 1785. The road from London to Holyhead was regarded as the highway from the British metropolis to Dublin; Mr. Telford was applied to by the government to perfect this road by the London and Holyhead mail-coach route, which he did by erecting beautiful suspension bridges over the river Conway and the Menai Strait, commenced in July, 1818, finished in July, 1825, opened 30 Jan. 1826. The Britannia tubular bridge over the Menai was constructed by Stephenson and Fairbairn in 1843-50; see Tubular Bridges.

MENDICANT FRIARS. Several religious orders commenced alms-begging in the 13th century, in the pontificate of Innocent III. They spread over Europe, and formed many communities; but at length by a general council, held by Gregory X. at Lyons, in 1272, were reduced to four orders—Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, and Augustines. The Capuchins and others branched off. See Franciscans, etc.

MENDICITY SOCIETY (Red Lion-square, London), was established in 1818 for the suppression of public begging and other impositions. Tickets received from the society are given to beggars, who obtain relief at the society's house, if deserving. (See Poor.) The society has been much aided by the action of the Charity Organization society (which see), established in 1870; they agree to co-operate together, June, 1875.

MENDOZA, in the Argentine republic, nearly destroyed by an earthquake, one of the most awful recorded, 20 March, 1864; above 7,000 persons perished.

MENIPPE, see Satur.

MENNUNITES, four sects of Dutch, Flemish and German baptists: derive their name from Menno Simons (1505-61), formerly a catholic priest, who became a teacher and leader of the anabaptists, about 1537, and published his "True Christian Belief" in 1539; subsequently the division of the sects ensued. The Mennonites, objecting to war, emigrated from Prussia to Odesa, to escape military service, and went thence to America, 1878.

MENSURATION. The properties of cone sections were discovered by Archimedes, to whom the chief advancement in mensuration may be attributed. He also determined the ratio of spheres, spheroids, etc., about 218 B.C.; see Archimedes. The "Mensurator," a new machine for the solution of mensuration triangles, was invented by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Adams, at the British Association meeting at Brighton, Aug. 1872.
MOUNTA (near Monte Rotondo, in the old papal states). Here Garibaldi and his volunteers, after having intrenched his positions at Monte Rotondo and Montanuta on their march towards Tivoli, on Sunday 3 Nov. 1849, were totally defeated by the political and French troops under generals Kanizlar and Poldes, after a severe conflict, in which general Failly said "the Chassepot rifles did wonders." There were about 5000 men on each side, but the Garibaldians were very badly armed. The loss of the papal and French troops was about 2000 killed and wounded; that of Garibaldi about 800. Garibaldi crossed the Italian frontier, and was arrested at Corse, and eventually sent to Caprera (about 25 Nov.). See Rome. A monument to the Garibaldians who fell here was inaugurated 25 Nov. 1877.

MENTZ or MAYENCE (S. W. Germany), the Roman Magnaentiana, built about 15 B.C. The archbishopric was founded by Balneacc, 743. Many diets have been held here; and here John Fanst established a printing press, about 1449. A festival in honor of Gutenberg was celebrated here in 1857, another June 1869. See Printing. Mentz was given up to the Prussians, 29 Aug. 1866, 250th anniversary of the birth of Gutenberg, typographical exhibition opened by the grand duke of Hesse, 23 June, 1869. Population 1867, 94,170.

MEN, INSTITUTES of, the very ancient code of India. Sir Wm. Jones, who translated them into English (1744), considers their date should be placed between Homer (about 92 B.C.) and the Roman Twelve Tables (about 449 B.C.).

MERCANTILE MARINE ACT was passed in Aug. 1850, and amended Aug. 1851.

MERCATOR'S CHARTS, said to have been constructed by Gerard Mercator or Kaulmann and published 1550, and applied to navigation by Edward Wright about 1590.

MERCHANDISE MARKS ACT, passed in 1862 to punish forgeries of trade-marks. Another act passed in 1887; reported effectual, 1890; amended 1891-94; reported partially effectual by a committee, July, 1897. See Trade Marks.

At an International Conference on the subject of fraudulent trade-marks, held at Madrid 7-14 April, 1889, a convention was agreed to. Report of the select committee on the Trades Mark bill, issued 3 Aug. 1895.

MERCHANT ADVENTURERS' COMPANY, established by the duke of Brabant in 1242, was extended to England in Edward III.'s reign, and was formed into a corporation in 1361. The MERCHANT-TAYLORS, a rich company of the city of London, of which many kings have been members, was so called after the admission of Henry VIII. and his company, 1504, but were incorporated in 1497. Their school was founded in 1531. See.

MERCHANT SHIPPING ACT of 1854 was amended by acts passed in 1855, 1857, 1871, 1872, and 1877. The act suddenly passed 13 Aug. 1854, gave further power to the Board of Trade for stopping unseaworthy ships. Other acts passed 1870, 1880, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1886, 1890, consolidated 1892; amended 1895, and 1897; merchant shipping (liability of shipowners and others) act passed 6 Aug. 1901; see Acts of State, and State.

The state of these laws having been changed in 1897, a new bill brought in by Mr. Joseph Chesham, presented the Board of Trade to prevent overcharging, under-manning, and over-insurance. 3 July, 1894. Royal commission to inquire into mercantile trade, especially shipping (earl of Abercorn, the duke of Edinburgh, Mr. J. Chamberlain, Mr. Hart, Mr. H. Green, Mr. J. S. Redford). Nov. 1899, 15 Nov. 1899. The bill was totally defeated by the political and French troops under generals Kanizlar and Poldes, after a severe conflict, in which general Failly said "the Chassepot rifles did wonders." There were about 5000 men on each side, but the Garibaldians were very badly armed. The loss of the papal and French troops was about 2000 killed and wounded; that of Garibaldi about 800. Garibaldi crossed the Italian frontier, and was arrested at Corse, and eventually sent to Caprera (about 25 Nov.).

MERCIA, see under Britain.

MERCURY, the planet nearest the sun, and the smallest known to the ancients. Schiaparelli asserts his rotation to be as long as his revolution in his orbit. The transit of Mercury over the sun's disk, of 1766 occurrence and first observed by Gassendi, 1631, was observed by Mr. James South, 1868, at Athens, 10 May, 1891; well observed by Prof. Barnard at Lick Observatory, California, 10 Nov. 1894. See Conrad. See also Plate and Quickilver. The Greek god Hermes was the Roman Mercury.

MERCY, ORDER OF (in France), was established with the object of accomplishing the redemption of Christian captives among the Saracens, by John de Matha in 1385. See Héritage. Another order was formed by Pierre Sola in Spain, 1223. A League of Mercy (based on the plan of the guild founded by the late duchess of Teck), organized to further the objects of the prince of Wales's (then king Edward's) hospital fund for London; an "Order of Mercy," established in connection with the league, as a reward for free service to the sick and poor, the prince and princess of Wales, presidents, 1 March, 1892; succeeded by the present prince and princess of Wales, Nov. 1901. Order distributed yearly at Marlborough house by the prince of Wales.

City of London branch of the league of mercy—inaugural meeting at the Mansion-house, 21 Oct. 1899.

MERIDA (Spain), a town in Estremadura (built by the Romans), was taken by the French, Jan. 1811. Near this town, at Arroyos Molinos, the British army under general (afterwards lord) Hill defeated the French under general Gudin, after a severe engagement, 28 Oct. 1811. The British took Merida from the French in 1812, general Hill leading the combined forces of English and Spanish troops.

MERIDIAN, see under Geology.

MERINO SHEEP, imported into England from Spain, 1758, are thought to be descendants of English sheep taken to Spain as part of the dowry of John of Gaunt's daughter Katherine, 1396.

MERIT, ORDER OF (British), created by Edward VII., for those who have won distinction in the army, navy, literature, art and science, 26 June, 1902. First members: earl Roberts, viscount Wolseley, viscount Kitchener, adm. sir H. Keppel, gen. Sir E. K. Seymour, lord...
MEROE. 897 MESSINA.

MEROE, an ancient city and country of Africa, near the sources of the Nile, said to have flourished under sacredotal government in the time of Herodotus, about 450 B.C. The priest-king Ergamenes massacred the priests and became absolute, about 300 B.C. The ruins of the ancient capital were discovered by Caillaud between 1849 and 1852. Site of the ancient city discovered by Prof. Sayce, Jan. 1909.

MEROVINGIANS, the first race of French kings, 418-752; see France and Mayors.

MERRIMAC, see United States, 1862.

MERRY-ANDREW. The name is said to have been first given to Andrew Borde, a physician, who lived in the reign of Henry VIII., and who, on some occasions, on account of his fanatical manners, appeared at court, 1547.

MERSEY TUNNEL, see Tunnel.

MERTON (Surrey). At an abbey here, the barons under Henry III., 21 Jan. 1236, held a parliament which enacted the Provisions of Merton, the most ancient body of laws next after Magna Charta. They were repealed in 1863; see Estards. The statute of Merton also provides for the enclosure of common lands.

MERY, or Mere (the ancient Antiochia Moria), a town of independent Turkestán, Central Asia. It flourished under the Seljuk Turks, especially under Sultan Alp Arslan; it was sacked by the Mongols in 1221. It became subject to Persia in 1510; to the emir of Bokhara in 1787; to the Turkomans in 1836, and to Russia 1853-4. Nearly 10,000 Turcomans died of malignant fever, March-Oct. 1896. See Russia and Turkestan.

MESERISM. Frederick Anthony Mesmer, a German physician, of Merseburg, published his doctrines in 1766, contending, in a thesis on planetary influence, that the heavenly bodies diffused through the universe a subtle fluid which acts on the nervous system of animated beings. Quitting Vienna for Paris, in 1778, he gained numerous proscytes and much money by experiments with and without metallic plates, producing effects termed then "animal magnetism," now "hypnotism." A committee of physicians and philosophers investigated his pretensions, and Bailly, in a paper drawn up in 1784, exposed the futility of animal magnetism. Mesmerism excited attention again about 1828, when Mesmer's direct pupils and others announced their belief in it. In 1859, the Mesmeric Infirmary issued its tenth annual report, archbishop Whately being president, and the earl of Carlisle and Mr. Monckton Milnes (afterwards lord Houghton) among the vice-presidents. See Animal Magnetism and Hypnotism.

The "New Mesmerism" exhibited in Paris by Dr. Luys and others, which included the alleged exteriorization of sensations and transference of sensation to inanimate objects, such as dolls, was well described in the Times, 28 Dec. 1952, and 5, 11 Jan. 1903, and by Mr. Ernest Hart in the British Medical Journal, Jan. 1893.

MESSOPATAMIA, the district between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates (which see, and Aram) successively held by Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Arabs and Turks. Mesopotamia is mentioned in Gen. xxiv. 10; Acts ii. 9, and other places.

MESSALIANS, a sect professing to adhere to the letter of the gospel, about 310, refused to work, quoting this passage, "Labour not for the food that perisheth."

MESSENA (now Moncre-Metro), in the Peloponnesus, an ancient kingdom. It had long sanguinary wars with Sparta. It was at first governed by kings; after its restoration to power in the Peloponnesus it formed an inferior republic, under the protection first of the Thetians, and afterwards of the Macedonians.

The first Messenian war began 743 B.C. It was occasioned by violence offered to some Spartan women in a temple of devotion common to both nations; the king of Sparta being killed in his efforts to defend the females. Eventually, Rhome was taken, and the Messenians became slaves to the conquerors.

The second war, to throw off the Spartan yoke, commenced about 685, ending in the defeat of the Messenians, who fled to Sicily.

The third war (the Messenian emigrate) 494 B.C.

MESSIAH, synonymous with Christ "the anointed," foretold by Daniel ii. 25, 533 B.C. "We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ." John i. 41, "The Messiah," Handel's greatest oratorio, composed by him in twenty-three days (22 Aug.-14 Sept. 1741), was first performed at Dublin, 13 April, 1742, the receipts being given by him to the charities of that city.

MESSINA (Sicily), so named by the Samians, who seized this city, then called Zancle, 671 B.C. It was seized by the Mamertini (which see), about 281 B.C. It belonged for many ages to the Roman empire; was taken by the Saracens, about A.D. 829. Pasquier, Roger the Norman took it from them by surprise, about 1072. Revolts against Charles of Anjou, and is succoured by Peter of Aragon. Revolts in favour of Louis XIV. of France, 1765; the Spaniards punish it severely 1773. Almost ruined by an earthquake and eruption of Etna 1793. Nearly depopulated by a plague 1742. Half destroyed by an earthquake 1753. Dead quarters of the British forces in Sicily, prior to 1814.
METEOROLOGY.

SR W. Reed published his work on the "law of storms" in 1838. The works of Daniel (1845), Keuntz (1845), Muller (1847), and Buchan (1857) are also included.

The "British" Meteorological Society, established in 1861, has continued since then. It is a British society, and has a large membership. See: "The British Meteorological Society, established in 1861". The British Meteorological Society has a large membership, and has published many works on meteorology, including "Weather" and "Scientific Annals".

The Royal Meteorological Society's annual exhibitions began in 1889. Meteorological observatories have been erected in many other countries. The Meteorological Society of France, established in 1843, has continued since then. The society was founded by Laplace, and has a large membership. See: "The Meteorological Society of France, established in 1843".

Storm-warnings are sent out in the sea on the Board of Trade, and printed in the "Weekly Weather Reporter". The Society's annual report for the year 1867, published in 1871, gives a detailed account of the work of the society since its foundation, in 1861.

"Daily weather charts" were first issued by the Meteorological Office in 1864, and "Weekly Weather Reports" were first issued in 1876. The Society's annual report for the year 1867, published in 1871, gives a detailed account of the work of the society since its foundation, in 1861.

An observatory on Snowdonia Salzburg (1937) was erected in 1878, and daily reports for midland counties, 1836, 310. Absolute successes 247, absolute failures 26, and partial successes 2, annual, Times, 7 Feb., 1837.

Weather plates (Wernerian) exhibited by professor Nowack at Vienna. Changes in the weather said to be forecasted by alterations in the features of the sky, and by the phenomena of lightning, thunder, etc. See also "Wernerian".

The plant is grown in the Botanical society's garden, London, and many other plants possess this property. See also "Wernerian".

When the experiments were made at the Jeddeloh laboratory, Kew, by L. Oliver and H. Joseph Nowack in October, 1839, when many weather changes occurred, only one forecast was given by the weather plant, which therefore cannot be relied upon for practical purposes. Mr. J. F. Nowack maintains the success of his new system of forecasting atmospheric, etc., disturbances, by Dr. Franklin, 7 Aug., 1839. In 1839, the plant was tested at Denhamshall, London, and to its being influenced by earthquakes.

The 11th annual exhibition of meteorological apparatus, London, opened on 13 March, 1834.

State observatory established by prof. Assmann of Berlin on the Brocken, 7 Oct., 1834.

Observatory on Mount Wellington, Tasmania, begun May, 1835.
METEORS.

Mr. J. G. Synnyn, eminent meteorologist (see Beaufall), died on March, 1893.

Sir Cuthbert Pack, scientist and meteorologist, died, aged 46, 5 July, 1917.

Mr. Jas. Glashier, eminent meteorologist and mathematician, died, aged 73, 2 May, 1899.

International Meteorological Congresses, first at Vienna, 1873, have been held from time to time.

Ben Nevis observatory abandoned owing to cost of maintenance, 1892.

Treyson minute, dated 20 May, 1897, dealing with the constitution of the meteorological office, issued as a parliamentary paper, 21 June, 1895.

Scc. Eboracensis, Thermometer, &c.

METEORS, LUMINOUS, include shooting stars, fire-balls, and falling stones or aerolites. They were described by Halley, Wallis, and others early in the 17th century. The periodicity of the star showers about the 9th of August (termed in the middle ages St. Lawrence’s tears) was discovered separately by Quetelet, 1836, and by Herrick in 1837. The following are remarkable epochs for their annual return:—2 Jan.; 29 July; 3 and 9-12 Aug.; 14-16 Nov.; 10 Dec. R. F. Gregory. See August.

The magnificent continuous star-shower of 14 Nov. 1866, had been predicted by Professor Newton some time previously. A line display occurred on the night of 13 Nov. 1866, in the United States. A similar phenomenon has been witnessed by Homboldt at Guanima (S.A.), 12 Nov. 1799; and by Dr. D. Olmsted, at Newnfoin (U.S.), 13 Nov. 1833. They were well observed in Britain and Europe, 27 Nov. 1787; and in Southern and Western Europe, 27 Nov. 1837.

AEROLITES, falling-stones, accompanying meteors, are found in our museums. They contain iron, nickel, and other minerals.

Explosion of an aerolite above Madrid, windows shattered, houses damaged, etc., 9-29 A.M. 10 Feb., 1899; another exploded, 8, of Cyprus, 12 April, 1899.

Mr. Norman Lockyer (Q.B., R.M.S.), announced his theory, based on spectrum experiments, that all self-luminous bodies in the celestial spaces are composed of meteorites or masses of vapour produced by heat brought about by condensation of meteor swarms due to gravity; Royal Society, 17 Nov. 1837. METHEN TREATY, a treaty for regulating the commerce between Great Britain and Portugal, made 27 Dec. 1703, concluded by Paul Methuen, our ambassador at Lisbon. It greatly favoured the importation of port wine into this country by lowering the duty, to the discouragement of French wines. It was abrogated in 1834.

METHYL, a colourless inodorous gas, a compound of hydrogen and carbon, obtained in the free state first by Frankland and Kolbe separately, in 1834.

METHYLATED SPIRITS. By an act passed in 1855 a mixture of spirits of wine with 10 cent. of its bulk of wood-naphtha, or methylaralcohol, is allowed to be made duty free for use in the arts and manufactures, not less than 450 gallons being made at one time. In 1867 an act was passed permitting the methylated spirits to be retailed by license.

METONIC CYCLE, a period of 19 years, or 6940 days, at the end of which the changes of the moon fall on the same days; see Calippic Period, Golden Number.

METRIC SYSTEM. Before the revolution there was no uniformity in French weights and measures. On 8 May, 1790, the constituent assembly charged the Academy of Sciences with the organisation of a better system. The committee named for the purpose by the academy included the names of Berthollet, Borda, Delambre, Lagrange, Laplace, Meechain, and Prony. Delambre and Meechain were charged with the measurement of an arc of the meridian between Dunkirk and Barcelona, and from their calculations the metre, which is equal to a ten-millionth part of the distance between the poles and the equator (32808 English feet) was made the unit of length and the base of the system by law on 7 April, 1795. The system was completed in 1799, and made by low the only legal one on 2 Nov. 1801. A decree on 12 Feb. accommodated the old measures to the new system; but on 7 July, 1815, it was agreed that after 1 Jan. 1830, the metric and decimal system in its primitive simplicity should be used in all business transactions. The example of France has been followed by the greater part of Europe, but not yet by Great Britain.

The multiples of these units are expressed by Greek numerals (deci, 10, hecto, 100; kile, 1000; metric, 10,000). The divisors are expressed by Latin numerals (centi, 10; milli, 1000; micron, 10,000; quintillion, 1,000,000,000).

Sir John Wrottesley brought the subject before parliament 25 Feb., 1824. A commission of inquiry appointed at the instance of the members of the exchange, Mr. Smee, Rice (since lord Montague), May, 1828. Another commission was appointed (both consisted of eminent mathematicians, and reported strongly in favour of the change) 29 June, 1843. A committee of the house of commons reported to the same effect, 1 Aug. 1853.

Mr. Gladstone, omitting the advantages of the system, thought its introduction premature.

Decimal Association formed for the purpose of obtaining the adoption of the system, June, 1854.

Another commission for inquiries appointed, consisting of lords Montague and Overstone, and Mr. J. G. Hubbard, who published a preliminary report (with evidence), but expressed no opinion, Nov. 1855.

An International Decimal Association formed in the decimal currency adopted in Canada 1 Jan., 1858. The new weights and measures bill (an approximation to the decimal system) was passed, 1854. An act passed "for tender permission the use of the metric system of weights and measures," 2 July, 1854 (repealed by weights and measures act, 1858).

A bill for the universal adoption of the metric system rejected by the commons, 20 July, 1871. International Congress to promote the universal adoption of the metric system 24 Sept. 1875. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.

311 41,115.

1897, the board was empowered to receive into its hospitals any person suffering from fever, small-pox, or diphtheria; to provide an ambulance service, and to undertake the removal of patients from their homes to the hospitals. The provision of housing for the training of poor boys for sea service was sanctioned by an order of the Local Government board in 1875, made under the provisions of the Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867; and under later orders, dating from 1897, the board has been constituted as the central metropolitan authority for dealing with various classes of poor law children. The board has (in 1910) provided accommodation for—

Infirmary divisions—fifteen hospitals and bacteriological establishments.

Accommodation, 9,128 patients, 3,000 staff.

Infants—four asylums, including infirmary for age 1 patients, training school, and infants' colony.

Accommodation, 7,347 patients, 1,000 staff.

Poor-law children—one ringworm school, two ethical philanthropic schools, one infirmary, three sanatoriums or homes, seven homes and working colonies for mentally deficient, and one training ship.

Accommodation, 5,533 inmates, 550 staff.

Ambulances: eight ambulance stations and 150 ambulances and three riverside wharves, with 5 ambulance steamers.

The first asylum was opened in 1870, and the first fever hospital the same year.

The numbers of patients received by the board since its formation, and the numbers received in 1909, are as follows:—

Total received Total received since 1857.

Imbeciles ... 29,518 728
Fever ... 404,181 22,944
Small-pox ... 3,598 15
Training ship ... 10,920 511
Children ... 41,915 8,699

The expenditure in 1909 was as follows:—

Imbecile Asylums Infectious hospitals and ambulance service ... 199,217.

Fever 434,636.

Training ship 18,086.

Schools and homes for children 99,714.

Repayment of, and interest on, loans and general expenses ... 352,957.

Total ... 1,077,770.

This expenditure is met by precepts levied on the several Metropolitan boards of guardians, and is eventually charged to the rates.

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.

was established by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120 (1855) ("For the management of public works in which the metropolitan has a common interest"), amended in 1892. It held its first meeting and elected Mr. (afterwards Sir) John Thwaites as chairman, 12 Dec. 1883. Its powers were extended in order to effect the purification of the Thames by constructing a new main drainage for the metropolis. The board was authorised to raise a loan and levy 3d. in the pound on the property in the metropolis. It was also authorised to construct the Thames Embankment. In 1890 the board received nearly a billion pounds, and expended 190,000; see Science, and Thames, Sir John Thwaites, the chairman, died 8 Aug. 1870, aged 55. Much discussion ensued respecting the appointment of his successor; Mr. Bru c. the home secretary, having intimated the probability of the office being abolished by parliament, with other changes, 1st Aug. 1877. J. McNeil-Hoo (created Baron Magheramorne, June, 1887), a member of the board, was elected chairman for one year, 18 Nov. 1870; annually from 1879 (he died 27th June, 1890). The board was empowered to borrow money by acts passed 1866-87. Its powers extended over 117 square miles, and 3,260,287 persons in 1873. It was composed of delegates from various local boards, &c.

Royal commission of inquiry into the working of the board appointed by the parliament, 1863. Lord Herschell chairman; charges against several; many dismissed.

June-July, 1853

The commissioners' "interim" report discloses cases of negligence, inefficiency, irregularities, and menace of corruption.

Nov.

The board accepted a tender for the construction of a tunnel from Blackwall to Greenwich for £2,260,815. March, 1859

The board was abolished by the local government act of 1888, and its powers, duties, property, debts and liabilities transferred to the London county council, beginning 21 April, 1889, carried into effect by the L.G.B., 21 March, 1889.

Final report of the commission issued 4 May 1853.

METROPOLITAN PUBLIC GARDENS ASSOCIATION, formed 1883, to acquire and lay-out open spaces in London, or disused churchyards, squares, and other vacant sites, providing these with seats and planting trees, &c., the formation of public gymnasium and children's playgrounds. The association also actively opposes the encroachment upon commons and open spaces.

METROPOLITAN RAILWAY (Underground), at first between Paddington and Victoria-street, near Holborn. The act for it passed in 1855; the construction began in the spring of 1855; and it was opened for traffic, 10 Jan. 1863. Many serious difficulties were overcome with great skill and energy by the engineer, John Fowler (knt. 1858; died, 20 Nov. 1878), and the contractors, Jay, Smith, and Knight. In the first six months of 1865 there were 7,462,823 passengers. It has been continued and extended, and there is now an Inner and Outer Circle, and it has been supplemented by the Metropolitan District Railway. Acquired by the Underground company, registered April, 1902. Electrification of the line commenced in 1904, trains on the new system commenced to run, 1 July, 1905.

METROPOLITAN SCHOOL BOARD, instituted by the Elementary Education act, 1870, was elected 29 Nov. 1870 (for three years). It included lord Lawrence, lord Sandon, professor Husley, lord Hordern, and Miss Davies. At its first meeting, 15 Dec., lord Lawrence was elected chairman, and Mr. C. Reed, M.P., vice-chairman. For history, &c., see Education, 1870 et seq. Its powers transferred to the London County Council by London Education Act, 1903, on 1 May, 1904.

METROPOLITAN STREETS ACT (30 & 31 Vict. c. 134) "for regulating the traffic in the metropolis, and for making provision for the greater security of persons passing through the streets," passed 20 Aug. 1867. A short act, modifying the clauses relating to costermongers and cabs, was passed 7 Aug. 1872.

METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, see Metropolitan Water Act.

METZ, a fortified city in Lorraine, annexed to the empire of Germany, 10 May, 1871. Population, 1873, 60,419. It was the Roman Divodunum or Meto, capital of the Mediomatrici, a powerful Gaulish tribe, and afterwards of the kingdom of Austrasia, or Metz, in the 6th century. It was taken by a siege in 1418. It was besieged by Charles VII. of France for seven months in 1444, and was ransomed for 100,000 ducats; was captured by Henry II., 10 April, 1552, and successfully defended by the duke of Guise against the emperor Charles V. with an army of 100,000 men, 31 Oct. 1552 to 15 Jan. 1553.

Metz was ceded to France by the Peace of Westphalia, 24 Oct. 1648, and transferred by Vauxbon and Belleisle. On 28 July, 1790, the emperor Napoleon III. arrived at Metz and assumed the chief command. After the disastrous defeats at Woerth and Fornbach, on 6 Aug. the whole French army (except the corps of MacMahon, De Failly, and Donau) was concentrated here, 10, 11 Aug., and by delay was humiliated by the German Marshal, Marsdau, and the chief command, 8 Aug. The emperor departed with the vanguard, which crossed the Moselle early on 14 Aug.

Battle of Dange or Contreilles, gained by the first German army under von Steinmetz, after several hours' fighting, with great German loss, 14 Aug. 1870.

Bazaine was censured for not advancing on 15 Aug.

Battle of Vionville or Mars-la-Tour, gained by the second German army under prince Frederick Charles, after twelve hours' fighting. By the unexpected unmasking of a mitrailleuse battery, Prince of Reuss, and many German nobles were killed. The victory was at first claimed by the French. (This battle, the most sanguinary in the war, in which the French lost 15,000 men, and were actually defeated, but to which the victory was greatly due. Twice as many Germans were killed as at Koniggratz, the killed and wounded being estimated at 17,000. The French loss was said to have been equally great.) Bazaine masses his troops for a decisive conflict.

17 Aug.

Battle of Rospounville or Gravebotte, gained by the combined French and German armies, under Prince of Orange, by the king in person, after twelve hours' fighting. The most desperate struggle took place on the slopes over Gravebotte, which the Germans gained by nightfall, after repeated fatal charges; the fortune of the day being long in suspense. But the right of the French had been outflanked, they fell back fighting to the last, and retired under cover of Metz. The French are said to have lost 19,000; and the Germans 25,000. (The carriage is considered to have been unexamined; a large number of French prisoners were never made. The German army included Saxons and Hessians.)

2 Aug.

Bazaine repulsed in a sortie at Contreilles, near Metz (the claimed a victory).

26 Aug.

His whole army defeated by gen. Manteufel of the army of prince Frederick Charles, in a battle lasting from the morning of 31 Aug. to noon.

9 Sept.

von Steinmetz sent to govern Posen; prince Frederick Charles sole commander before Metz.

24 Sept.

Vigorous but ineffective sallies. About 100,000 soldiers estimated in Metz. About 40,000 great sortie; the Germans surprised; about 45,000 were French engaged; they are reported to have taken 3 p.m. till dark; loss about 2000 French and 600 Germans.

7 Oct.

About 600 oxen and 500 sheep captured during a sortie.

28 Oct.
General Boyer arrives at Versailles to treat for terms of capitulation - 14 Oct., 1870.

Metz surrenders with the army, including marshals Bazaine, Canrobert, and by Renault or Piechot, about 8,000 officers, 15,456 men, including the imperial guard, 450 pieces of artillery; too minarets; and 456 guns or standards - 27 Oct.

The capitulation was signed at Paris by generals Jarras and Stochle on behalf of the French and German commanders - 27 Oct.

Outbreak destroyed by fire, great loss 2,100 inhabitants destitute 25 Aug. 1896.

University founded 1837. Library contains 133,000 vols. 3,441 students.

Forest fires cover an area of 100 sq. miles; number of deaths, 50-100 1st Oct. 1898.

MICROBES, see Germ.

MICROMETER, an astronomical instrument used to measure any small distances and the minute objects in the heavens, such as the apparent diameters of the planets, &c., invented by Wm. Gascoigne, who was killed at the battle of Marston Moor, 2 July, 1644. It was improved by Huyghens about 1652. Sir Joseph Whitworth made a machine to measure the millionth of an inch, about 1858; the measurement of the 30,000th of an inch is now common. Dr. Carpenter measured a filament, the breadth being the 200,000th part of an inch, 1879.

Dr. P. E. Shaw explains to the Royal society an electrical micrometer which it is stated, can be made to measure the two-millionth of a millimetre, or the fifty-millionth of an inch. This microscope described by Dr. Whitworth, was in connection with the movements of a telephone diaphragm. The measurement was effected by means of an electric current connected with the micrometer and telephone 1st July, 1905.

MICROPHITE, a microscopic plant, especially parasitic; some phytopsychists consider bacteria and bacilli to be microphites, 1890.

MICROPHONE (Greek, mikros, little; phone, sound), a name given by Wheatstone, in 1857, to an instrument for rendering weak sounds audible by means of solid rods. The same name is also given to an arrangement invented (in Dec. 1877) by professor D. E. Hughes (inventor of the type-writing telegraph, born in London 16 May, 1831, died 22 Jan. 1900), and shown to the Royal Society, 9 May, 1878.

MICROSCOPES, said to have been invented by Jansen, in Holland, about 1590; by Galileo, about 1610; by Fontana, in Italy, and by Brehbel, in Holland, about 1621. Those with double glasses were made at the period when the law of refraction was discovered, about 1624. Solar microscopes were invented by Dr. Hooke. In England great improvements were made in the microscope by Benjamin Martin (who invented and sold pocket microscopes about 1730), by Henry Baker, F.R.S., about 1762, and still greater during the 19th century by Wollaston, Ross, Jackson, Varley, Hugh Powell, and others. Diamond microscopes were made by Andrew Phipps, in 1824; and the properties of "test objects" to prove the qualities of microscopes, discovered by him and Goring in 1824-40. A binoical microscope (i.e., for two eyes) was constructed by professor Riddell in 1851, and Wenham's binocular prism was made known in 1861. Naclet's stereoscopic microscope, invented in 1867; Abbe's orthoscopic microscope in 1881. Treatises on the microscope by J. Quekett (1849), by Dr. W. B. Carpenter (1856 et seq.; 8th edition, reconstructed and enlarged by Dr. Pallinger, 1901), and Griffith and Henfrey's "Micrographic Dictionary" (1856, 1875, and 1883), are valuable. The Microscopical Society of London was established 20 Dec. 1839, and the Queen's Microscopical Club, 1865. In 1865 Mr. H. Sorby exhibited his spectrum microscope, by which the millihion of a grain of blood was detected.

The new Ashle-Finlayson comparator, an apparatus by means of which any two slides can be used simultaneously, the images of the slides being projected on to the same plane. A moment, exhibited at the Royal Microscopical Society 15 Feb. 1905.

MICROTOME, an instrument for cutting minute sections of organic tissue for the microscope, invented, 1885, by prof. Wm. Rutherford (who died, 21 Feb. 1890); improved by Dr. Paul Meyer and others.

MIDDLE AGES, see Dark Ages.

MIDDLE-CLASS EXAMINATION AND SCHOOLS, see Education (1858, and 1865-8).

MIDDLE-LEVELS see Levels.

MIDDLESBROUGH, N. Riding of Yorkshire, on the Tees, a coal port and a chief seat of the iron manufacture, the first house erected by George Chapman, April, 1830. New dock, and literary and scientific institution opened, Oct. 1875. Mr. Henry W. F. Bolkow and John Vaughan, heads of great iron-works (Mr. Bolkow, the first mayor and M.P., died 18 June 1888) of the large Greatland district, which had greatly declined since 1874, began to revive in the autumn of 1879. See under Steel. Population, 1861, 18,992; 1891, 75,516; 1891, 91,317; 1901 (est.), 105,255.

A town hall &c. opened by the prince and princess of Wales (afterwards king and queen) 3 Jan. 1893.

Great distress in the district through the Durham miners strike, April et seq.; relieved by subscriptions in London, &c., May, 1879.

Boiler explosion at Warrengate nine deaths; estimated damage £2,000; 40 persons thrown out of employment 11 June, 1893.

Agricultural show 11 Aug., 1893.

Docks and shipyard, new graving 28 Aug., 1907.

Electricity, new supply scheme 14 Feb., 1906.

Mental festival held 30 April, 1906.

Garden city, projected establishment 3 July, 1906.

MIDDLESEX, the metropolitan county of England, was the seat of the Trincomelas in the Roman province. Flavia Caesariana, wife of Andrew, Middle-Sexe, or Middle Saxons, in the kingdom of East-Sexe, or Essex. Lionel Cranfield was created earl of Middlesex, 10 Sept. 1622; succeeded by his sons, James, 1645-51; Lionel, 1651-74, when the title became extinct. Charles Sackville was made early in 1673; and his son became duke of Dorset in 1720. Area of the county formerly 181,320 acres; population, 1811, 305,012. By the Local Government Act, 1888, which came into force in 1902, 314,744 acres (including South Horsey) were given over to London, and 771 to Hertfordshire. Middlesex now has an area of 178,753 acres; population, 1911, 810,215.

Middlesex returns forty-eight M.P.s by act agreed

The Middlesex county record society was established in 1824. It has issued four volumes containing session rolls, &c. (1854 to 1878, 1892.
The Earl of Strathmore, lord lieutenant, president 1878.
The Middlesex sessions now held at the Guildhall, Westminster.

MIDDLESBROUGH HOSPITAL, London, patroon, H. M. queen Mary, and H. M. queen Alexandria; founded, 1745; incorporated, 1839. Foundation-stone of present building laid by the duke of Northumberland, 1755. The hospital (containing with its branches 396 beds) at one time formed an asylum for the French clergy and other refugees during the Huguenot persecution. It was the first hospital to make a specialty of cancer, a wing being furnished by the special treatment of cancer patients in 1807. The research laboratories, devoted entirely to the investigation of cancer, were opened in 1900. Since the foundation of the hospital the following additions have been made:—

Cancer charity, 1792; enlarged 1813, 1829, 1856, 1857.
Medical school, 1835; enlarged 1878, 1880, 1885.
Residential college, 1885.
Trained nurses institute, 1885.
Nurses' home, 1885; enlarged 1878, 1891.
Convalescent home (Cradowton-Sea), 1885.
Residential and bacteriological laboratories, 1900; enlarged 1905 and 1907.
Electric and light department, 1901.

MIDIAN, now ARZ MIDIAN, N. W. Arabia; anciently held by the descendants of Midian, a son of Abraham. Having entered the Israelites to idolatry, they were severely chastised, 1452 B.C. They invaded Camaan about 1249 B.C. and were thoroughly defeated by Gideon.

Capt. Richard F. Burton explored the ruined cities of Midian in 1857, and found the remains of ancient monuments, among which gold and silver. An expedition, equipped by the khedive of Egypt, and placed under his command, started from Suez, 5 Dec. 1877, and returned 29 May, 1878. It brought home 350 species of geological specimens, specimens of silver and copper ore, many coins and other antiquities, and photographs of the remains of ancient cities, &c.

MIDLAND INSTITUTE, BIRMINGHAM, incorporated 1854.

MIDLAND RAILWAY STATION, St. Pancras, N. London, possessing one of the largest roofs in the world, 245 feet 6 inches wide, and 98 feet high, designed by Mr. J. Scott. The engineer was Mr. H. W. Barlow. The architect of the Gothic hotel was Sir G. Gilbert Scott.

MIDWIFERY. Women were the only practitioners among the Hebrews and Egyptians. Hippocrates, 460 B.C., is styled the father of midwifery, as well as of physic. It advanced under Celsius, who flourished a.d. 37, and of Galen, who lived 131. In England midwifery became a science about the period of the institution of the college of physicians, 10 Hen. VII. 1518. Dr. Harvey engaged in the practice of it, about 1663; Astruc affirms that madame de la Valliere, mistress of Louis XIV, in 1663, employed Julian Clement, a surgeon, with great secrecy. Midwives Act, royal assent, 31 July, 1692, enacts that any woman not certified under the act who, after 1 April, 1905, uses the name or title of midwife, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5l.; and that after 1 April, 1890, no woman shall habitually and for gain attend women in childbirth otherwise than under the direction of a qualified medical practitioner, unless she be certified under this act; penalty 10l.

MILAN, Mediolanum, capital of the ancient Liguria, now Lombardy, is reputed to have been built by the Gauls, about 308 B.C. The cathedral, termed domo, was built about 1385, 1881, 414,551; 1862, 401,881; 1904, 581,000.

MILETUS, a Greek city of Ionia, Asia Minor, founded about 1043 B.C. The Milesians defended themselves successfully, 625-612 B.C. During the war with Persia it was taken, 494, but restored, 449. Here Paul delivered his celebrated charge to the elders of the church of Ephesus, A.D. 60 (Acts xx.).

MILFORD HAVEN (S.W. Pembroke). The finest natural harbour in the kingdom. Here the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., landed on his way to encounter Richard III., whom he defeated at Bosworth, 1485. The pagers from this port to Ireland, sailing to Waterford, were established in 1757. The dock-yard, established here, removed higher up the Haven to Pembroke in 1814. Milford made a bid for the American trade, which proved abortive. Now does an extensive business in fish.

MILITARY ASYLUM, ROYAL, at Chelsea, "for the children of the soldiers of the regular army." The first site was laid by the duke of York, 19 June, 1801.

MILITARY EXHIBITION. ROYAL. Chelsea, president the late duke of Cambridge, was opened by the prince of Wales, with the princess (afterwards king and queen), 7 May, 1890; visited by queen Victoria 4 July. The exhibition consisted of the industrial work of the soldiers, artifices of military equipment, pictures lent, and other objects of interest; military sports, drills, &c. Mr. Spencer's strong war balloon ascended 10 May et seq. The exhibition was intended to promote the increase of soldiers' institutes in towns.

The exhibition closed — 1 Nov. 1890. The profits were reported to be 60,741/. 1 May, 1891.

Exhibition at Earl's-court opened by the late duke of Cambridge — 4 May, 1891.

A military tournament, profits devoted to military charities, was annually held in May at the agricultural Hall until 1905, at Olympia, West Kensington, annually till 1910. Arranged to return to Islington for 1911. See Riding, and Omnibus.

MILITARY KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR, see Poor Knights of Windsor.

MILITARY LANDS ACT, passed 27 June, 1892; amended, 1897. See Commons.

MILITARY or MARTIAL LAW is built on no settled principle, but is entirely arbitrary, and, in truth, no law; but sometimes indulged, rather than allowed, as law. Sir Matthew Hale. It has been several times proclaimed in ports of these kingdoms, and in 1718 was almost general in Ireland, where it was also proclaimed in 1803. Military manoeuvres act passed, 1897. Military works act passed, 1897; another, 1898. The king's regulations and orders promulgated, 1901.

MILITIA, the standing national force of these realms, is traced to king Alfred, who made all his subjects soldiers, 872-901. See Army Defence.

Commission of array to raise a militia — 1122.

Revised by Henry II. — 1157.

Again revised — 1557.

Said to amount to 165,000 men — 1763.

Militia reserve act passed — 1852.

Militia volunteers' Enlistment Act, consolidating and amending the laws passed — 11 Aug.

A committee on the state of the militia reported, Feb. 1895, greatly increased efficiency since 1890. Militia employed on account of the S. African war, May, 1899: 60,000 were under arms 29,000 were sent abroad; Militia and Yeomanry bill passed, 16 Dec. 1892.

Total strength 96,676; reported, April, 1896.

Territorial and Reserve Force Act reorganizes militia, the old title being abolished.

Special reserves (enrolled strength of effectives) — 67,792. 1 Jan. 1899.

MILITIA OF JESUS, a society of Roman Catholic youth of France and Italy, formed to support the papal cause by moral agencies, became known in 1877.

MILK. The type of food as containing all things needful for the development of the animal body. A process for its condensation was invented by Mr. Gail Borden, near New York, in 1849, for which he was awarded a medal at the Great Exhibition in 1851, when he erected factories. He invented ice cream, 1859. The Anglo-Swiss condensed milk company was established in 1866; and since then many other companies.

MILKY WAY (Galaxy) in the heavens. June is said by the Greek poets to have split the milk in the heavens after suckling Mercury or Hermes. In a horoscope (142) taught that the rue beton consisted of stars, which Galileo (1610-42) proved by the telescope. See Stars, 1892.

MILBANK PENITENTIARY, Westminster. The very unhealthy site was purchased of the Grosvenor family. The building, a modification of Jeremy Bentham's Panopticon (which see), first received convicts 27 June, 1816.

In consequence of many deaths during a great epidemic the convicts were placed in Woolwich hulks, 1822-3. On 16 June, 1841, a committee reported the penitentiary and medical system were abolished in parliament, and the building styled Millbank prison: made a military prison, 1878.

The buildings ordered to be pulled down and site sold, 1888.

1888, it was finally closed 6 Nov. 1889.

Management of the site transferred to metropolitan board of works, by act passed in 1878.

1890, building taken up and blocks of artisans' dwellings erected by the London County Council, 1878.

* This militia act was consequent upon the then prevailing opinion of the necessity of strengthening our national defences against the possibility of French invasion. The act gave powers to raise a force not exceeding 30,000 men, of which number 10,000 were to be raised in 1852, and 20,000 in 1853; the quotas for each county or riding to be fixed by an order in council.
MILLENIARIES. 908

MINES.

The National Gallery of British Art, the Tate Gallery, built and presented to the nation by Sir Henry Tate (died 1858), enlarged 1899.

MILLERANES (or Chilists) suppose that the world will end at the expiration of the seven thousandth year from the creation; and that during a thousand years (millennium) Christ and the saints will reign upon the earth; see Rev. xx. The doctrine was very generally inculcated in the 2nd and 3rd centuries, by Papias, Justin Martyr and others.

MILLENARY PETITION, presented to King James on his accession, 1603, on behalf of nearly a thousand Puritan ministers against the "human rites and ceremonies" of the church of England.

MILLS. Moses forbade mill-stones to be taken in pawn, because it would disable a man's life to pledge. *Dev. xxiv. 6. The hand-mill was in use among the Britons previously to the conquest by the Romans. The Romans introduced the water-mill. Cotton mills moved by water were erected by Sir Richard Arkwright, at Cromford, Derbyshire. He died in 1792. See Mechanics.

MILWAUKEE. A town in Wisconsin, North America, founded 1835. The New Hall hotel was burnt 4 A.M. 10 Jan. 1883, when about 100 persons perished. Great fire at the Union oil works; 46 buildings destroyed; estimated loss about $529,000,000, 28 Oct. 1892. Population, 1900, 317,693.

MINCO, a river of Lombardy. Here the Austrians were repulsed by the French under Bruni, 27 Apr. 1800; by Eugene Beauharnais, 8 Feb. 1814, near Valeggio.

MIND-CURE. A sect termed Christian Scientists in Boston, U.S., led by Mrs. M. B. G. Eddy, professes to cure bodily diseases by getting the mind into the body, Xxx. 1840, &c. See Trials, Dec. 1868. The sect is increasing in Germany; 1,000,000 cases said to be cured in the United States within 25 years, reported, 6 May, 1902.

MINDEN (Prussia). BATTLE OF, 1 Aug. 1759, between the English, Hessians, and Hanoverians (under Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick), and the French (under Marshal De Contades), who were beaten and driven to the ramparts of Minden. Lord George Sackville (afterwards Lord George Germain), who commanded the British and Hanoverian force, for some disobedience of orders was tried by a court-martial on his return to England, found guilty, and dismissed, 22 April, 1768. He was afterwards restored to favour, and became secretary of state, 1776.

MINERALOGY. The science of minerals, is a branch of geology; see *Geology, Mines, and Crystallography. It was not much studied by the ancients. George Agassiz in the 16th century made the first attempt to treat it scientifically. The study of mineralogy was advanced by Becker, Kircher, and Woodward in the 17th century.

A British Mineralogical Society established in 1800. Hauss's "Traite de Mineralogie" appeared in 1804. The Mineralogical Society held its first meeting in London, 7 Feb. 1807, and others since. Another society termed *J. B. G. Miller's symbol for the face of a crystal... 1826.

MINERVA, see Parthenon and Athens.

MINES. Strabo and Tacitus enumerate great and small silver as among the products of Britain. The earliest instance of a claim to a mine royal being enforced occurs in 1718. It related to mines containing gold, together with copper, in Devonshire. In Edward I's reign, according to Mr. Rivington, the mines in Ireland, which produced silver, were supposed to be so rich that the king directed a writ for working them to Robert de Ufford, lord justice, 1276. The lead mines of Cardiganshire, from which silver had been extracted, were discovered by Sir Hugh Middleton in the reign of James I.; see Coal, and the various metals. Average depth of mines (1891) 400 yards. Deep mines: Ashton Moss colliery, near Manchester, 2,850 ft.; part 3,000 ft.; copper mine, Calnmet, near lake Superior, U.S., 3,900 ft. (1890); silver-lead mine, Pribram in Bohemia, 3,412 ft. (1890).

Mineralogists and Mineralogical Society. 1855.

A Miners' Protection Association was proposed by Mr. William Gurney and others in March, 1862.

Value of the total mineral produce of the United Kingdom estimated at 29,153,705L in 1824; 31,805,588L, 1825; 41,527,051L, 1826; 64,094,660L, 1829; 60,000,000L, 1830; 88,049,457L, 1831; 53,653,569L, 1832; 100,552,657L, 1838; 80,000,000L, 1841; 78,716,947L, 1845; 97,716,947L, 1848; 117,309,936L, 1852; 166,004,800L, 1855; 128,159,665L, 1860; 122,555,312L, 1862; 117,435,357L, 1866; 115,513,436L, 1867. 125,980,000L, 1870; 185,542,515L, 1897.

Miners' conference, for amelioration of their condition, held at Merthyr Tydfil... Oct. 1871.

Royal commission on mines (see under Coal) appointed, Feb. 1879. Report issued Nov. 1881.

Miners' national conference on wages, &c., opened at Birmingham, 20 April, 1881; at Manchester, 29 Aug., and frequently at other places.

Miners' association of Northumberland voted against continuance of payments to their M.P.'s, Messrs. Hart and Penfold, 19 Sept.; vote rescinded, Nov. 1881; further agitation on the subject again rescinded March, 1883.

MINSTRELS.

MINES and MINSTER.

The annual report on the mineral industry of the United Kingdom for 1894 by Dr. C. Le Nove was published, Jan. 1895; second part, Aug. 1895. Miners' conciliation board, 1st meeting, London, advance of 5 per cent. on the standard of 1893, concluded, Jan. 22, 1893. The mines (prohibition of child labour under ground) act passed, July 29, 1902. Royal commission on coal supplies concludes its revision of their final report, July 7, 1925. Serious accident at the Victoria pit, Blackwater, caused through the sudden inrush of water from a disused quarry; 4 men out of 7 working in the mine were unable to escape, but were rescued the following day, Feb. 5, 1925. Heavy rains flood the Rutland shaft at South Rode. Deep on the Ruld, 55 natives drowned, Feb. 4. Explosion in the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co.'s mine; 22 persons killed, mostly Indians and Japanese, April 23. Royal commission, lord Monkswell, chairman, to inquire into and report on questions relating to the health and safety of miners. Act of administration of the Mines Act, appointed, May 29. An advance of 5 per cent. in wages to miners caused by the coal making-up after. 13 Sept. 1897. "Edward viii" for bravery in mines, instituted Oct. 13. China clay adapted to be a mineral in a case brought before the Czar, against the Czar, United China Clay Co. July 24, 1925. Accidents in mines, see under Coal.

MINERGIA. The ancient Celts, mentioned in the legend of "Jason, the Argonauts, and the Golden Fleece." A province of Asiatic Russia, prince Nicholas having ceded his rights to the Czar in 1867. In 1887 the prince was spoken of as a candidate for the Bulgarian throne.

MINIATURE PAINTING was practised in England by Holbein, Isaac, and Peter Oliver, and others in the 16th century; by other eminent artists since. The new Society of Miniature Painters, president, Mr. Alyn-Williams, opened its first exhibition at 175, New Bond-street, London, 23 Sept. 1878. "The Society of Miniaturists," president, lord Ronald Gower, 1st exhibition, at the Graton Galleries, London, 14 Nov. 1878. Sir Win. Ross, 1791-1890, may be said to be the last miniaturist.

MINIE RIFLE, invented at Vincennes, about 1835, by M. Minie (born 1810). From a common soldier he raised himself to the rank of chief of ordnance. His rifle, considered to surpass all made previous to it, was adopted by the French, and, with modifications, by the British, 1852.

MINIMIZERS. A name given to certain writers who advocate the limitation of the sovereign power of the state as much as possible to the protection of life and property, which is styled by professor Huxley "administrative nihilism." They included W. von Humboldt, J. S. Mill (died 1873) (in his "Essay on Liberty"), and Mr. Herbert Spencer (died 1903) (in his "Political Institutions"), 1882.

MINIMS (from minimi, the least), an order of monks, founded by S. Francesco di Paolo (1410-1505), in Calabria, received their name, as professed admirers to the Minorites (from minor, less); see Francisca. St. Francis died in France in 1507, where he had established houses of his order.

MINISTERS, see Administrations.

MINISTERS in Scotland; church patronage was abolished in 1854.

MINNESINGERS, lyric German poets, of the 12th and 13th centuries, who sang of love and war to entertain knights and barons of the time. The Meistersingers, their successors, an incorporated fraternity in the 14th century, composed satirical ballads for the amusement of the citizens and lower classes. Hans Sachs, a shoemaker (1494-1576), a poet of the reformation, was for a time their dean. His works were published at Nuremberg, 1590. "Owleglass's and Reynard the Fox," are attributed to the Meistersingers.

MINNESOTA, a western state of N. America, was organised as a territory, 3 March, 1849, and admitted into the union in 1858. On 17 Aug., 1862, the Sioux Indian tribe commenced a massacre at Acton in Mecessier county, desecrating the country and massacring about 500 persons, of both sexes, and of all ages. General Sibley beat the Indians in two battles and rescued many captives. Thirty-eight Indians were executed as assassins. Capital, St. Paul. Area, 83,753 square miles; population, 1880, 785,757; 1890, 1,175,833; 1900, 1,903,000. The great Tribune buildings at Minneapolis were burned, about 20 persons perished, 9 Nov. 1894; another fire, 3 deaths, estimated loss, 2,000,000 dollars, 23 Aug. 1893. Tornado, much destruction and loss of life in N. Paul and the neighborhood; the Steamer, on Lake Pepin upset, about 200 persons drowned, and many others in small boats; total loss about 500, 13 July 1893. Destructive tornado with loss of life, 15, 16 Jan. 1892. Destructive forest fires. us. Stats., Aug. 1891.

BILL passed forbidding the marriage of insane, epileptic and idiotic persons, and requiring a medical certificate of applicants for marriage licenses. April 1892. Dr. Whipple, bp. of Minneap., Friend and champion to the Indians, died, aged 79, about 9 Oct.

Great fire at Minneapolis, estimated damage, 2,984,900 dollars. (Minneapolis Tribune.) 14 Dec. 1894. Fire at the West End Hotel, Minneapolis; 9 lives lost.

MINORCA AND MAJORCA, the Balearic Islands (which see). Port Mahon in Minorca was captured by lieutenant-general Stanhope and sir John Leake in 1708, and was ceded to the British by the treaty of Utrecht in 1713. It was retaken by the Spanish and French in July, 1756, and admiral Byng fell a victim to public indignation for not relieving it; see Bany. It was restored to the British in the peace of 1763; taken again, Feb. 1782; again captured by the British under general Stuart, without the loss of a man, 15 Nov. 1798 given up at the peace of Amiens, 25 March, 1802.

MINORITIES. In the new reform bill, passed 15 Aug. 1867, provision was made for the representation of minorities in constituencies with three members by limiting each elector to two votes. It was introduced as an amendment by lord Cairns in the lords, 30 July, and accepted by the commons, Aug. 1867. The principle was adopted in a new constitution by the state of Illinois, U.S., July, 1870. See Proportional Representation.

MINSTER, or MONASTERIUM, a place occupied by monks; see Westminster and York.

MINSTRELS, originally pipers appointed by lords of manors to divert their copyholders while at work, owed their origin to the glee men or harpers of the Saxons, and continued till about 1500. John of Gaunt erected a court of minstrels at Tuthbury in 1393. So late as the reign of Henry VIII. they intruded without ceremony into all companies, even MISSISSIPPI.

MISSISSIPPI, a great river, N. America, explored by De Soto about 1541. Captain Glazier discovered its source, 1884. Its length 2,910 miles. The Mississippi trade was begun in England, in Nov. 1716. Law's Mississippi scheme in France, commenced about the same period, exploded in 1720; at which time the nominal capital is said to have amounted to 100,000,000. The ruin of thousands followed. Population, 1910 (est.), 1,800,000. See Law's Bubble.

Population, 1880, 1,131,597; 1890, 1,289,660; 1900, 1,581,729; 1910, est. 1,884,000

The great Falls bridge at St. Louis opened, 4 July, 1874 About 35,000 persons made homeless. floods in the lower Mississippi valley, early in March, 1882. By the explosion of the boilers of the Cairo at Fort Hudson on the Mississippi, 43 persons perished.

The North American state, Mississippi, is settled in 1820; admitted as a state of the union, 1817; seated from it by ordinance, 3 Jan. 1824; submitted, 1856. Capital, Jackson.

• Missions, "a series of sermons, generally by a 'missioner,' or special preacher, often followed by confessions and communions" (a species of revivalism). were authorised in the metropolis by the bishops of London, Winchester, and Rochester, held 1869 and since.

MISSAL, or MASS BOOK, is the Romanist ritual compiled by Pope Gelasius I. 492-6. revised by Gregory I. 590-604. Various missals were in use till the Roman missal was adopted by the council of Trent, 1545-63. The missal was superseded in England by the book of common prayer, 1549.

MISSING WORD COMPETITION. See Lotteries, 1815, and Trials, 1849.

MISSIONARY BISHOPS, see under Bishops.

MISSIONS, see Mark xvi. 15. Among the Romanists, the religious orders of St. Dominic, St. Francis, St. Augustin, &c., have missions to the Levant and to America. Marco Polo is said to have introduced missionaries into China, 1273. The Jesuits have missions in China (which see) and to most other parts of the world. Among the Protestants, an early undertaking of this kind was a Danish mission, planned by Frederick IV. in 1706. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts was established 1701, and the Moravian Brethren encouraged missions about 1732. The London Missionary Society held their first meeting, 4 Nov. 1794 (1st meeting not to the South Sea Islands in the Bayf, 1796); centenary celebrated, 15 Jan. 1835. Most Christian sects now support missions, British Contributions to Foreign Missions: 1871, 855,742; 1900, 2,096,754. Over 3,000,000 spent in the world on missions in 1905; 5,071,254. in 1909.

Commander Allan Gardner, R.N., who left England in the corvon Goa in Sept. 1898, on the Patagonia mission, with Mr. Williams, surgeon, Mr. Mabhum, catechist, and four others, died on Piton Island, at the mouth of the Beagle Channel, to the south of Tierra del Fuego, having been starved to death; all his companions previously perished, 6 Sept. 1897.

M. Schöller, a missionary to Cochín-China, was publicly executed at Macao, by order of the grand mandar, for preaching Christianity, such preaching being prohibited by the law of that country, 4 May, 1851. Great congress of protestant missions in London; a large number of new bodies represented; the eal of Aberdeen president, 8-19 May, 1885.

MINT. At the house of the nobility; but in Elizabeth's reign they were adjudged rogues and vagabonds (1597).

MINT. Athelstan enacted regulations for the government of the mint about 927. There were several provincial mints under the control of that of London. Henry I. is said to have instituted a mint at Winchester, 1125. Stew says the mint was kept by Italians, the English being ignorant of the art of coined, 7 Edw. I. 1278. The operators were formed into a corporation by the charter of King Edward III., in which condition it consisted of the warden, master, comptroller, assayer, workers, coiners, and subordinates. The first entry of gold brought to the mint for coinage occurs in 18 Edw. I. 1311. Tin was coined by Charles II. 1684; and gun-metal and pewter by his successor James after his abdication. Sir Isaac Newton was warden, 1699-1727, during which time the debased coin was called in, and new issued at the loss of the government. Between 1806 and 1810, grants amounting to 200,000l. were made by parliament for the erection of the present mint, which was completed in 1810; it was injured by fire, 31 Oct. 1815. The new constitution of the mint, founded on the report of the hon. Wellesley Pole, took effect under Professor Thomas Graham, the warden; Sir John Herschell, master of the mint, died 9 Sept. 1809. By the Coinage Act, passed 4 April, 1870, the office was combined with that of the chancellor of the exchequer, the duties being transferred to the deputy-master (Sir C. W. Fremantle). K.C.B., 1 Jan. 1806; resigned, Sept. 1807; succeeded by Mr. Horace Seymour, made K.C.B. Jan. 1808, and died 25 Jan. 1810; succeeded by Mr. Macarthy appointed Jan. 1812. (Sir Wm. Robertson-Austen, chemist and assayer since 1870, died 22 Nov. 1892.) See Coin.

MASTERS OF THE MINT.

MINUS, see Plus.

MIRACLE PLAYS, see under Drama.

MIRIDITES, or MIRIDITES, see Turkey, 1877.

MIRRORS. In ancient times mirrors were made of metal; those of the Jewish women of brass. Mirrors of silver were introduced by Praxiteles 4th century B.C. Mirrors or looking-glasses were made at Venice, A.D. 1391; and in England, at Lambeth, near London, in 1677. The improvements in manufacturing plate-glass, and that of very large size, have cheapened looking-glasses very much. Various methods of coating glass by a solution of silver, thus avoiding the use of mercury, so injurious to the health of the workmen, have been made known; by M. Petitjean in 1854; by M. Cioue in 1891, by Liebig and others.

Missolonghi, a town in Greece, taken from the Turks, 1 Nov., 1821, and heroically and successfully defended against the Turks by M. Botzaris, Oct. 1824. It was taken 22 April, 1826, after a long siege. Here Lord Byron died, 9 April, 1824. A statue of Byron was unveiled here, 6 Nov. 1851. It was surrendered to the Greeks in 1829.

Missouri, a south-western state in N. America, was settled in 1763, and admitted into the Union, 10 Aug., 1821. It decided on neutrality in the conflict of 1861, but was invaded by both the confederate and federal forces in June of that year, and became one of the seats of war. Capital, Jefferson City, pop. 1880, 2,108,850; 1890, 2,670,184; 1900, 3,109,665; 1910 (est.), 3,524,450; see United States, 1861 et seq.—Great railway strike March, 1886. The University Library, Columbia, burnt, 9 Jan., 1862. Railway collision, 33 killed, 30 injured, 10 Oct., 1904.—For the Missouri Compromise, see Slavery in America. The Missouri river is 3,047 long. Mitridate, a medical preparation in the form of an electuary, supposed to be an antidote to poison and the oldest compound known, is said to have been invented by Mitridates, king of Pontus, about 70 B.C.

Mitridatic War, caused by the massacre of 80,000 Romans, by Mitridates VI., king of Pontus, 88 B.C., and remarkable for its duration, its many sanguinary battles, and the cruelties of its commanders. Mitridates having taken the conical Aequus, made battle on an eminence, though a great part of Asia, crying out as he rode, "I am the Aequus, consul of the Romans." He is said to have killed him by causing melted gold to be poured down his throat, in derision of his avarice, 88 B.C. Mitridates was defeated by Pompey, 66 B.C.; and committed suicide, 63 B.C.

Mitraeule, or mitrailleur, a machine-gun in which 37 or more large-bored rifles are combined with breech-action, by means of which a shower of bullets may be rapidly discharged by one man. It was invented in Belgium, and adopted by the French emperor soon after the Prusso-Austrian war in 1866, and was much used in the Franco-Prussian war in 1870. Its peculiar "dry, shrieking, terrible sound" was described in the bombardment of Saarbrück, 2 Aug., 1870. Modifications of the machine-gun have been made by Montigny and others. The Fosbery mitrailleuse was tried and approved at Woodstock, 11 Aug., 1870. It is mentioned in Grose's Military Antiquities that in England, in 1625, a patent was granted to William Drummond for a machine composed of a number of muskets joined together, by the help of which two soldiers can oppose a hundred, and named, on account of its effect, "thunder carriage," or more usually "fire carriage." An English mitrailleuse, a modification of the American gunning, containing 50 cartridges, was tried at Woolwich, 18 Jan. 1872; fifty of them were ordered to be made by Armstrong.

Mitre. The chief cap or mitre was worn by the Jewish high-priest, 1301 B.C. It had on it a golden plate inscribed "HOLINESS TO THE LORD." Exodus xxxix. 28. The most ancient mitre that has the nearest resemblance to the present one is that upon the seal of the bishop of Laon, in the 10th century, Fosbroke. Anciently the Cardinals wore mitres, but at the council of Lyons, in 1245, they were directed to wear hats.

Mitleyene, or Lesbos, Egean Sea. Near here the Greeks defeated and Nearly destroyed the Turkish fleet, 7 Oct., 1824.

Mnemomics, artificial memory, was introduced by Simonides the younger, 377 B.C. He called his system "Mnemonics." "Mnemonics," was published by John Williams in 1618, and the "Memoria Technica" of Dr. Grey first appeared in 1730. A system of mnemomics was announced in Germany in 1866-7.

Moabites, descendants of Lot, a people living to the south-east of Judah. They were frequently at war with the Israelites, and were subdued with divine help by Ehud about 1336, by David about 1040, and by Jehoshaphat, 875 B.C., but often harassed the Jews in the decay of their monarchy. The discovery of a stone with inscription in Phoenician characters, relating to Mesha, king of Moab, referred to in 2 Kings, III., was announced in Jan., 1870, and impressions were exhibited soon after.

Mockern (Prussia). Here the French army under Eugène Beauharnais were defeated by the Prussians under Yorck, 3 April, 1813; and here Blücher defeated the French, 16 Oct., 1813.

Models. The first are figures of living persons, and Brütades, the Corinthians, is the reputed inventor of those in clay. His daughter, being about to be separated from her lover, traced his profile by his shadow on the wall; her father filled up the outline with clay, which he afterwards baked, and thus produced a figure of the object of her affection, giving rise to an art till then unknown, about 855 B.C.

A beautiful model of the new town of Edinburgh, before the building began, was formed in wood. A model was made of a bridge over the Nen, of uncommon strength as well as elegance; and of the mountains of Switzerland, by general Pitreigny, 1810. M. Chodin's model of Paris also was remarkable for its precision. Fine models of Gibraltar, Quebec, and other fortified places, are displayed in the Rotunda at Woolwich. See Warwork and Lodging-houses.

Modena (formerly Mutina), capital of the late duchy in Central Italy; was governed by the house of Este, from 1288 till 1796, when the last male of that house, the reigning duke Hercules III., was expelled by the French. By the treaty of Campo Formio, the Modenese possessions were incorporated with the Cisalpine republic, 1797, and with the kingdom of Italy, 1802. The archduke Francis of Erze, son of the archduke Ferdinand of Austria, and of Mary, the heiress of the last duke, was restored in 1814. Moderna, in accordance with the voting by universal suffrage, was annexed to Sardinia on 18 March, 1860. Population of the city, 1871, 14,012; 1870 (est.), 15,715. Of the province, 1865, 322,017, 1910 (est.), 375,290.

MONDEROS. A political party in Spain, long headed by Ramón María Narváez, duke of Valencia (who died 23 April, 1868), who opposed the Progressists headed by Espartero and Prim. The party was reinforced by the favourers of Don Carlos, after his total defeat in 1870.

MODERATES, opponents of the Progressives (which see).

MODOC INDIANS (a few hundreds), dwelling in lands south of Oregon, were removed to other lands by the United States government. Not obtaining subsistence, they returned to their old possessions, and their able leader captain Jack defeated the troops sent to expel them, 17 Jan., 1873. During negotiations for a peaceful settlement, they decloved the United States commissioners into an ambush (11 April), and massacred general Canby and about 40 others. Fighting took place, 15-19 April, and the Indians retreated to almost imprisable positions. The troops were fired on, and suffered much loss, 27 April. The Indians were gradually surrendered. Jack and about twenty warriors held out desparately. Some surrendered, and he himself was captured, 1 June; tried, July, and executed 3 Oct. 1873.

MOESIA (now Bosnia, Servia, and Bulgaria), was finally subdued by Augustus, 29 B.C. It was successfully invaded by the Goths, A.D. 250, who eventually settled here; see Goths.

MOGULS, see Tartary.

MOHACZ (Lower Hungary). Here Louisking of Hungary, defeated by the Turks under Solymans II. with the loss of 22,000 men, was suofected by the fall of his horse in a muddy brook, 29 Aug. 1526. Here also prince Charles of Lorraine defeated the Turks, 12 Aug. 1687.

MOHAMMEDAN, see Mahometanism.

MOHAMMERAH, a Persian town near the Euphrates, captured, after two hours' cannonading, by sir James Outram, during the Persian war, 26 March, 1857. News of the peace arrived 4 April.

MOHILEV, or MOHILE, (Russia). Here the Russian army, under prince Bagration, was signally defeated by the French under Marshal Davout, prince of Eckmühl, 23 July, 1812.

MOHOCKS, ruffians, who went about London at night, wounding and disfiguring the men, and indecently exposing the women. One hundred pounds were offered by royal proclamation in 1712, for apprehending any one of them. Northwuck.

The "scourers" of the seventeenth century resemble the Mohocks.

MOHURRUM, a Mahometan festival in honour of the prophet's nephews: at its celebration in Bombay, Feb. 1873, the Mahometans fiercely attacked the Parsees, and were quelled by the military.

MOKANNA (Hakim ben Allih), "The Veiled," prophet, founder of a sect in Khorassan in the eighth century. He pretended to be an incarnation of God, and therefore veiled his face, but really to conceal the loss of an eye. He rebelled against the caliph Almasdi, was for a time successful, but was subdued in 780, when he and the remains of his followers took poison. He is the subject of a poem by Thos. Moore, in "Lalla Rookh," 1817.

MOLDAVIA, see Danubian Principalities.

MOLINISTS, a Roman Catholic sect, followers of Louis Molina, a Jesuit, born 1535. He maintained the reconcileability of the doctrines of predestination and free will, 1588.

MOLLY MAGUIRE, the name of a secret society in Ireland in 1834, and of another society (originally Buckshot, about 1833) in mining districts, United States (which see), 1877. It ceased about March, 1879.

MOLOKANI, a sect in West Russia, said to date from the 16th century, who maintain primitive Christian doctrines and practices; well described by Mr. D. Mackenzie Wallace in his "Russia," published 1877. Dassajeff, a peasant woman, one of the sect, received by the empress dowager for her kind assistance rendered to her son, the Cesarевич, at his death at Abbas Tuman, 10 July, reported, 31 July, 1849. General exodus of the Molokani reported to be taking place in the Caucasus, due to the petty vexations inflicted on them by the local authorities, July, 1905.

MOIJUCCAS, an archipelago in the Indian Ocean (the chief island, Amboyna), discovered by the Portuguese, about 1511, and held by them secretly until the arrival of the Spaniards, who claimed them, till 1529, when Charles V. yielded them to John III. for a large sum of money. The Dutch conquered them in 1627, and have held them ever since,—except from 1790-1802 and 1816-1814, when they were subject to the English. Earthquake at Amboyna, the capital almost destroyed and 50 persons killed, 5 Jan. 1898.

MOMBASA, chief town of the British East Africa territories. Possesses the finest harbour on the coast. Territorial Magazine (1916) 35,000. Kisawir, or Frere Town, is a thriving station of the Church Missionary society. See Africa (British East).*
MONACHISM. 913  MONMOUTH'S REBELLION.

MONACHISM (from the Greek monos, alone). Catholic writers refer to the prophet Eljah, whose name means Divine Solitary, and his successors, the Essenes, as early examples. The first Christian ascetics appear to be derived from the Jewish sect of the Essenes, whose life was very austere, practising celibacy, &c. About the time of Constantine (306-22) numbers of these ascetics withdrew into the deserts, and were called eremits, monks, and anchorites;* of whom Paul, Anthony, and Pachomius were most celebrated. Simeon, the founder of the Stylite (or pillar saints), died 451. He is said to have lived on a pillar thirty years. St. Benedict, the great reformer of western monachism, published his rules and established his monastery at Monte Casino, about 529. The Carthusians, Cistercians, &c., are varieties of Benedictines. In 594, by decree of king Edgar, all married priests were ineffectually ordered to be replaced by monks. Religious orders expelled from France, by decree, 20 March, 1880. Relieved of their vows by the Pope, 1881. See Abbeyes, and Benedictines.

MONACO, a principality, N. Italy, held by the Genoese family Grimabdi since 698. By treaty on 2 Feb. 1861, the prince ceded the communes of Roquebrune and Mentone, the chief part of his dominions, to France, for 4,000,000 francs. The prince, Charles III., born 8 Dec. 1818, succeeded his father Florestan, 20 June 1856; died 10 Sept. 1889; was succeeded by Albert, born 13 Nov. 1848. He married, 1st, Miss Adelheid, daughter of 11th duke of Hamilton; and 2nd, Oct. 1888, the duchesse de Richelieu. Here, Prince Louis, born 12 July, 1870. A commercial convention between the prince and France, signed 9 Nov. 1895, was much discussed as tending towards the abolition of the French navigation laws. Petitions against Monte Carlo, the great gaming establishment, 1880-4; a 50 years' concession granted, reported, March, 1896. International sporting club opened, autumn 1903. Population, 1901, 15,180; 1910 (est.), 18,750.

MOND BEQUESTS. Dr. Ludwig Mond bequeathed, subject to the life interest of his wife, the sum of 50,000l. to the Royal Society of London, to be employed in the encouragement of research in natural science, and 50,000l. to the university of Heidelberg to be employed for similar objects. To the National Gallery, London, Dr. Mond left, on certain conditions as to housing and exhibition, 50 pictures of Italian works of art. Reported 3 Jan., 1910.

MONDOVI (Piedmont). Here the Sardinian army, commanded by Colli, was defeated by Napoleon Bonaparte, 22 April, 1799.

* The anchorites of the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries must not be confounded with the anchorettes and anchorets, or eremites. The former were confined to solitary cells; the latter permitted to go where they pleased.

MONEY is mentioned as a medium of commerce in Genesis xxiii., 1860 n.c., when Abraham purchased a field as a sepulchre for Sarah. The coinage of money is ascribed to the Lydians. Moneta was the name given to their silver by the Romans, it having been coined in the temple of Juno-Moneta, 269 B.C. Money was made of different metals, and even of leather and other articles, both in ancient and modern times. It was made of pasteboard by the Hollanders so late as 1574. The czar Nicholaus I. struck coppers under parliamentary committee on money-lending, meetings, T. W. Russell, chairman, July, 1877. Mr. John Kirkwood refused to answer certain questions, admonished at the bar of the commons, 16 July. Money-lending act (regulating the business of money-lenders) passed 8 Aug., 1890. See Coin; Gold; Copper; Mint; Bank; Latin Union, &c. For Money Orders, see Post Office.

MONEYERS travelled with our early kings, and coined money as required; see Mint.

MONOPHYSITES. see Eutychians.

MONOPOLIES were formerly so numerous in England that Parliament petitioned against them, and many were abolished about 1601-2. They were further suppressed by 21 Jan., 1624. Sir Giles Mompesson and Sir Francis Mitchell were punished for their abuse of monopolies, 1621. In 1690, Charles I established monopolies of soap, salt, leather, and other common things, to supply a revenue without the help of parliament. It was declared that no new trade should be in future created by royal patent, 16 Chas. I., 1690.

MONO-RAIL SYSTEM. see under Railways.

MONOTHELITES, heretics who affirmed that Jesus Christ had but one will, were favoured by the emperor Heræhus, 630; they merged into the Eutychians (see above).

MONROE DOCTRINE, a term applied to the determination expressed by James Monroe, president of the United States, in his message to the congress, 2 Dec., 1823, not to permit any European power to interfere with the concerns of any independent state of North or South America. This doctrine was referred to in 1859, 1865, 1876-9. A resolution strongly affirming the doctrine proposed by senator Davis to the senate, 20 Jan., 1866. The action of Great Britain and Germany in their dispute with Venezuela, 1862-3 (see Venezuela) aroused considerable excitement in the United States as being contrary to the Monroe doctrine. See Capt. Mahan's article on the Monroe doctrine, National Review, Feb., 1893, and Times, 30 Jan., 1893.

President Roosevelt, speaking on the Monroe doctrine, at Wellington (N.Y.), says: "The Monroe doctrine was meeting with an increasing recognition abroad because it had not been allowed to become fossilised, but had been adapted to meet the growing and changed needs of America, which had shown that it was not less ready to recognise the obligations to foreign peoples than to meet upon its own rights."

MONTANA, a territory of the United States, north America, formed out of the western territories in 1864, and a state in 1889. Capital, Helena. Population 1900, 243,329; 1910 (est.), 315,000. Explosions of dynamite, &c., through a fire at Butte, 74 or 142 deaths; estimated loss, 1,000,000 dollars.

MONUMENT OF LONDON, built by sir Christopher Wren, 1677. The pedestal is forty feet high, and the edifice altogether 202 feet, that being the distance of its base from the spot where the fire which it commemorates commenced. It is the loftiest isolated column in the world. Its erection cost the corporation.

The statue is of black marble, consisting of 343 steps. Full of part of the stone coping, no one injured, 25 Sept. 1888; examined and repaired; re-opened 14 Jan. 1889.

Of the four original inscriptions, three were Latin, and the following in English,—cut n 1881, obliterated by James H.; re-cut in the reign of William III.; and finally erased by order of the common council, 26 Jan. 1831. They produced pope’s indignant lines:—

“Where London’s column, pointing at the skies, Like a tall bully, lifts the head, and lies.”

THIS PILLAR WAS SET UP IN PERPETUAL REMEMBRANCE OF THAT MOST DREADFUL BURNING OF THIS PROTESTANT CITY, WHICH WAS CARRIED ON BY V. BUCHAN AND MALICE OF V. MORGANATIC MARRIAGES, between a man of superior and a woman of inferior rank, in which it is stipulated that the latter and her children shall not enjoy the rank or inherit the possessions of the former. The children are legitimate. Such marriages are frequently contracted in Germany by royalty and the higher nobility. It has been asserted that at least 150 princesses married the Duke of Kendal; George IV., when prince of Wales, to Mrs. Fitzherbert, "the lass of Richmond-hill"; the Duke of Sussex to lady Cecilia Underwood; Frederic VI. of Denmark to the countess of Danner, 7 Aug. 1850; prince Alexander of Hesse to the countess Julie von Hanke, 1851, from which sprang the Rattenberg family, and several Austrian princes; more recently the grand duke Paul of Russia with Mme. Pistolkors, reported, 2 Dec. 1902. The Royal Marriage Act, 12 Geo. III., chap. ii., "relates to a position somewhat like that of morganatic unions every marriage in the royal family of Great Britain not previously approved by the sovereign under the great seal, and such the persons under 25 years of age, and every such marriage of a prince above 25 years of age which is disapproved by parliament." MORMONS (calling themselves the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints). This sect derives its origin from Joseph Smith, born at Sharon, Vermont, 23 Dec. 1805, called the Prophet, who composed 1827 and removed to the far west, that he had had a vision of the angel Moroni. In 1827 he announced that he had found the book of Mormon, written on gold plates in hieroglyphics. This book was said, by the opponents of the Mormons, to have been written, about 1812, by a clergyman named Solomon Spaulding, as a religious romance in imitation of the scripture style; this is denied by the Mormons, and the discovery of the MS. of that romance by president Fairchild, of Oberlin college, in 1884, supports the Mormons' contention. The distinguishing characteristics of the sect are its belief in a continuous divine revelation through the inspired medium of the prophet at the head of their church, and the complete hierarchical organization, which comprises two priesthoods, the "Melchizedek," or high priesthood, and the "Aaronic or Levitical," the lesser priesthood which ministers in temporal matters. Polygamy was formerly the chief feature of the sect, but since July, 1894, it has been forbidden. The "First Presidency," composed of the president of the whole church and two counsellors, is the supreme authority for all the payments of tithes, and encourage labour. Missionaries are propagating these doctrines in Europe, Australasia, Africa, China, Japan, South America, and other countries. The Mormons organize a church at Kirkland, Ohio, 1831; they found Zion, in Jackson county, Missouri, 1832; the cornerstone of the church was laid by Brigham Young, Feb. 12, 1838; and from 1835 to 1839 the sect endured much persecution, and, driven from place to place, was compelled to travel westward; till the city Nauvoo, on the Mississippi, was built out and a temple was built July 5, 1841; Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum, when in prison on a charge of treason, shot by an initiated mob, and Brigham Young, chosen president of the church, June 27, 1844. Much harassed by their neighbours; departure from Nauvoo determined on, April 6, 1846. The Great Salt Lake chosen "for an everlasting abode," and taken possession of, 24 July, 1847. The valley surveyed by order of the United States government; the provisional government abolished and the Utah territory recognized by the United States, Brigham Young appointed first governor, and the University of Deseret was founded, Jan. 1847. The population, 13,351, Jan. 1851. The enoque at the Utah settlement said to be destroyed by bound, April 25, 1853. Morphia, an alkaloid, discovered in opium by Sertumer in 1883. Importation into China, except for medicinal purposes, prohibited by law enforced, 1 Jan. 1909.

Morphology. (Greek, morphē, form), the science of form and structure, as distinguished from physiology, studied in the 19th century by Goethe, Gegenbaur, Haeckel, Huxley, and others.

Mortality Tables. have been frequently compiled. The first by Halley, actuary royal, 1694; the next by M. Cambon (1755-58), by Dr. Price the Carlisle tables (1780-87), by Dr. Halsam; the Equitable table by Davies, 1822; the Institute of Actuaries' table, 1869; Dr. Sprague's tables, 1852; by many advertising insurance companies since; see Insurance, Annuities, and Bills of Mortality.
MORTARS. A short gun with a large bore, and close chamber, for throwing bombs; said to have been used at Naples in 1435, and first made in England in 1543. The mortar left by Soult at Cadiz in Spain was fixed in St. James's-park in Aug. 1810. On 10 Oct. 1857, a colossal mortar, constructed by Mr. Robert Mallet, was tried at Woolwich; with a charge of 70 lb. it threw a shell weighing 2550 lbs. 1/2 mile horizontally, and about 2 mile in height.

MORTIMER'S CROSS (Herefordshire). The earl of Pembroke and the Lancastrians were here severely defeated by the young duke of York, afterwards Edward IV., 2 Feb. 1461. He assumed the throne as Edward IV. in March following.

MORTAIN ACTS (mort main, dead hand). When the survey of all the land in England was made by William I., 1085-6, the whole was found to amount to 02,215 knights' fees, of which the church then possessed 28,015, to which additions were afterwards made, till the 7th of Edward I., 1285. So extended was mortmain was passed, from a fear that the estates of the church might grow too bulky. By this act it was made unlawful to give any estates to the church without the king's leave; and this act, by a supplemental provision, was made to reach all lay-fraternities, or corporations, in the 15th of Richard II., 1391. Mortmain being such a state of possession as makes property inalienable, it is said to be in a dead hand. Several statutes have been passed on this subject; legacies by mortmain were especially restricted by the 8th Geo II., c. 36 (1736). Law consolidated and amended 1888, 1891, 1892.

MOSSAIC WORK (the Roman opus tessellatio), is of Asian origin, and is probably referred to in Esther, ch. i. 6, about 519 B.C. It had attained to great excellence in Greece, in the time of Alexander and his successors, when Soos of Pergamus, the most renowned Mosaic artist of antiquity, flourished. He acquired great fame by his accurate representation of an "unseen floor after a feast." The Romans also excelled in Mosaic work, as is shown by the innumerable specimens preserved. Byzantine Mosaics date from the 4th century after Christ. The art was revived in Italy by Tafi, Gaddi, Cimabue, and Giotto, who designed Mosaics, and introduced a higher style in the 13th century. In the 16th century Titian and Veronese also designed subjects for this art. The practice of copying paintings in Mosaics came into vogue in the 17th century; and there is now a workshop in the Vatican where chemical science is employed in the production of colours, and where 20,000 different tints are kept. In 1891, Dr. Salioti of Venice had established his manufacture of "Emanuel-mosaics," and in July, 1894, he fixed a large enamel Mosaic picture in one of the arched niches under the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, London. Mr. also executed commissions for Queen Victoria and other persons.

MOSANDRIUM. See Philippinum.

MOScow, the ancient capital of Russia, was founded, it is said, by Dolgorouki, about 1147. The occupation of the south of Russia by the Mongols, in 1235, led to Moscow becoming the capital, and beginning with Jaroslav II., 1238, its princes became the reigning dynasty. In 1325, the metropolis of Central Russia moved its seat to Moscow, which is regarded as a holy city by the Russians. The city continued to grow in area and political influence, and Ivan III. (1462-1505) assumed the title of Tsar of all Russia. Peter the Great, in 1703, founded St. Petersburg, which became the capital of the empire, but Moscow is still regarded by the peninsu as the real capital. The city has suffered greatly from fire, it having been burned nearly to the ground, 1547; it was taken and burned by the Khan of the Crimea, 1571; other disastrous fires, 1730, 1748, 1753, and 1812 (see Infra). Since the last date Moscow has been largely rebuilt. The centre of the city is the Kremlin or Kreml "citadel," which stands on a height, 100 ft. above the river Moskva, on which Moscow is situated, and is surrounded by a stone wall. Among the notable buildings within the Kremlin are the old palaces of the czars, the imperial palace, built 1839, the new palace, Orushemyja, containing the most valuable Russian antiquities; the cathedral of the Assumption, founded 1326, rebuilt 1475-79; the cathedral of St. Michael, built 1333, restored 1505, in which are interred the czars to the Ivan Alexievitch, brother of Peter the Great; the cathedral of the Annunciation, founded 1484, the principal church of the city, and containing the crypt of the czards; the cathedral of St. Basil, 1555; the imperial university, founded by the empress Catherine, 1755, with a library of some 200,000 volumes, and a museum; the public museum, 1861; the founding hospital, erected 1764; the Goltzynz museum, 1875; the observatory, and many monasteries, educational and scientific institutions for which Moscow is noted. The city ranks next to St. Peters burg as an industrial centre, and is the first commercial mart in Russia. Population, 1900, 1,023,817; 1910, about 1,200,000.

MÖSKIRCH (Baden). Here the Austrians were defeated by Morcan and the French, 3 May, 1800.

MOSELE. A Mahometan house of prayer. Fine examples exist in Spain, India, and other countries. The domed roofs are leading features. After the capture of Constantinople in 1353 by Mahomet II., the church of St. Sophia was transformed into a mosque, see Sophia. A mosque was erected in England in 1889; see under Mahometanism.

MOSQUITO COAST (Central America). Part included in republic of Nicaragua. The Indians inhabiting this coast were long under the protection of the British, who held Belize and a group of islands in the bay of Honduras. The jealousy of the United States long existed on this subject. In April, 1850, the two governments covenanted not "to occupy, or fortify, or colonise, or assume, or exercise any dominion over any part of Central America." In 1855 the United States charged the British government with an infraction of the treaty; on which the latter agreed to cede the disputed territory to the republic of Honduras with some reservation. The matter was finally settled in 1879.

MOSS-TROOPERS, desperate plunderers, and lawless soldiers, secreting themselves in the mosaics on the borders of Scotland. Many severe laws were enacted against them, but they were not extirpated till the 18th century.

MOTETTS, short pieces of church music, some of which are dated about the end of the 13th century. Good motets were written between 1430 and 1450; and very fine ones in the 16th and 17th centuries. The "Motet Society," for the publication of these works, was founded in 1847, by Wm. Dyce.

MOTION. On 13 Nov., 1873, Professor Sylvester described to the London Mathematical Society a machine for converting spherical into rectilinear, and other motions, and for producing perfectly parallel motion, the discovery of M. Peauceller, a French engineer officer, about 1857. See Kinematics.

*St. Juan del Norte (Greentown) was held by the British on behalf of the Mosquitoes till the American adventurers, under Col. Kinney, captured it on 9 Sept., 1854. He joined Walker; and on 10 Feb., 1856, their associate, Rivas, the president, claimed and annexed the Mosquito territory to Nicaragua.

MOTOR-BOATS. The construction of motor-boats, initiated by the builders of motor-cars, has recently been brought to a high stage of perfection. Specially constructed hulls are built and furnished with powerful engines. International races are now held annually.

Successful experiment carried out with the Pioneer, one of the largest of the Scotch type of fishing boats, 75 ft. long, 22 ft. beam, 50 tons displacement, equipped with a motor of the "David" type, burning ordinary paraffin, and developing 74 b.v.p. 3 July, 1904

The duke of Abenzoni, running from India, claims the record for height climbing his expedition reached 5,666 feet. (The Norwegians Munke and Robertson crossed Kabut at 1,390 metres).

MOURNING FOR THE DEAD. The Israelites neither washed nor anointed themselves during the time of mourning, for which a friend lasted seven days; upon extraordinary occasions a month or more. The Greeks and Romans fasted. White was used in mourning for the imperial family at S Constantinople, 573. The ordinary colour for mourning in Europe is black; in China, white; in Turkey, violet; in Ethiopia, brown; it was white in Spain until 1480. Anne of Brittany, the queen of two successive kings of France, mourned in black, instead of the then practice of wearing white, on the death of her first husband, Charles VIII. 7 April, 1489. Holmstedt.

MOUSQUETAIRES or MUSKETEERS, horse-soldiers under the old French regime, raised by Louis XIII., 1622. This corps was considered a military school for the French cavalry. It was abolished in 1640, but was restored in 1657. A second company was created in 1660, and formed a cardinal Mazarin's guard. Holmstedt. The Mousquetaires were abolished in 1775. Dumas, in his well-known "Three Musketeers," gives an interesting description of these corps.

MUMMIES. (from the Coptic mmim, bitumen, gum, resin); see Embalming. The mummies in the British Museum, with other Egyptian antiquities, were placed there about 1853 and since. Mr. Alex.
Gordon, in 1737, published an essay on three Egyptian mummies, one of which was brought to England in 1722 by capt. Wm. Lothiellier; two Majors came in 1734, one of which was retained by Dr. Neat, the other was given to the College of Physicians. In 1834, Mr. T. J. Pettigrew published a "History of Egyptian Mummies." The discovery of about 30 mummies of kings, priests, and other eminent persons in sarcophagi at Rezemh,

MURET.

The oldest mummified remains in the British Museum are those of a man who was buried with pots of food, flint knives, etc., in the latter part of the Neolithic period, sometime before 8,000 B.C.

MUNCHENGRATZ (Bohemia) was taken by the Prussians under prince Frederick Charles, after a severe action, 28 June, 1866. The Austrians lost about 300 killed and 1000 prisoners, and the prince gained about 12 miles of country.

MUNDA (now Munda, S. Spain). Here Cneius Scipio defeated the Carthaginians, B.C. 216; and here Julius Caesar defeated the sons of Pompey, 17 March, 45, after a severe conflict.

MUNDANE ERAS. That of Alexandria fixed the creation at 5502 B.C. This computation continued till A.D. 284, Alex. era, 5786; but in A.D. 285 ten years were subtracted, and 5787 became 5777. This coincided with the Mundane era of Antioch (which dated the creation 5502 B.C.)

Nicolas.

MUNCHENGRATZ, the capital of Bavaria, said to have been founded by duke Henry of Saxony, 962, on a site previously occupied by monks (Münchcn). It was taken by Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden in 1621; by the Austrians, in 1704, 1741, and 1743; and by the French under Moreau, 2 July, 1800. It abounds in schools, institutions, and manufactories. The university was founded by king Louis in 1820.

MÜNSTER (capital of Westphalia, Prussia). The bishopric, said to have been founded by Charlemagne, 780, was secularised in 1802; seized by the French, 1806; part of the duchy of Berg, 1809; annexed to France, 1810; ceded to Prussia, 1815. The Anabaptists, under John of Leyden, the king of Münster, held the city in 1534-5. Here were signed the preliminaries of Westphalia (which see), or Münster, Jan. 1648; definitely signed 4 Nov. 1648. The academy of Münster raised to the status of a university, July, 1902. Population, 1890, 40,343; 1905, 81,408. Münster, the southern province of Ireland, an ancient kingdom. See Ireland, 1014. In 1538 a commission was issued for its government by a president and council, and new colonies were founded in 1580.

MURCIA, a province, formerly a kingdom, N. E. Spain, was subdued by the Moors, 713, by Ferdinand of Castile, 1240; and divided between Castile and Aragon, 1305. Population, 1877, province, 491,346; city, 68,533; 1890, 577,092; city, 111,540; 1910 (est.), 674,500; city, 139,125. Murcia, the capital, was sacked by the French under Sebastián, 23 April, 1704. It was invaded by the Moors, after a severe storm, 12-17 Oct., 1729, when about 1000 persons perished.

MURDER, the highest offence against the law of God. (Genesis ix. 6, 2128 B.C.) A court of Ephetae was established by Demophoön of Athens for the trial of murder, 1179 B.C. The Persians did not punish the first offence. In England, during a period of the heptarchy, murder was punished by fines only. So late as Henry VIII.'s time the crime was compounded for in Wales. Murderers were allowed benefit of clergy in 1503. Aggravated murder, or petit treason (a distinction now abolished), happened in three ways: by a servant killing his master, a wife her husband, and an ecclesiastical person his superior, stat. 25 Edw. III. 1359. The enactments relating to this crime are very numerous, and its wilful commission has been rarely pardoned by our sovereigns. The act by which the murderer should be executed on the day next but one after his conviction, was repealed, 1836; see Assasinations, Executions, Trials; also various headings.

MUSEUM, originally a quarter of the palace of Alexandre, like the Prasamion of Athens, where eminent learned men were maintained by the public. The foundation is attributed to Pheidias and the building to Phidias, who also directed the library about 280 B.C. Besides the British Museum, Soane's Museum, and the Museum of Geology (which see), there are very many others in London. The opening of public museums and galleries on Sunday was long advocated in parliament (see Sunday; and agreed to by resolution for London 1785), to March, 1790. Urban authorities authorised to provide museums and galleries, by act passed 3 July, 1851.

Museum School. On Nov. 30, 1795, when the agency of the British Society (which see) sold the Mansion-house and various exhibitions and galleries in London were opened, a school was proposed to support the movement at several churches; supporting meeting at the Mansion house, 2 March, 1805, Museum School, 28 Nov. 1805, 2 Dec. 1811, annual.

Music. As associations formed in 1725 to promote the efficacy of museums, first London meeting, sir W. H. Flower, president, many country delegates present, 3 July, 1726.

MUSIC. The origin of music is lost in antiquity; among civilized peoples it is probably to be traced to the ancient Egyptian priests, who employed this art in their religious rites and ceremonies. From the Egyptians the Greeks and Romans derived their knowledge of music. The ancient Hebrews professed to bring into Palestine some of the songs they had learned in Egypt. The hymns used in the temple formed the basis of the melodies of the early Christian church, and from these hymns was formulated the first authoritative musical system, St. Ambrose, abp. of Milan, 374, and Gregory the Great (pope 590), may be regarded as the fathers of western church music. Isidore, bp. of Seville, 601, mentions harmony, in the modern sense of the word, in his "Sententiae de Musica." Guido Aventino (died 1050), gave the names ut (do), re, mi, fa, sol, la, to the notes now universally used; he was subsequently added by Le Maire. The first middle of the 18th century Germany had held the highest place in music; its many exponents including Beethoven, Weber, Spohr, and Mendelssohn. The later German school had its origin in the 19th century, and claims as its starting-point Beethoven's ninth symphony, in which music and poetry form a perfect whole: Wagner and Liszt. Of coarse both have been prominent in the foundation of this school, "the music of the future." Among the composers of sonatas and allied works are Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn, Schubert, Chopin, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Liszt, and Frdrik, Constantino Fux, whose Te Deum has been sung on the election of every pope since his time, was one of the creations of the madrigal. Prior to 1890, the chief music in England was masses, ballads, and madrigals, but dramatic music was much cultivated from that time. About the end of James I.'s reign, a music professorship was founded in the university of Oxford by Dr. Wm. Heydon; and the year 1710 was distinguished by the arrival in England of George Frederick Handel. Mozart came to England in 1763; Joseph Haydn in 1791; and Carl Maria von Weber in 1825.
MUSIC.

The People's Concert society founded, 1875.

The Musical Fitch was settled in France in 1859. The middle A to be 570 simple or 435 double vibrations in a second (in an open string). The so-called "natural" pitch made gave (A) 439 double vibrations (C, 523). At a meeting on the subject, held at the Society of Arts, on 23 Nov., 1865, the concert pitch of C was recommended to be adopted for performances at the international exhibition of 1872, at a meeting, 20 Jan., 1872.

[Handel's tuning-fork, 1749, was 435; the Philarmonic Society adopted C 435.] Mr. A. J. Ellis's elaborate "History of Musical Fitch" is published in "Journal of the Society of Arts," 3 May, 1868, and separately.

Sir A. Macfie's address to the French normal diapason, 20 June; agreed to by international conference at Vienna, about 17 Nov., 1875; adopted by the Philarmonic Society, Aug., 1875.

MUSICAL FESTIVALS IN ENGLAND. Dr. Byss, chancellor of Hereford, about 1874, proposed to the members of the choir a collection at the cathedral door after morning services for mortgage for the organ and appropriated to charitable purposes. It was then agreed to hold festivals at Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester, in rotation annually. Until the year 1773, the autumnal day was then extended to Hereford to three evenings; and at Gloucester, in 1775, to three mornings, for the purpose of introducing Handel's "Messiah," which was warmly received, and was performed annually ever since. Musical festivals on a great scale are now annually held at various cathedrals in England: Chester, 21 July, 1877; see Harold and Crystal Palace.

"The Solf-fa Annual" annual musical performances at St. Paul's began 1879.

MUSICAL FESTIVALS. Several were held on the continent in the 18th century; for Haydn at Vienna, 1785; and others at Erfurt 1841, Cologne 1841, and frequently since.

Study of music greatly increased by the efforts and teaching of John Hullah since 1840 at C99.

The tonic sol-fa system, in which the letters d, r, m, f, l, t, (for do, re, mi, fa, sol, la, ti, or si) were used instead of notes, was invented by Miss Glover, of Norwich, and improved by rev. John Curwen, about 1841; he died 1859.

The Tonic Sol-fa Association founded 1853; the college established 1852; public meeting at St. Paul's, 12 July, 1852.

MUSICAL INSTITUTIONS. The Ancient Academy of Music was instituted in 1790. It originated with numerous eminent performers and gentlemen wishing to promote that science.

Madrigal Society was established in 1741, and other musical societies followed.

"Ancient concerts" began, 1776; ceased, 1848.

Mozart's Price. The first commencement in 1867, when popular copyright songs were printed by unauthorised persons, and sold in the streets at twopenny each. Music publishers sustained heavy losses, and in 1892 piracy having assumed such enormous proportions, the Musical Copyright Association was formed by the publishers. As a result of their efforts a bill was passed in the 19th session of parliament—the Musical Copyright (Summary Proceedings) Act, 1892. This bill was, to an extent, ineffectual, because whilst it enabled publishers to seize pirated music it was shown of theoretical, since most important provisions of the act were unenforceable. The result was that music was not properly protected. In 1901 a bill to amend the 1892 act passed the Lords, but was blocked in the Commons by Mr. Cawdell, and on December 15, 1902, a committee was appointed by the House of Commons to inquire into the subject of music piracy. As a result another bill was drafted, but was "talked out" of the House of Commons by Mr. Cawdell, who was a member of another committee. A further effort to legislate on the subject was made in 1905, but again it met with failure. At the end of that year a man named Willets, known as the "King of the Pirates," and others, were arrested and charged with conspiracy to print and publish copyright music. It was given in evidence that millions of copies of pirated music had been seized by the police, and at the end Willets was convicted and sentenced to nine months' imprisonment. Others received lighter sentences.

MUSIC HALLS, ETC. 931

MUTINIES.

MUSICAL ARCH, invented by Mr. Duddell, by means of an arrangement of electric currents by which a musical note that can be altered to any pitch is obtained and a tune played—Nature, 20 Dec. 1860; 4 April, 1901.

MUSIC HALLS AND VARIETY THEATRES. The modern music hall is a development of the song and supper-rooms of London, and of the free-and-easy concert halls attached to provincial public-houses. Notable forerunners of variety halls in the metropolis were the Coal Hole, now merged into the site of the Savoy hotel, and the Covent Cellars, in Maiden-lane, and Crouch's, Lethington-greene. The music-hall did not begin to attract general attention until Mr. Charles Morton opened the Canterbury in Westminster-bridge-road, in 1839. Just as Mr. Morton was called the father of the modern music-hall, so was the Canterbury the beginning of a movement which has become a great national institution, and in which several millions of pounds are invested.

Canterbury, Westminster-bridge-road; built by Charles Morton, 1839, on site of ancient hostelry where Canterbury pilgrims had stayed; opened 17 May, 1839; Morton became sole proprietor Boxing Day, 1867; Reopened and opened 23 Sept. 1870. cost 49,000l.; lived, performances suspended 15 Nov. 1904. Cinematograph act came into force 1 Jan. 1905. Total number of music halls in greater London, 75, 1 Jan. 1905.

Crovond hippodrome opened 1 Aug. 1907. Mdlessex, Irving-lane (a survival of the Great Mogul tavern), rebuilt 1872, altered 1875; acquired by J. L. Graydon, 1878; extended (12,000l.) 1879; H. T. Lees, the chief designer, selected as the fire expert was firing at hall above his head, 28 Nov. 1908; sold and closed 11 Jan. 1909.

MUSKETRY SCHOOLS at Hythe and Fleetwood were established in 1854 under major-general C. C. Hay. He resigned in 1867. The school at Fleetwood was closed the same year.

MUSKETS, see Firearms.

MUSLIN, a fine cotton cloth, so called, it is said, from having a downy nap on its surface, resembling moss (French, mousse); according to others, because it was first brought from Mousoul, in Indostan.

MUSLIMS, see British.

MUTA (Syria). Here Mahomet and his followers decided the Christians in his first conflict with them (62).

MUTE. A prisoner is said to stand mute, when being arraigned for treason or felony, he either makes no answer, or answers foreign to the purpose. Until 1741, persons refusing to plead were subjected to torture by pressure.

Walter Calverley, esq. of Calverley in Yorkshire, having murdered two of his children, and stabbed his wife in a fit of jealousy, being arraigned for his crime at York assize, stood mute, and was thereupon pressed to death in the castle, a dangerous weight being placed upon his breast, 5 Aug. 1605. Story.

Major Langway suffered death in a similar manner at Newgate for the murder of his brother-in-law, Mr. Pussell, 1857. Judgment was awarded against mates, as if they were convicted or had confessed, by 12 Geo. III. 1772. A man refusing to plead was condemned and executed at the Old Bailey on a charge of murder, 1779, and another on a charge of burglary at Wells, 1792. An act passed by which the court is directed to enter a plea of "not guilty" when the prisoner will not plead, 1827.

MUTINA (now Moderna), N. Italy. Here Mark Antony, after defeating the consul Pansa, was himself beaten with great loss by Hirtius the other consul, and fled to Gaul, 27 April, 43 B.C.

MUTINIES, BRITISH. The mutiny throughout the fleet at Portsmouth for an advance of wages, April, 1797. It subsided on a promise from the Admiralty, which not being quickly fulfilled, occasioned a second mutiny on board the London man-of-war; admiral Colpys and his captain were put into confinement for ordering the marines to fire... whereby some lives were lost. The mutiny subsided 19 May, 1757; when an act was passed to raise the wages, and the king pardoned the mutineers.

Mutiny at the Bounty, 28 April, 1789; see Bounty.

Mutiny at the Nore, which blocked up the trade of the Thames, broke out on 27 May, 1757; and subsided 12 July. The principal mutineers were punished, and several executed (including the ringleader, who had assumed the name of rear-admiral Richard Parker), 30 June, at Sheerness.

Mutiny of the Jamaica frigate, the crew carried the ship to Barbados, 29 March, 1783.

Mutiny on board admiral Mitchell's fleet at Bantry Bay, Dec. 18-4, and January following (see Bantry Bay)

Mutiny at Malta, began 4 April, 1809, and ended on the 12th when the mutineers (then Greeks and Corsicans) blew themselves up by setting fire to a large magazine, consisting of between 400 and 500 barrels of gunpowder.

Mutiny on the Flora frigate, bound from London to Singapore: John Lyons and six foreign sailors murdered the captain and others, 19 Sept. 1853; Tellin, a sailor, separated from the rest, gave information; seven were tried and executed, 26 Sept. 1854.

Mutiny on the Loutre, British ship, bound for America, captain and two mates murdered by foreign seamen, 30 Oct. 1873. Van Hardeveld, steward, managed to get through gang of 15 Is. 4d. men, and conveyed to London; tried, convicted, 4 May; executed, 23 May, 1876.

Mutiny in Ninth Hussars, Curragh camp, Dublin; through discontent with officers on account of extra duty, 8 Sept.; 25 arrested; court martial, sentenced to penal servitude for two years, 8 for five years, 1 for seven years, 14 Nov. 1877.

Mutiny of 4 American sailors on the Liberte Castle, British ship, 30 mi. off Province island, capt. Peattie wounded, and M. Nixor, mate, killed; the mutineers escaped on a raft, unheard of since 2 Sept. 1812. 18 men murdered on the Flomeno, 7 Dec. 1874; see T Ebony, May 1875.

MUTINY ACT (1 & 2 Will. and Mary, c. 5), for the discipline, regulation, and payment of the army, &c., was passed 12 April, 1890, and has since been reenacted annually.

A parliamentary commission reported in favour of consolidating and simplifying military law, by combining the mutiny act and articles of war in a new act to be passed annually, &c., July, 1895, called the Army ( Mutiny ) Act. See also Dundee, 1873, and 1874.

MYCALE (Tomm, Asis Minor). BATTLE OF, fought between the Greeks under Leotychides, the king of Sparta, and Xanthippus the Athenian, and the Persians, 22 Sept. 479 B.C.; the day on which Mardonius was defeated and slain at Plataea by Pausanias. The Persians (about 160,000 men), who had just returned from the unsuccessful expedition of Xerxes in Greece, were completely defeated, thousands of them slaughtered, and their camp burnt. The Greeks sailed back to Samos with an immense booty.

MYCENAE, a division of the kingdom of Argives, in the Peloponnesus. It stood about fifty miles from Argos, and flourished till the invasion of the Heraclids. Early history mythical.

MYSTERY ACT (1 & 2 Will. and Mary, c. 5), for the discipline, regulation, and payment of the army, &c., was passed 12 April, 1890, and has since been reenacted annually.

A parliamentary commission reported in favour of consolidating and simplifying military law, by combining the mutiny act and articles of war in a new act to be passed annually, &c., July, 1895, called the Army (Mutiny) Act. See also Dundee, 1873, and 1874.

MYSTERY AND ITS RELATIONS TO THE HEBREW RELIGION. See also Dundee, 1873, and 1874.

MYSTERIES, derived from the Greek myste-riæ, a mystery or revealed secret. The Socræa mysteries are a term applied to the doctrines of Christianity, called the "mystery of godliness, 1 Tim. iii. 16, as opposed to the mystery of iniquity, 2 Thess. ii. 10. The Holy Eucharist is also termed the sacred mysteries. The Prophene mysteries were the secret ceremonies performed by a select few in honour of one deity. From the Egyptian mysteries of Isis and Osiris sprang those of Bacchus and Ceres among the Greeks. The Eleusinian mysteries were introduced at Athens by Eumolpus, 1356 B.C. — M YSTERY PLAYS; see Drama.
MYSTICS, a name given to those theologians who, in addition to the obvious meaning of the Holy Scriptures, assert that there are interpretations to be discovered by means of an emanation of the Divine Wisdom, by which the soul is enlightened and purified; for which purpose they advocate seclusion for contemplation and asceticism.

Mysticism taught at Alexandria by Clemens, Pantaenus, Origen, and others, who mingled Christianity and Platonism, 2nd and 3rd centuries.

Much promoted by the works of the pseudo-Dionysius ("The Mystic Theology," &c), 6th century.

Introduced into the Western empire, 9th century.

Eminent medieval mystics (opposed by the schoolmen), Master Eckhart (1260-1329); John Tauler of Strasbourg, where he acted heroically during the plague, termed the "black death" (1292-1361); Henry Suso (1300-65). They aimed at a more spiritual religion than Romanism; but their followers were charged with immoralitv, pantheism, communism, and maintaining private inspiration.

Jacob Bohme or Behmen, the German mystic, published his "Aurora" (an alleged divine revelation) 1612; died, 18 Nov. 1624.

For modern mystics, see Quakers, Quietists, Hutchinsonians, and Socinians.

MYTHOLOGY (Greek mythos, fable), the traditions respecting the gods and early history of any people. For the Egyptian mythology, see Egypt.

The chief Hindu gods are Brahma the creator, Vishnu the preserver, and Siva the destroyer, but there have been many changes in the Hindu Pantheon.
NAAS (E. Ireland). Here a desperate engagement took place between a body of royal forces and the insurgent Irish, 24 May, 1798, during the rebellion. The latter were defeated with the loss of 300 killed and many wounded.

NABONASSAR, ERA OP, received its name from the prince of Babylonia, under whose reign astronomical studies were much advanced in Chaldaea. The years contain 365 days each, without intercalation. The first day of the era was Wednesday (said, in mistake, to be Thursday, in L'Art de dire les Dates), 26 Feb., B.C. 3567, Julian period. To find the Julian year on which the year of Nabonassar begins, subtract the year, if before Christ, from 748; if after Christ, add to it 747.

NACHOD (Bohemia). At this place the Prussians, under their crown prince, defeated the Austrians, after a severe conflict, 27 June, 1800. The Prussian Uhians vanquished the Austrian cavalry.

NACOLEA (Phrygia). Near here the mariner Procopus was defeated, and soon afterwards slain by the emperor Valens, 306.

NAFELS (Switzerland). Here an Austrian army was defeated by a small body of Swiss, 1388.

NÁGA, the name in Hindu mythology of detached serpents, whose king, Sesa, is the sacred serpent of the 20th Vิम्बु. NAGA HILLS MASSACRE, see Indus, 1875.

NAGASAKI, a city and port of Japan, on the west coast of the island of Kyushu, with an excellent harbour famous for its beauty. For over 200 years Nagasaki was the only port of Japan in communication with other countries. From 1637 to 1859 Dutch traders were compelled to reside in their factory at Dejima, near the head of the inlet forming the harbour. Nagasaki was one of the 3 ports opened 1859 to the British and Americans. In 1869 it, with 7 other ports, was opened to foreign nations. There is a fine dockyard at Nagasaki, and 8 miles seaward, on an island, is situated the great Tokushima coal mine, which gives importance to Nagasaki as a coaling station. Roman Catholic and Protestant missionaries are strongly represented in the city and its neighbourhood.

NAG'S HEAD STORY. Matthew Parker was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth, 17 Dec., 1559, by bishops Barlow, Caverdale, Scory, and Hildeskin. For forty-five years after, the Roman writers asserted that Parker and others had been ordained in an abnormal fashion by Scory at the Nag's Head Tavern, Cheapside. This notion was refuted by Burnet, and is rejected by Roman Catholic authorities, such as Linsard.

NAHUM, FESTIVAL OF, Nahum, the seventh of the twelve minor prophets, about 715 B.C.; the festival is kept by the Eastern church on 1 December.

NAISSUS (Moesia). The Goths were defeated near here with great slaughter by the emperor Claudius II., 269.

NAJARA or NAVARRETE (N. Spain). At Logroño, near these places, Edward the Black Prince defeated Henry de Trastámara, and re-established Peter the Cruel on the throne of Castile, 3 April, 1467.

NAMES. A Roman citizen had generally three names; prénom, denoting the individual; nomen, the gens or clan; cognomen, the branch of the clan; sometimes he had the agnomen (e.g., Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus). The popes change their names on their exaltation to the pontificate, "a custom introduced by pope Sergius, whose name till then was Swinc-mont," 687. Platina. Omphries (followed by most of the modern authorities), refers it to John XII., 956; stating that it was done in imitation of SS. Peter and Paul, who were first called Simon and Saul. In France the name given at baptism was sometimes changed. The two sons of Henry II., of France were christened Alexander and Herculeus; at their confirmation these names were changed to Henry and Francis. Monks and nuns, at their entrance into monasteries, assume new names. See Surnames, Miss Yonge's "History of Christian Names," published 1863 (new edition 1884). M. A. Lower's "Patronymica Britannica," 1860. The Century Cyclopaedia of names, edited by Benjamin E. Smith, published 1894, last edition, 1905.

NAMUR, in Belgium, was made a county in 932; taken by the French, 4 July, 1692; by William of England, 3 Aug., 1665; ceded to the house of Austria by the peace of Utrecht, and garrisoned by the Dutch as a barrier town of the United Provinces in 1715. The city of Namur was ceded to Austria, 1715; taken by the French in 1746, but was restored in 1749. In 1752, the emperor Joseph expelled the Dutch garrison. In 1792 it was again taken by the French, who were compelled to evacuate it in 1795; regained 1794; delivered up to the allies, 1814; assigned to Belgium, 1831. It was a site of a severe conflict in June, 1815, between the Prussians and the French under Grouchy, when retreating after the battle of Waterloo. Population, 1872, 37,237; 1903, 35,445.

NANCY (S.E. France), an ancient city, capital of Lorraine, in the 1st century. After taking Nancy, 29 Nov., 1775, and losing it, 5 Oct., 1786, Charles the Bold of Burgundy was defeated beneath its walls, and slain by the duke of Lorraine and the Swiss, 5 Jan., 1477; see Lorraine. Nancy was embellished by Stanislas, ex-king of Poland, who resided and died here Feb. 1766. It was captured by Blücher, Jan., 1814, and during the Franco-Prussian War, on the retreat of MacMahon's army, and expecting the German army, surrendered to four Ulrians, 12 Aug., 1870. It was restored at the peace. Population in 1881 (est.) 112,709.

Grand fêtes; visits of president Carnot and the grand duke Constantine of Russia, 3—7 June, 1862.

Prof., Blücher, eminent scientist, murdered by M. Four, a chemist, who afterwards committed suicide, 5 June, 1864.

Theatre destroyed by fire at Nancy; damage estimated £1,400,000. 4 Oct., 1863.

Members of the L.C.C. visit Nancy exhibition, by invitation, 1—2 July, 1879.
NAPLES.

NAPLES, formerly the continental division and seat of government of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, began with a Greek colony named Parthenope (about 1000 B.C.), which was afterwards divided into Palatopolis (the old) and Neapolis (the new city); from the latter the present name is derived. The colony was conquered by the Romans in the Samnite war, 326 B.C. Naples, after resisting the invasion of the Goths, Frankish and Genoese pillagers, was subjugated by the Normans under Roger Guiscard, the founder of Sicily, A.D. 1131. Few countries have had so many political changes, and cruel and despotic rulers, or suffered so much from convulsions of nature, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, etc. The eldest son of the king of Italy is styled Prince of Naples. In 1826, the population of the kingdom of Naples was 6,889,030, of Sicily 2,231,020; total, 9,117,050. It now forms part of the revived kingdom of Italy. Population of the province in 1880 (est.), 1,249,496, and of the city 620,126.

Naples conquered by the Normans under Roger Guiscard, 1091.

Naples conquered, and the kingdom of the Two Sicilies founded by Roger Guiscard, 1131.

The imperial house of Hohenstaufen (see Germany) obtains the kingdom by marriage, and rules 1134-1266.

The last of the Angion kings who deposes the regent Manfred (son of Frederick H. of Germany) at Benevento (Manfred slain) 26 Feb. 1266.

Charles defects Conradin (the last of the Hohenstaufen who had come to Naples by invitation of the Giibilinesi), at Tagliacozzo, 23 Aug.; Conradin beheaded 29 Oct. 1268.

The massacre called the Sicilian vespres (see Germany) 30 March, 1568.

Andrew of Hungary, husband of Joanna I, murdered 18 Sept. 1345.

His brother Louis, king of Hungary, invades Naples 1349.

Queen Joanna put to death 2 May, 1352.

Alphonso V. of Aragon (called the Wise and Magnanimous) on the death of Joanna II, seizes Naples 1345.

Naples conquered by Charles XII, 113 May 1695.

And by Louis XII, of France and Ferdinand of Spain, who divide it 1701.

Expulsion of the French 1704.

Naples and Sicily united to Spain 1504.

Insurrection of Masaniello, occasioned by the extortion of the Spanish viceroys. An impost was claimed on a basket of figs, and refused by the owner, with the support of the populace, led by Masaniello (Thomas Aniello), a fisherman; they obtained the command of Naples, many of the nobles were slain and their palaces burnt, and the viceroys was compelled to abdicate the throne and to restore the privileges granted by Charles V. to the city 1617.

Masaniello, intoxicated by his success, was slain by his own followers 22 July. Another insurrection suppressed by Don John of Austria 1648.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE EVANGELICAL FREE CHURCHES, popularly known as "The Free Church Council," originated in an article by a Rev. Johncome Rogers, in the Methodist Times, 20 Feb. 1839. The idea of the article, for the federation of the nonconformist bodies to promote their common interests, took practical shape, and the first free church congress was held at Manchester, 7 Nov. 1892. The second congress took place at Leeds, March, 1894, when it was determined that each congress should have an independent president, dr. Berry being the first elected to hold that office. Since that date the congress has been held annually. The objects of the national council are: "to facilitate intercourse and co-operation among the evangelical free churches; to assist in the organization of local councils; to encourage devotional fellowship and mutual counsel concerning the spiritual life and religious activities of the churches; to advocate the New Testament doctrine of the church, and to defend the rights of the associated churches; to promote the application of the law of Christ in every relation of human life." Among prominent past and present leaders of the movement have been and are: dr. Clifford, rev. F. H. Meyer, the late dr. Sir Garnet Wolseley, Sir John Pain Price Hughes, dr. Munro Gibson, dr. NATIONAL DEBT. In 1853 an excise act was passed, granting duties for carrying on the war with France; the act also secured certain recompenses and advantages to such persons as should collectively advance 1,000,000l, for the same purpose; this sum was speedily subscribed. The permanent debt began by the establishment of the Bank of England in 1694, mainly through the exertions of Charles Montague, afterwards Earl of Halifax, under the condition of its lending money to the government on interest, the repayment of the principal not to be demanded. The rapid growth of the debt was mainly caused by foreign wars, and its reduction was continually demanded. See Stocks, Sinking Fund, and Local Loans.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF FRANCE was instituted by the Committee of Safety at Paris on 13 July, 1789 (the day before the destruction of the Bastille), to maintain order and defend the public liberty. Its first colours were blue and red, to which white was added, when its formation was approved by the king. Its action was soon paralysed by the revolution, and it ceased altogether under the consulate and empire. It was revived by Napoleon in 1814, and maintained by Louis XVIII, but was broken up by Charles X, after a tumultuous review in 1827. It was revived in 1830, and helped to place Louis Philippe on the throne. In 1848 its reconstitution and its enlargement from 83,000 to 100,000 men led to the frightful conflict of June, 1848. Its constitution was entirely changed in Jan, 1822, when it was subjected entirely to the control of the government. Formerly it had many privileges, such as choosing its own officers, &c. It subsequently lost the decision of the day to the National Guard and the incompetency of the rest during the outbreak in Paris in 1871, its gradual abolition was decreed by the national assembly at Versailles (488-154); 21 Aug. 1871. The peaceful disarmament began in September. National guards established in Spain, Naples, and other countries, during the nineteenth century.

NATIVITY. There are three festivals in the Roman and Greek churches, under this name. The Nativity of Christ, also observed by the protestants, on 25 Dec. (see Christmas); the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, not observed by the protestants at all. Pope Sergius I., about 687, established the latter, but it was not generally received in France and Germany till about 1000; nor by the eastern Christians till the 12th century. The festival of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, 24 June, Midsummer-day, is said to have been instituted in 483.

NATURAL HISTORY was studied by Solomon, 1 Kings iv. 33; Aristotle (382-322 B.C.), by Theophrastus (350-270 B.C.), and by Pliny (23-79 A.D.); see Botany, Zoology, British Museum, & c.

NATURALISM, a realistic style in literature, mainly introduced by Balzac, 1829, &c. seq. "Naturalism" is now defined as the knowledge of phenomena, and the laws by which they are connected, but nothing more. Some writers combine with naturalism, agnosticism, positivism, and empiricism (which see). "Naturalism and Agnosticism," the gifted lectures, 1856-1857, by Prof. James Ward, published 1859, in which he opposes the mechanical view of nature, viz. naturalism, and insists upon the recognition of mind as the animating principle. Edmondilot in his "Rougon-Macquart" series, 1871 et seq. portrayed deformed and diseased rather than true nature. A dramatized form of his "Assommoir," entitled "Drink," had a long run in London in 1879, and is (1883) still played at intervals.

NATURALIZATION is defined to be "the making a foreigner or alien a denizen or Freeman of any kingdom or city, and so becoming, as it were, both a subject and a native of a king or country that by nature he did not belong to." The first act of naturalization passed in 1497; and various similar enactments were made in most of the reigns from that time; several of them special acts relating to individuals. An act for the naturalization of the Jews passed May, 1573, but was repealed in 1734, on the petition of the citizens of England; and Jews, for the privileges since granted them. The act for the naturalization of prince Albert passed 3 Viet., 7 Feb. 1830. A committee to inquire into the naturalization laws, appointed May, 1886, of Clarendon chairman, met 25 Oct., 1886; reported about Feb., 1891; and new acts for this purpose were passed 12 May, 1870, and 25 July, 1872. In 1870 there were about 75,000 Americans in England, and about 2,500 (see British subjects in the United States of America). By the new act the latter were enabled to renounce their allegiance; and by the convention signed 3 Feb., 1871, the nationality of British subjects was made dependent on choice and not on birth. Naturalization (abroad) act passed 6 July, 1869.

Committee on naturalization's report issued, with suggestions. see Times leader, 19 Oct., 1891.

Number of aliens naturalized in the United Kingdom during 1892 was 84,784, reported, April, 1893.

In 1879-80, 57,427 aliens were naturalized in the United Kingdom. Mar. 1910.

NATURE, a weekly illustrated journal of science, first appeared 4 Nov. 1869; editor, Mr. (afterwards Sir) Joseph Norman Lockyer, F.R.S. Mr. Alex. Macmillan, one of the founders, born 1818, died 25 Jan. 1896. La Nature (founded and edited by M. Gaston Tissandier, died Sept., 1859; see Bailly) appeared in 1829.

NATURE PRINTING. This process consists in impressing objects, such as plants, mosses, feathers, &c., into plates of metal, causing these objects, as it were, to engrave themselves; and afterwards taking casts or copies fit for printing from. Kniphol, of Erfurt, between 1728 and 1757, produced his Herbarium vivum by pressing the plants themselves (previously inked) on paper; the impressions being afterwards coloured by hand. In 1823, Peter Kyhl, of Copenhagen, made use of steel rollers and lead plates. In 1842 Mr. Taylor printed face. In 1847 Mr. Twinning printed ferns, grasses, and plants; and in the same year Dr. Branson suggested the application of electrotyping to the impressions. In 1849, professor Leydolt, of Vienna, by the able assistance of Mr. Andrew Worring, obtained impressions of agates and fossils. The first practical application of this process is in Von Heuler's work on the mosses of Arpach in Transylvania; and the second (the larger) in "The Forns of Great Britain and Ireland," edited by Dr. Lindley, the illustrations to which were prepared under the superintendence of Mr. Henry Bradley in 1855-56, who also in 1857-60 printed "The British Sea-weeds," edited by W. G. Johnstone and Alex. Cowal. The process was applied to butterflies by Joseph Merrin of Gloucester, in 1864.

NAVAL WORKS ACT (at home and abroad), relating to docks, ports, passed 31 March, 1896; estimated cost, docks, 3,579,000. 1896.
NAVARINO.

NAVARINO (S. W. Greece), settled by the Arabs 6th century; taken by the Turks, 1500; by Venetians, 1686; by Turks, 1718; by Greeks, 1821; by Turks, 1825. Near here, on 20 Oct. 1827, the combined fleets of England, France, and Russia, under command of Admiral Codrington, nearly destroyed the Turkish and Egyptian fleet. More than thirty ships, many of them four-deckers, were blown up or burnt, chiefly by the Turks themselves, to prevent their falling into the hands of their enemies. This destruction of the Turkish naval power was characterized by the duke of Wellington as an untoward event." The port is also called Navarine.

NAVARRE, now a province of Spain, formed a part of the Roman dominions, and was conquered from the Saracens by Charlemagne, 778. His descendants appointed governors, one of whom, Garcia Ximenes, took the title of king in 857. In 1076, king Sancho IV. was poisoned, and Sancho Ramoroz of Aragon seized Navarre. In 1134, Navarre became again independent under Garcia Ramoroz IV. In 1234, Thibault, count of Champagne, nephew of Sancho VII., became sovereign of Navarre; and in 1284, by the marriage of the heiress Jane with Philip IV. le Bel, Navarre was united to France.

SOVEREIGNS OF NAVARRE.

1303. Louis X. Hutcin of France.
1316. Philip V. the Long of France.
1322. Charles I. the Fair, IV. of France.
1328. Jane II. (daughter of Jane I.), and her husband Philip d'Evreux.
1346. Charles II. the Bad.
1387. Charles III. the Noble.
1425. Blanche, his daughter, and her husband, John of Aragon.
1441. John III., alone, who became king of Aragon in 1458. He endeavoured to obtain the crown of Castile also.
1472. Eleanor de Foix, his daughter.
1483. Catherine (his sister) and her husband John d'Albert. Ferdinand of Aragon conquers and annexes all Navarre south of the Pyrenees, 1512.

LOWER NAVARRE (in France).

1516. Henry d'Albert.
1555. Jane d'Albert and her husband Anthony de Bourdon, who died 1562.
1572. Henry III., who became in 1569, king of France (Henry IV.), to which Lower Navarre was formally united in 1659.

NAVIGATION LAWS. A code of maritime laws is attributed to Richard I. of England, said to have been decreed at the isle of Oleron, 1104, and further enactments were made by Richard II. in 1302. In October, 1849, the parliament passed an act entitled "Goods from foreign parts, by whom to be imported," the principles of which were affirmed by 12 Charles II. c. 18, "an act for the encouraging and increasing of shipping and navigation" (1660). The latter act restricts the importation and exportation of goods from or to Asia, Africa, America, to English ships, of which the masters and three-fourths of the mariners are to be English. This was followed by many acts of similar tenor; which were consolidated by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 54 (1833). These acts were in the whole or in part repealed by the act (1850) to amend the laws in force for the encouragement of British shipping and navigation." (passed 12 & 13 Vic. c. 29, June 24, 1851, after much opposition, and which came into operation Jan. 1850. The steam navigation act passed 14 & 15 Vict. c. 79, 1851, same into operation 1 Jan. 1852. The act regulating the navigation of the river Thames was passed in 1786. In Feb. 1805 the emperor recommended the modification of French navigation laws; in Feb. 1822, new restrictions were laid upon foreign ships, chiefly affecting British.

An International Maritime conference, at which 23 nations were represented by 50 delegates, Portugal not included, met at Washington, and were NAVY OF FRANCE. It is first mentioned in history, 728, when, like that of England at an early period, it consisted of galleys; in this year the French defeated the Frien fleet. The French fleet was almost annihilated by Edward III. of the battle of Sluys, 22 June, 1340. It was considerably improved under Louis XIV. at the instance of his minister Colbert, about 1667. The French navy was in its splendour about 1781; became greatly reduced in the wars with England; see Naval Battles, was greatly increased by the emperor Napoleon III., and in 1859 consisted of 11 ships of the line (14 sailing vessels and 37 steamers), and 398 other vessels, in all 1,919, including vessels building, converting, or ordered to be built. Strength, 1969, 32 battleships, 22 armoured cruisers, 7 armoured coast gunboats, 27 protected vessels, 29 protected vessels, 13 torpedo vessels, 11 gunboats, 77 destroyers, 269 torpedo boats, 104 submarines, including vessels building and ordered; 2,879 officers and 53,900 men. NEBULAE, the luminous cloudlike mist visible to the naked eye in some constellations, such as Orion, in others only by powerful telescope; much studied by astronomers, and formerly considered to be clusters of stars. Halley gave a list of 6 nebulae, with a theory, in 1716. Messier, in 1774, gave 103. Sir Wm. Herschel discovered more than 2,500, and sir John Herschel more than 2,000; (8,380 known up to 1887; Dr. Dreyer’s index now contains 10,500; 1796). Nebula proper are classified as annular, elliptic, spiral, planetary, and nebulous. Their spectrum consists usually of a few bright lines indicative of their gaseous structure.

The Nebular Hypothesis put forth by Laplace in his “Système du Monde,” 1776, supposed that the solar system was evolved mechanically from a vast nebula, and that nebulae were the early stages in the formation of planets and their satellites, by cooling, compression, and contraction. This theory was adopted by sir William Herschel, and though at first opposed, is now generally accepted in a modified form. Mr. Lassell scrutinised the dumb-bell nebula in Orion, and reported that the bright parts did not appear to be stars, Oct. 1836. Dr. Wm. Huggins reported his analyses of certain nebulae by their spectra, and believed them to be gaseous, 1863.

For sir Norman Lockyer’s theory see under Meteor, 17 Nov. 1887.

Prof. Max Wolf, of Heidelberg, discovered a fine cluster in Capricornus, April, 1901.

NECROMANCERS, see Magic.

NECTARINE, the Amygdalus Persica, originally came from Persia about 1502. Previously, presents of nectarines were frequently sent to the court of England from the Netherlands; and Catherine, queen of Henry VIII., distributed them among her friends.

NEEDLE-GUN (Zünduddelegewehrs), a musket invented by J. N. Dreyse of Sennert, about 1827, and made a breech-bafer in 1830, which was adopted by the Prussian general Manteuffel about 1846. It was found to be a most effective weapon overseas in the war in Denmark in 1864, and in that with Austria in 1866. The ignition of the charge is produced by a fine steel rod or needle being pressed through the cartridge. The principle is claimed by James Whiteley, of Dublin, 1823; Abraham Moor, 1831; and John Hanson, of Huddersfield, 1843.

NEEDLES. The making of Spanish needles was first taught in England by Elias Crowse, a German, about the eighth year of queen Elizabeth, and in Queen Mary’s time there was a negro who made fine Spanish needles in Cheapside, but who would never teach his art to any. — More. The manufacture was greatly improved at Whitechapel, London; Redditch, in Worcestershire, and Hatherings, in Derbyshire. An exhibition of antique needlework was formed at South Kensington Museum in 1873.

NEOHOTAI, a new gas discovered in 1848.

NEPAUL (N. India) was conquered by the Ghoorkas, 1760, who made treaties with the British, 1791 and 1801; but frequently made incursions; and in consequence war with them commenced Nov. 1814; terminated 27 April, 1815. A treaty of peace was concluded between the parties Dec. 1814. Peace was renewed through an infraction of the treaty by the Nepaulese, Jan. 1816; and after several contests, unfavourable to the Nepaulese, the former treaty was ratified, 15 March, 1816. An extraordinary embassy from the king of Nepal to the queen of Great Britain arrived in England, landing at Southampton, 25 May, and remained till Aug. 1829; it consisted of the Nepaulese prince, Jung Bahadoor, and his suite, to whom many honours were paid. He supported the English during the Indian mutiny in 1857. The prince of Wales was honourably received in Nepal, 12 Feb. 1876. War with Thibet on account of robbed merchants.

NEPHOSCOPE (nephos, Greek, a cloud). An apparatus for measuring the velocity of clouds, invented by Karl Braun, and reported to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, 27 July, 1868.

NEPHELEON, a primary planet, first observed on 23 Sept. 1834, by Dr. Galie, at Berlin, in consequence of a letter from M. Le Verrier, who had conjectured from the anomalous movements of Uranus that a distant planet might exist nearly in the position where Neptune was situated. Calculations to the same effect had been previously made by Mr. J. Couch Adams, of Cambridge; but unfortunate delays occurred in their publication, and also of professor Challis's subsequent discovery of the planet. The Royal Society of London awarded its gold medal to both astronomers as equals in the theoretical discovery. A satellite of Neptune was discovered by M. Lassell on 10 Oct. following. Neptune is said to have been seen by Lykande, and Thaumas; its herald be a herald; in the Greek god Poseidon became the Roman Neptune. Prof. J. C. Adams died 21 Jan. 1862; his "Papers" published March, 1867.

NEWGATE, LONDON. The prison derived its name from the gate, to which was attached a small prison, gradually enlarged. One was erected in 1806 by the bishop of London. It was used as a prison for persons of rank as early as 1218; but was rebuilt about two centuries afterwards by the executors of Sir Richard Whittington, whose statue with a cat stood in the niche till the time of its demolition by the great fire of London, in 1666, when they reconstructed it, but becoming "an accumulation of misery and inconvenience," was pulled down and rebuilt between 1778 and 1780. During the riots in 1780, the interior was destroyed by fire, but shortly afterwards restored. In 1857, the interior was pulled down to be re-erected on a plan adapted to the reformatory system. Newgate was disused as an ordinary prison by 14 April, 1881. Building demolished 1902-3. Sale of fittings and relics 4 Feb. 1906. NEW MEXICO (N. America), ceded to the United States in 1848, and organised as a territory, 9 Sept. 1850. Capital, Santa Fe. Precious metals are carried to every part of the territory. Population, 1860, 105,310; 1890 (est.), 214,841.

New Mexico created a state by a bill which became law, 18 August, 1889.

NEW ORLEANS, capital of Louisiana, N. America (whence see), founded in 1717, under the regency of the French. In 1858 seven whites of the city were destroyed by fire. The British attacked New Orleans in Dec. 1814, and were repulsed with great loss by the Americans under general Jackson. 8 Jan. 1815: the British general, sir Edward Pakenham, was killed. New Orleans was surrendered to the Federals in April, 1862. The strong feeling of the inhabitants in favour of the Confederates and against the Federals induced general B. Butler to rule them with military rison, occasionally degenerating into brutal tyranny, especially towards females, May to October, 1862.

He was replaced by general Banks, 16 Dec. 1862. Sanitary riots, due to agitators, began 30 July, 1866. A law was passed by the Legislative Assembly under the governor's veto, and which he refused to disregard. In protest against this action of the legislature, the citizens of New Orleans, by a vote of 12,760 to 600, summoned a convention to meet at the capitol, and on 18 Sept. 1864: it composed of 80 members, and which met in the new market a bill which became law, 18 December, 1864.

New Orleans.—John McEnery elected governor of Louisiana by the southern whites, 4 Nov. 1872; but W. P. Kellogg, elected by the coloured people and their white friends, was recognised by the Federal government. To defend themselves against tyranny, the southerners formed the "White League," and collected armed forces, which they refused to surrender. On demand, 15 Sept., 1874: they deposed Kellogg at New Orleans after some resistance, and established McEnery as governor, but submitted to the president's proclamation and Kellogg was restored to his office. The government troops elect members from the legislative assembly as they judge fit.

After much discussion, a peaceable compromise April, 1877, was arrived at, by which the dispute settled in favor of Democrats by president Hayes: prospect of peace.

Charter Rights.—About 10,000 chartists (whence see), from the neighbouring mines, armed with guns, pikes, &c., arrived at Newport, 4 Nov. 1839. They divided themselves into three considerable bodies; one was led by Mr. John Frost, an ex-magistrate, proceeded down the principal street; whilst the other, headed by his son, took the direction of New-hill. Before they reached the garden front of the Westgate hotel, where the magistrates were assembled with about 30 soldiers of the 43rd regiment, and several special constables. The rioters broke the windows and fired on the inmates, by which the mayor, Mr. (afterwards sir Thomas) Phillips, and several other persons were wounded. The soldiers returned the fire, and dispersed the mob, which fled, leaving about 20 dead, and others wounded. A detachment of the 8th royal hussars arrived from Bristol, and the town became tranquil.

Frost was apprehended on the following day, together with his printer, and other influential persons among the chartists. He and others were tried and sentenced to death (afterwards committed to transportation).

NEW RIVER, for the supply of London with water, was begun 1669, and finished in 1673, when the projector, Hugh Myddelton, a London goldsmith, was knighted by James I.—Strype. This artificial river, which rises in Hertfordshire, and which, with its windings, then forty-eight miles long, was brought to London, and opened 29 Sept. 1673. So little was the benefit of it understood, that for above thirty years the seventy-two shares (equally divided into King’s and Adventurers’), netted only 5s. a piece. Charles I. sold his shares to Myddelton’s representatives for an annuity of 500/. Each of these shares was sold originally for 100/. A part of a share sold at the rate of 91,000/., the share, 19 Nov. 1782; a part of a king’s share at the rate of 99,000/., of an adventurer’s share at the rate of 93,000/., 15 May, 1788; king’s share, rate 88,200/.; adventurer’s, 91,000/., Oct. 1875; king’s share, rate 91,010/.; adventurer’s, 94,500/., Nov. 1880; king’s share rate 83,500/.; adventurer’s, 85,200/., Nov. 1887. An entire freehold adventurer’s share of the company was sold by auction for 122,500/., to the Prudential Assurance Company, 17 July, 1879. The annual income of the company from land and water was stated to be 114,350/.

NEWPAPERS.

Population of N. S. Wales, 1,329,414, on 31 Dec., 1899; Serious floods in the north; miles of country surrounding Tansworth lost; much damage done to property. 26 Jan., 1900. Great trade strike which had lasted 18 weeks and entailed a loss of wages amounting to over £1,000,000. 14 March.

NEWPAPERS PROVINCIAL SOCIETY, established in 1829, became the Newspaper Society in 1889, see Press Association.

NEWPAPERS. The Roman Acta Diurna were issued, it is said, 1,051 A.D. In modern times, a Gazette, established to come out from its printer, a small com., was published in Venice about 1530.

The Gazette de France, now existing, first appeared in April, 1631, edited by Renauld, a physician. It was patronised by the king, Louis XIII., who wrote one article for it, and by Richelieu. The first real newspaper published in England was established by Sir Robert Ker, in 1665. It was called the Public Advertiser, and continued nearly three years, when it ceased, on the appearance of the Gazette. In the reign of James I., 1622, appeared the London Weekly Journal; and in the year 1642 (the period of the civil war) were printed a variety of publications, certainly in no respect equal to those of the name of newspapers. See Journal, Daily. The following are the titles of some of these:

Daily Journal, and to have been first published in 1772.

Stamp duty imposed.

London Newspapers began with The British Gazette and London Monitor, 26 March, 1754, followed by the Post-currer, 1761; Daily Morning Post, 1763; Daily Dispatch, 1764, &c.

The duty made od. 4 1/2 d. the 1,000.

The duty raised to 8 d. in 1792, to 12 d. in 1794; to 2s. in 1795.

Reduced to 1/2d. and 1/4d., for subscription in 1796.

Abolished, the compulsory stamp being retained only for postal purposes.

* Some copies of a publication are in existence called The English Mercury, professing to come out under the authority of an act of Parliament, 26 March, 1754, the period of the Spanish Armada. The researches of Mr. T. Watts, of the British Museum prove these to be forgeries, executed about 1700. The full title of No. 30 is: 'The English Mercury, published by authority, for the prevention of false reports, imprin'ted by Christopher Burker, his highness's printer, No. 56.' It describes the Spanish Armada, giving 'A Journal of what passed since the departure of her Majesty's fleet and that of Spain, transmitted by the Lord High Admiral to the Lords of Council.'

* On 23 May, 1782, a London Gazette Extraordinary was forged, with a view of affecting the funds.

This also ceased 30 Sept., 1870. Newspapers first sent with a 3d. stamp affixed to the cover.

NEW STYLE.

NEW STYLE. Peter Gregory XIII., in order to rectify the errors of the current calendar, published a new one, in which ten days were omitted—5 Oct. 1582, becoming 15 Oct. The new style was adopted in France, Italy, Spain, Denmark, Holland, Flanders, Portugal, in 1582, in Germany in 1584, in Sweden, Denmark, and Poland in 1587, in Scotland in 1600, and in England in 1751. In 1752 eleven days were left out of the calendar—3 Sept. being reckoned as 14 Sept. The difference between the old and new style up to 1799 was 10 days; after 1700, 11 days; after 1800, 12 days; after 1900, 13 days. In Russia, Greece, and throughout the East, the old style is still retained. 1 Jan. 1955, was O.S. 14 Jan. See Calendar.

NEW TESTAMENT. See Bible.

NEWTONIAN PHILOSOPHY. The doctrines respecting gravitation, &c., taught by Sir Isaac Newton in his "Principia," published in 1687; see Gravitation. He was born 25 Dec., 1642; became master of the mint, 1699; president of the Royal Society, 1703; and died 20 March, 1727. A statue of him in marble by Roubiliac was set up at Trinity College, Cambridge, 14 July, 1755, and one in bronze by Theed, at Grantham, 27 Sept. 1858, when lord Brougham delivered a discourse on the life and works of Newton. The latter statue cost 10,000, a sum obtained by public subscription.

NEWTOWNBARRY RIOT (S. E. Ireland). At a seige of the stock for tithes, a conflict ensued here between the yeomanry and the people, when thirty-five persons were killed or wounded, 18 June, 1831. The jury at the inquest were unable to agree on a verdict.

NEWTOWN-BUTLER (N. Ireland). On 30 July, 1789, the Emmiskilleners under Gustavus Hamilton thoroughly defeated the adherents of James II. commanded by general Macartney, taking him prisoner with his artillery, arms, and baggage.

NEW YEAR'S DAY. The beginning of the Jewish year was changed and the passover instituted, 1491 B.C. A feast is said to have been instituted by Numa, and dedicated to Janus (who presided over the new year), 1 Jan. 713 B.C.

On this day the Romans sacrificed to Janus a cake of sifted meal, with salt, incense, and wine; and all the mechanics began something of their art of trade; the men of letters did the same, as to books, poems, &c.; and the consuls, though chosen before, took the chair and entered upon their office this day. Numa Marcellus refers the origin of New Year's gifts among the Romans to Titus Tatius, king of the Sabines, who having considered as a good omen a present of some branches cut in a wood consecrated to Sestius, the goddess of strength, which he received on the first day of the new year, authorised the custom afterwards, and gave these gifts the name of Sestius, 747 B.C.

NEW YORK. The "empire state" of the United States of N. America, is said to have been discovered by Verrazzano, a Florentine in the French service, about 1524, and rediscovered by Hudson, an Englishman in the Dutch service, in 1609, and settled by the Dutch in 1614, the city being named Manhattan and New Amsterdam; but the English under colonel Nichols dispossessed them and the Swedes, 2 Aug., 1653, and changed its name, the King, Charles II., having given the territory to his brother, the duke of York. Population of the city, in 1860, 805,651; in 1870, 1,515,201; in 1910 (est.), 1,962,831; of the state in 1880, 5,082,874; in 1890, 7,206,841; in 1910 (est.), 7,965,783; of Albany, the state capital, in 1880, 90,758; in 1910 (est.), 104,115; of Brooklyn, in 1880, 566,693; in 1910 (est.), 886,675; of Buffalo, in 1880, 155,131; in 1910 (est.) 281,230. Brooklyn with other towns consolidated with New York to form a single city under one government at; bill passed 27 Feb., 1841. The city was incorporated, 23 Jan., 1845, in 1910 (est.) 3,780,142.

Taken by the Dutch, and named New Orange, 1673; in 1674.

The city a principal point of the struggle for independence. It surrendered to the British forces under general Howe, 13 Sept. 1776.

NEY'S EXECUTION. Ney, duke of Elchingen, prince of the Moskva, and one of the most valiant of the marshals of France, was shot as a traitor, 7 Dec 1815. On 7 Dec 1853, his statue was erected on the spot where he fell.

After the abdication of Napoleon I, 5 April 1814, Ney took the oath of allegiance to the King, Louis XVIII. On Napoleon's return to France from Elba, he marched against him; but his troops deserting, he regarded the cause of the Bourbons as lost and opened the invaders' way to Paris, March, 1815. Ney led the attack of the French at Waterloo, where he fought in the midst of the fray, his clothes pierced with bullet holes, his horse has being shot under him; night and defeat followed though included the decree of 24 July, 1815, which guaranteed the safety of all Frenchmen, he was sought out, and on 5 Aug taken at the castle of a friend at Urielle, and brought to trial before the court of peers, 4 Dec 1815, and on 26 Dec, the 26th article of the constitution of Paris, fixing a general amnesty, was quoted in his favour in vain.

NIAGARA (N. America). At the head of this river, on the western shore, is Fort Erie, which was taken by the English, 24 July, 1759. It was abandoned for a short time with the United States, 27 May, 1813, but was retaken, 2 Dec, following. A suspension bridge of a single span of 820 feet over the Niagara, connecting the railways of Canada and New York, was opened in March, 1855. It is elevated 18 feet on the Canadian, and 28 feet on the American side; suspended by a great new steel arch bridge, last panel fitted, 29 March, 1897, a remarkable bridge, constructed by the French steel company for the Canadian and New York incorporations. There are at present four bridges crossing the river.

About eighty miles below Fort Erie are the remarkable falls. The river is here 740 yards wide; the half-mile-wide bed of the river is the cataract, or a rapid, in which the water falls 19 feet, it is then thrown, with astonishing grandeur, down a stupendous precipice of 170 feet perpendicular, in three distinct and collateral sheets; and, in a rapids that extend to the distance of nine miles below, falls nearly as much more. The river then flows in a deep chanel till it enters lake Ontario, at Fort Niagara.

The falls visited by the prince of Wales, Sept. 1860. Robinson crossed the falls on a tightrope, 30 June and Sept. 2 Sept 1861; and again in 1862.

An international commission (president, sir Wm. Thomson, afterwards lord Kelvin) was appointed to consider the best method for utilizing 175,000 horse-power of the force of the Niagara falls, which is computed to be about 4,000,000,000 horse-power. Prizes were given by the LATCARF company to the authors of various projects.

Feb. 18, 1878, in the Times of 8 June, 1892, professor George Forbes, who was engaged in the undertaking, reported that the engineering works were nearly completed, and that the electric arrangements by which the vast force was to be transmitted, were begun.

NICE.

NICE or NICEA, a town in Bithynia, Asia Minor, N. W. Antigonus gave it the name Antigoni, which Lyonsiius changed to Nicea, the name of his wife. It became the residence of the kings of Bithynia about 208 B.C. At the battle of Nice, A.D. 164, the emperor Severus defeated his rival, Antoninus Pius, and was again defeated at Jesus, and soon after taken prisoner and put to death. The first general council was held here 19 June to 25 Aug. 325, which adopted the NICE CREED and condemned the Arians. It was attended by 331 bishops from divers parts, who settled both the doctrine of the Trinity and the times for observing Easter. An addition was made to the creed, 381; was rejected, 431. See Filioque. When the Crusaders took Constantinople, and established a Latin empire there in 1203, the Greek emperors removed to Nice and reigned there till 1261, when they returned to Constantinople; see Eastern Empire. Nice was taken by the Ottoman Turks in 1339.

NICE (S. E. France) was the seat of a colony from Massilia, now Marseilles, and formed part of the Roman empire. In the middle ages it was subject to Genoa, and suffered from the frequent wars, being taken and retaken by the imperialists and Franks. It was taken by the Austrians at Molas, 1800; seized and annexed to France 1762; restored to Sardinia in 1814. Nice was again annexed to France in virtue of the treaty of 24 March, 1860; the people having voted nearly unanimously for this change by universal suffrage. The French troops entered 1 April, and definite possession was taken 14 June following. Garibaldi, a native, was bitterly protested against this annexation. Population, 1901, 135,695; 1910 (est.), 137,685.

NIGHTINGALE FUND. On 21 Oct. 1851, during the Crimean war, Miss Florence Nightingale left England with a staff of thirty-seven nurses, and arrived at Scutari, 5 Nov. She rendered invaluable services to the army, and returned to London, 8 Sept. 1856. In honour of this a meeting was held at Willis's rooms on 29 Nov. 1855, to raise funds for the establishment of a hospital for the training of nurses and other hospital attendants. Madame Jenny Lind-Goldsechmidt sang at Exeter hall on 11 March, 1856, and gave the proceeds (1872½) to the fund. The subscriptions closed 24 April, 1857, amounting to 44,000 l. Queen Victoria gave Miss Nightingale a valuable jewel.

NIGRITIA, see Sudan.

NIHILISM, a popular name for the school of philosophy which believes nothing without physical evidence, renounces all forms of Divine revelation, and gives nothing in their place.

NIHILISTS, ultra-reformers in Russia, said to propose the destruction of all government, and to begin society afresh. They became known and spread in 1872, their alleged leader, Zamyatin, died, and the government began to suppress them, Sept. 1875. One of the leaders, Michael Bakoumin, died at Lugano, 1 July, 1876. For recent events, see Russia, 1877, et seq. The term Nihilist was invented by the Russian novelist Turgeniev, who died 3 Sept. 1883.

NIL DARPAR, see Indus, June, 1861.

NILE (Egypt). The longest river in Africa, formerly considered to have its rise in what was termed ’the mountains of the moon.' The travels of Bruce were undertaken to discover the source of the Nile. He set out from England in June, 1768; on the 14th of November, 1770, discovered the source of the Blue Nile in lake Tana, and returned home in 1773. The Nile overflows regularly every year, from about the 15th of June to the 17th of September, when, having given fertility to the land, it begins to decrease. The first Kilometer (a pillar) is said to have been set up by Osiris in 411, a king of the XII. dynasty, 2,300 B.C. One was set up by Solomon the Caliph, 718 A.D. In 1829, the inundations of the Nile rose to 26 inches. On the 25th of July 1829, the scene described and immense property lost. Mr. Petherick set out early in 1881 to explore the country at the source of the Nile. For other discoveries, see Africa 1867 seqq. A bridge over the Nile (above 130 feet) at Cairo, was completed by a French company, Aug. 1872.

NIMES. M. M. Stanley, in his book, ’Darkest Africa,' published June, 1877, expressed his opinion that the newly-discovered lake Albert Edward Nyanza, at the head of the Nile lake which is fed by the streams of the mighty Kivuvi range (possibly the mountains of the moon mentioned by Phlegon the geographer in the 2nd A.D.), is the real source of the Nile. The largest works of the Nile, consisting of two great dams or works for irrigation, and the conveyance of boys by means of locks, constructed under the direction of Mungo Bey, a Frenchman, 1851-52 were unsuccessful and eventually neglected.

NIMROD (Heb. Nemrod). The White Nile cleared of sand by major Peake, navigable from Khartoum to but Berkeley, end May, 1849. Survey of the Nile to determine its species of fish (engaged by Dr. John Anderson, died Aug. 1863), by the Egyptian government, assisted by the British museum, begun March, 1849; 2,700 miles sent to Natural History museum, 14 May 1852. The water stage at Cairo, 15 June, 1853. Barage completed at Assuan, 2, 3 Feb. 1854. Lady Conyngham lays the cap of stone. 22 Feb. 1854. The first locks, watergate, through the first 'fortress' to Wady Halfa, open Aug. 1854. The great dam, 80 yards wide, 16 ft. high, at Assuan formally opened by the khedive, the khedive formally ‘inaugurating' laying the last stone before the lake and distinguished company, company, Dec. 1854. The water stored behind the dam estimated by Sir William Gascoigne at over a thousand millions of cubic metres; annual cun to the country, 27,000,000, to the state, 17,240,000, and over 4,000,000, to be received for the sale of reclaimed lands. Sir Benjamin Bicker made able to show that the lands had cost the Egyptians about £500 a year, and the annual income of battle pieces; and the loss of the eagle-headed human figure, presumed to be a representation of the Assyrian god Ninhash (from Nisor, an eagle or hawk), whom Sargon of Akkad worshipped, when he was massacred by his two sons, about 715 B.C. 2 Kings 25. 35.

NIORIUM. Zittich barrage between Cairo and the sea, opened by the khedive, 7 March, 1903. New Nile bridges connecting Cairo with Gizeh named Atalus H. bridge, Mohamed Ali bridge and the El Malik Es Salih bridge, opened, 6 Feb. 1908.

NILE. BATTLE OF THE (or Abukir), 1 Aug. 1798, near Rossita, between the French fleet under Brueys, and the British under sir Horatio Nelson. Nine of the French line-of-battle ships were taken, two were burnt, and two escaped. The French ship, Fregate, with Brueys and 1000 men on board, blew up, and only 70 or 80 escaped. Nelson's explanation upon coming home was, 'Victory or Westminster Abbey.'

NIMEGGEN (Holland). Here was signed the treaty of peace between France and the United Provinces, 1678. The French were successful against the British under the duke of York, before Nimergen, 28 Oct. 1794; were defeated by them 3 Nov.; but gained the place 8 Nov. Population, 1890, 32,618; 1901 (est.), 48,447.

NIPIGUE. A military post on the Lake Ontario.
NIRVANA. 987 NOBILITY OF FRANCE.

columbia, 1801. It was pronounced to be identical with tantalum (or tantalium) by Wollaston; but was rediscovered by H. Rose in 1846, and named niobium.

NIRVANA. see Buddhism.

NISBET or NESBIT (Northumberland). Here a battle was fought between the English and Scotch armies, the latter greatly dis proportioned in strength to the former. Several thousands of the Scots were slain upon the field and in the pursuit, 7 May, 1402.

NISI PRIUS ("unless before"), words in a writ summoning a person to be tried at Westminster, unless the judges should come to hold their assizes in the place where he is. Judges sit in Middlesex by virtue of 18 Eliz. c. 12 (1576).

NISMES (Nimes), S. France, was the flourishing Roman colony, Nemausus. Its noble amphitheatre was injured by the English in 1417. The inhabitants embraced Protestantism, and suffered much persecution in consequence, and Nismes has therefore lost much of its religious and political contests. The treaty termed the Pacification of Nismes (14 July, 1629) gave religious toleration for a time to the Huguenots.

NITRE, see Sulphate.

NITRIC ACID, a compound of nitrogen and oxygen, formerly called aqua fortis, is said to have been first obtained in a separate state by Raymond Lully, an alchemist, about 1257; but we are indebted to Cavendish, Priestley, and Lavoisier for our present knowledge of its properties. H. Cavendish demonstrated the nature of this acid in 1785. Nitrous acid was discovered by Scheele about 1774. Nitrous gas was accidentally discovered by Dr. Hales, Nitrous oxide gas (laughing gas) was discovered by Dr. Priestley in 1776. The use of this gas as an anaesthetic, recommended by H. Davy in 1800, was begun in America (by Mr. Wells, a dentist), 1814; in Paris; 1866; in London, 31 March, 1868, ingenious apparatus having been invented for its application.

NITROGEN or AZOTE (from the Greek a, not, and zeo, I live), an irrepressible elementary gas, and an important element in food, discovered by Rutherford about 1772. Before 1777, Scheele separated the oxygen of the air from the nitrogen, and almost simultaneously with Lavoisier discovered that the atmosphere is a mixture of these two gases. Nitrogen combined with hydrogen forms the volatile alkali ammonia, so freely given off by decomposing animal and vegetable bodies. See Air, 1894. Prof. Hermann Hellriegel (born 1831) demonstrated in 1886 the power of leguminous plants to fix free nitrogen through the agency of microbes in their root nodules, and by the soil nitrogen is much enriched. Clover gives up to the soil that which wheat requires. He died 24 Sept. 1895.

NITRO-GLYCERINE (also called Nitro-leum), an intensely explosive amber-like fluid, discovered by Sobrero in 1847, is produced by adding glycine (in successive small quantities) to a mixture of one part of nitric acid and two parts of sulphuric acid. Alfred Nobel, a Swede, first attempted its application as an explosive agent in 1864. It has caused several most disastrous accidents, with great loss of life. In attempting to bury some nitro-glycerine in the town moat of Newcastle-on-Tyne, 17 Dec. 1867, an explosion took place, and seven persons lost their lives, including Mr. Mawson, the sheriff, and Mr. Bryceon, town surveyor; see Dynamite. Mr. Alfred Nobel's nitro-glycerine manufactory, near Stockholm, blown up; 15 persons killed, many injured, 10 June, 1888. An act prohibiting its importation for a time and regulating its transmission, was passed in 1869, and repealed by the Explosives act of 1875. Secret manufacture discovered, see Birmingham, 1883.

NIZAM, see Hyderabad.

NOBEL BEQUEST. Dr. Alfred Nobel, a Swede, died 1896 (see Nitro-Glycerine, Blasting Gélatine, and Dynamite), left a large sum of which the interest was to be awarded annually by a board of control at Stockholm in prizes for each of the three fields of Science, to those who in the previous year should have rendered the greatest service to mankind, in inventions or discoveries in physical sciences, chemistry, physiology or medicine, literary work, and the cause of international brotherhood, in the suppression or reduction of standing armies, or the founding of Peace congresses. Regulations for the competitive issue of each of the four Nobel prizes were drawn up by Alfred Nobel, were published in December, 1868, and 15,000 kronen divided between M. Henri Dunant (Swiss) and M. Frédéric Passy (French) 200,000 each to M. Sully Prudhomme, French poet, for literature; to Dr. Bichering, of Halle, for medicine; prof. van't Hoff of Berlin, for chemistry; and prof. Röntgen of Munich, for physics. The prize distribution is to take place at Stockholm, the crown prince and others present, 10 Dec. 1901. The Peace prize awarded to Mr. William Ramsell Cremer, M.P., for his work on behalf of international arbitration; the four Nobel prizes were given to prof. Henri Becquerel of Paris, divided with M. and Madame Curie also of Paris, for physics; to prof. Arheden of Turin, for chemistry; to prof. Finsen, of Copenhagen for medicine, and to M. Bjørnson of Bjørnson, of Christiania, for literature, 11 Dec. 1901. Nobel Institutes are in process of establishment to carry out scientific investigation on the lines of the above scheme of the founder.

The Nobel committee of the Society of Authors, formed for the purpose of selecting the best persons for candidates for the literature prize; first meeting held in London, Dr. Richard Garnett in the chair,sword Avelbury elected permanent chairman, 14 Jan. 1902 Peace prize awarded by the Norwegian storting to president Roosevelt .... 10 Dec. 1906 Nobel prize for literature (value 7,500 kroner) awarded to Mr. Robert Kipling, Dec. 1907 Nobel prize for chemistry (7,500 kroner) awarded to professor Rutherford, of Manchester university, 12 Dec. 1908.

NOBILITY. The Goths, after they had seized a part of Europe, rewarded their heroes with titles of honour, to distinguish them from the common people. The title of peerage seems to have been at first territorial. Patents for persons having no estate were first granted by Philip the Fair of France, 1095. George Neville, duke of Bedford (son of John, marquis of Montague), ennobled in 1470, was degraded from the peerage by parliament, on account of his utter want of property, 1 Edw. IV. 1478. Noblemen's privileges were restrained in June, 1773; see Lords, and the various orders of the nobility.

NOBILITY OF FRANCE preceded that of England. On 18 June, 1789, the National Assembly decreed that hereditary nobility could not exist in a free state; that the titles of dukes, counts, marquises, knights, barons, excellencies, abbots, and others be abolished; that all citizens take their family names; livories and armorial bearings also to be abolished. The records of the nobility, 100 volumes, were burnt at the foot of the statue of Louis XIV., 25 June, 1702. A new nobility was created by the emperor Napoleon I., 1808. The hereditary peerage was abolished 27 Dec., 1831; re-instituted by Napoleon III., 1852.

NORBE, an English gold coin (value 6s. 8d.), first struck in the reign of Edward III., 1343 or 1344, said to have derived its name from the excellence of the metal of which it was composed.

NOCTURNE, a name given by John Field (who died 1857) to a new and very pleasing musical composition. He was followed very successfully by Chopin, who died, 1849. The term was adopted by Mr. Whistler, the artist, for his night pieces, in which he began with line, form, and colour, 1877-8.

"NOLUMUS LEGES ANGLIE MUTARE," see Bestards, and Morton.

NOIMALISTS (or CONCEPTUALISTS), a scholastic sect, opposed to the Realists, maintain that general ideas have no existence outside our minds, and only exist by the names we give them. The founder of the sect, Jean Roscellin, a canon of Compiègne, was condemned by a council at Soissons, 1692, but the controversy was revived in 1540. Among the Nominalists were reckoned Abelard, St. Thomas Aquinas (partially), Occam, Hobbes, Locke, Berkeley, and Dugald Stewart. The Realists assert that general ideas are real things with positive existence.

NON-COMFORMISTS. The Protestants in England are divided into conformists and non-conformists; or, churchmen and dissenters. The first place of meeting of the latter, in England, was established at Wandsworth, near London, 20 Nov., 1817. The name of non-conformists was taken by the Puritans when the Act of Uniformity came into operation on 24 Aug., 1662 (termed "Black Bartholomew's day"), when 2000 ministers of the established religion resigned, not choosing to conform to the statute passed "for the uniformity of public prayers and administration of the sacraments," see Puritans, and Dissenters. The laws against them were relaxed by the Toleration act, 24 May, 1689. The Non-conformist newspaper (edited by Mr. Edward Miall, att. M.P., who died 29 April, 1861) first appeared 14 April, 1841. The non-conformists presented to Mr. Miall 15,000 guineas for his exertions on behalf of religious equality, 15 July, 1873. Meeting of bishops and dissenting ministers at Lambeth palace, to consider the alleged progress of religious thought, 21 July, 1876. Mansfield college, Oxford opened, 1829. Three large bodies in England, Congregationalists (or Independents), Baptists, Wesleyan Methodist, others of considerable importance, Presbyterians, Church of England, Unitarians, Quakers, Salvation Army, and 4 Wesleyan bodies, Primitive Methodists, Methodist New Connexion, Unitarian Methodists, Free Churches, and Bible Christians in 1886. Death of Dr. Alexander M. Litton, born 1825, great non-conformist preacher, 3 May, 1907.

NONEs, in the Roman calendar, were the fifth day of each month, excepting March, May, July, and October, when the natives fell on the seventh day.

NON-JURORS considered James II. to have been unjustly deposed, and refused to swear allegiance to William III. in 1689. Among them were Sancroft, archbishop of Canterbury, Ken, bishop of Bath and Wells, and the bishops of Ely, Gloucester, Norwich, and Peterborough, and many of the clergy, who were deprived 1 Feb., 1691. Non-jurors were subjected to double taxation, and obliged to register their estates, May, 1722. They formed a separate communion, which existed till the present century.

NON-NOSIS, DOMINE! ("Not unto us, O Lord!") see Psalm cxv. 1, a musical canon, sung as a grace at public feasts, was composed by W. Bird in 1618.

NON-RESISTANCE OATH (containing a declaration that it is unlawful to take arms against the king upon any pretence whatever), enforced by the Corporation act, 1661, was repealed in 1719.

NOOTKA SOUND (Vancouver's island), discovered by captain Cook in 1778, and settled by the British in 1786, when a few British merchants in the East Indies formed a settlement to supply the Chinese market with furs; but the Spaniards in 1789 captured two English vessels and took possession of the settlement. The British ministry demanded separation, and the affair was amicably terminated by a convention, and a free commerce was continued to England in 1790.

"NO-POPERY RIOTS," see Gordon. The cry was revived against the Catholic emancipation bill, 1829. The Anti-papacy association petitioned against the election of Mr. Alderman Kuild, R.C., as lord mayor of London, Oct., 1892.

NORDLINGEN (Bavaria). Here the Swedes under count Horn were defeated by the Austrians, 27 Aug., 1634; and the Austrians and allies by Turenne in 1645.

NORE MUTINY, see Mutinies.

NORFOlk ISLAND (Pacific Ocean), discovered in 1774, by captain Cook, who found it uninhabited, except by birds. The settlement was made by a detachment from Port Jackson under governor Phillip, in 1788, in Sydney bay, on the south side of the island. This was at one time the severest penal colony of Great Britain. The island was abandoned in 1809, but re-occupied as a penal settlement in 1825, penal settlement removed in 1855. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty was removed to it in June, 1856, from Pitcairn's Island (which see). Visited by Lord Hampden, transferred to New South Wales and endowed with a new constitution, 1868. Population, 1899, 909.

Excitement in the island and resignation of the "Council of Elders" as a protest against the absorption of the island into the Australian Commonwealth, reported... June, 1903.

NORICUM, see Austria.

NORMAL SCHOOLS (from norma, a rule). One for the instruction of teachers, established at Paris by a law, 30 Oct., 1794, opened 20 Jan., 1795, under the direction of La Place, La Harpe, Havy, and other eminent men, was soon closed. Another, established by Napoleon in 1808, was closed in 1822. The plan was revived in 1826, and has been developed in England and other countries. See Science and Art.

NORMANDY (N. France), part of Neustria, a kingdom founded by Clovis in 511 for his son Chlothar, which, after various changes, was united to France by Charles the Bold in 857. From the beginning of the 9th century it was continually NORTH ADMINISTRATION, formed by Lord North, Jan. 1770, who resigned March, 1782. (Lord North entered into a league with the Whigs, which led to the short-lived Coalition ministry, 1783. He succeeded to the earldom of Guildford in 1790, and died in 1792; see Coalition.)

Frederick, lord North, first lord of the treasury, and chancellor of the exchequer.
Earl Howe, lord president.
Earl of Halifax, privy seal.
Earl of Rochford, lord Weymouth (succeeded by Lord Sandwich) and earl of Hillsborough, secretaries of state.
Sir Edward Hawke, admiralty.
Marquis of Granby, orinance.
Sir Gilbert Elliot, lord Hertford, duke of Ancaster, lord Carteret, &c.

NORTHALLERTON (Yorkshire). Near here was fought the "battle of the Standard," where the English totally defeated the Scotch armies, 22 Aug. 1135. The archbishop of York brought forth a conscripted standard on a cartridge at the moment when they were hotly pressed by the invaders, headed by king David.

NORTH AMERICA, see America, United States, Indians, Canada, &c.

NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW began at Boston, U.S., in 1815, as a rival of the Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews. It was published at first every second month; in 1818, quarterly; in 1879, monthly, at New York.

NORTHAMPTON was burnt by the Danes in 1010. Here Henry III. proposed to found a university in 1260, and held a parliament in 1269. On 10 July, 1460, a conflict took place between the duke of York and Henry VI. of England, in which the king was defeated, and made prisoner (the second time) after a sanguinary fight which took place in the meadows below the town. Northampton was ravaged by the plague in 1637. It was seized and fortified by the parliamentary forces in 1642. A fire nearly destroyed the town, 3 Sept. 1675. Riots here because Mr. C. Bradlaugh was not elected M.P., 6 Oct. 1874, were suppressed by the military. Population, 1901, 87,021; 1909, 97,752.

Statue of Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, M.P. for Northampton 1880-91, unveiled 23 June, 1894.

NORTH BRITON, a newspaper, published 29 May, 1722-1733, supported by John Wilkes, M.P. for Aylesbury, and a London alderman, and very bitter against the Earl of Bute's administration, accusing him of undesirably favouring the Scotch. In No. 45 (termed "Wilkes's number"), the king was charged with uttering falsehood in his speech; published 23 April, 1735.

"General warrant" issued by lord Halifax against the authors, printers, and publishers 26 April, 1765. Wilkes and others arrested and committed to the Tower, and his house searched 30 April, brought by writ of habeas corpus before chief-justice Pratt, and discharged, his arrest being regarded as illegal. 6 May, good damages granted to a printer for false imprisonment 6 July. No. 45 declared to be "a scandalous and seditious libel" by parliament, and ordered to be burnt by the hangman. 15 Nov., riot at the burning in Cheapside. "General warrants" declared illegal by chief-justice Pratt; 1000l. damages awarded to Wilkes for seizure of his books 2 Dec. 400l. damages obtained by Wilkes in an action against lord Halifax 10 Nov. 1769. Wilkes elected lord mayor, 8 Oct.; elected fifth time M.P. for Middlesex, 9 Oct. 1774. Allowed to take his seat Jan. 1775. Elected chamberlain of London, 1779; died, 26 Nov. 1779.

NORTH BROOK CLUB. Originated in 1879 to promote comfort and social intercourse for young Indians of good families under education in England. New premises in Whitehall Gardens were inaugurated by the prince of Wales, 21 May, 1883. Lord Northbrook was an active promoter of the undertaking.

NORTH CAROLINA, NORTH GERMAN, see Carolina, German.

NORTH-EAST AND WEST PASSAGES. The attempt to discover a north-west passage was made by a Portuguese named Corte Real, about 1500. In 1585, a company was formed in London called the "Fellowship for the discovery of the North-West Passage." From 1743 to 1818 parliament offered 20,000l. for this discovery. In 1818 the reward was modified by proposing that 500l. should be paid when either 110°, 120°, or 130° W. long. should be passed; one of which points was made to sir E. Parry. For their labours in the voyages enumerated in the list below, Parry, Franklin, Ross, Back, Richardson, McClure, Nares, and McClintock were knighted.

The British government presents the Arctic to aid the expedition, under Commander William S. Schley, in search for the party under Lieutenant Gredley. Gredley, 25 persons (which started for the Polar sea in the summer of 1881), Feb. 1884; the sea is crossed, May 1884; good reward offered by U.S. government for discovery of Lieut. Gredley and party, May 1883.

Lient. Gredley's party reached Cape Sabine, Smith's Sound, Dec. 23, 1882; 24 N. lat., 17 persons started to die, 6 survivors found by Const. Schley with the Thetis, 22 June; arrive at St. John's, Newfoundland, 17 July; at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 1 August.

[The Arctic returned to the British government with thanks, Feb. 1885.]

Colonel Gilder's expedition starts from Winnipeg, 2 Oct., 1886; returns, 3 March, 1887.

Bjorling and Kalstennius, young Swedish naturalists, caught a whale party, having landed in the Ripple for Smith's Sound, 24 June, 1892; reached Disco Island, Greenland, insatiably equipped, 31 July; they crossed Baffin Bay, and arrived at Cape Paradey, Ellesmereland, in a small boat, 12 Oct.; not since heard of, reported Dec. 1893; traces of them found on Cape Island, reported, 10 Oct.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen starts from Christianshavn in the Fram for Arctic regions, 24 June, 1893; Dr. Nansen, Commander Johansen, left the Fram in charge of Capt. Seiödimp and Lieut. Scott-Hansen, 14 March, 1895; after having touched a point 4 degrees further north than any previous expedition, in their journey over the ice they reached 85° 14', lat., 8 April; and arrived at Francis-Joseph Land, 14 Aug., and there wintered: Dr. Nansen met Mr. Jackson there, 17 June, 1896; and they returned in the Windward to Vardø, 3 Aug.; arrival of the Fram at Skjaervoe, after reaching 85° 37', lat., great rejoicing, 20 Aug.; Dr. Nansen and his companions received by the king at Christiania, 2 Sept. arrival in London (which see), 3 Feb. 1897, Edinburgh, 12 Feb.; and other towns, Feb.; made B.Sc. at Cambridge, 16 March; Berlín, 25 March; Berlín, 31 March; received by the emperor, and granted medals, 3 April; received by the king at Copenhagen, 7 April.

The Argentine parliament grants sums of money to the members of the expedition.

March, 1897.

Lieutenant Peary starts from New York, with an expedition of two parties, 3 July, 1897; the expedition fails through lack of sled dogs. Peary relief expedition in the Falcon leaves St. John's, 7 July, 1894; returns there with the members of the expedition, including Peary, all well, 15 Sept.; Lieut. Peary, Mr. Hugh Lee, and Hanson, a servant, remain in Greenland to continue their explorations; Peary relief expedition leaves for the Pole, all returned in the Windward to Sydney, Cape Breton Island, 13 Sept.

Baron Toll's expedition left Cape Wukssee for Bennett Land, 13 July, 1897.

The Baldwin-Ziegler expedition left Dunvegan, 28 June, 1901; visited Rudolf Land, Nansen's hut, Greysund Island; returned with new charts, etc., to Norway, 31 July.

Lieut. Peary, undoubtedly by previous suffering, advanced to extremity of Greenland, 83° 50', spring, 1901; was stopped by ice opening; again he ascended from Cape Adolphus Land, and reached 82° 14', but had to fall back, spring, 1902; he started again, 1 April, 1902, with Henson and Norman Essken, and reached the Pole; all returned in the Windward to Sydney, Cape Breton Island, 9 Sept.

Capt. Seiödimp, in the Fram, was blocked in the ice about 79° N. near Cape Sabine, Aug. 1898; in Aug., 1902, parties explored the Cape Adolphus Land, through Jones Sound and Caribick Strait; explored new lands, with important scientific results, to 81° 37'; returned to Norway, 19 Sept. 1902; honours and medals bestowed.

(Charts of the latest discoveries are published in Petermann's "Mittheilungen der Geographie").

Scientists on the S.P. pole, having reached the Pole, under the patronage of, and subsidized by, the French Academy of Sciences, in process of organization by M. Jean Charcot, Jan. 1903.
Dr. Alfred Mikkelsen, the Danish explorer who, on board the ship,禤and the 35 men of his party, sailed for Spitzbergen 3 June 1907. Commander Mikkelsen, the Danish explorer who, on board the ship, will try to reach the Pole by air, has left Paris for Tromso. 16 June 1909 Commander Peary's message to the government of Newfoundland, saying that he had reached the Pole and saw the North Pole on the 8th April, received by wireless message from found-harbour Labrador. 6 Sept. Dr. Cook, who claimed that he had first reached the North Pole, sent his presentation of his discovery to Copenhagen, whose decision went against his claim. 20 Jan. 1910.

NORTH SEA or GERMAN OCEAN CANAL, a canal connecting the sea with the Baltic, opened by the king of Holland, 1 Nov. 1876. For the canal connecting the North sea with the Baltic, see Baltie, 1887-93, and Kiel.

NORTH SEA INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY. The proposal of the earl that the dispute between Great Britain and Russia arising out of the North Sea outrage (see England, 22 Oct., 1914, et seq.) should be submitted to an international commission of inquiry on the basis of the Hague convention, was accepted by the British government, 28 Oct. The members comprising the commission were: vice-adm. sir L. Beaumont (Gt. Britain), vice-adm. Dubssoff (Russia), rear-adm. Davis (United States), adm. von Spun (Austria-Hungary), adm. Fournier (France). The first meeting of the commission was held in Paris on 25 Feb. 1915. Fournier was elected president. Final sitting held 25 Feb., 1915, report of the commission read by adm. Fournier. The majority of the commissioners were unable to determine on what object the ships fired, but the commissioners unanimously recognised that the trowlers committed no hostile act, and the majority of the opinion that as there was no torpedo boat either among the trowlers or on the spot, the fire opened by adm. Rozhdetsvensky was not justifiable. The firing on the starboard side seemed to the majority of the commissioners to have lasted longer than appeared necessary. The commissioners recognised that there was at the close of the firing sufficient uncertainty as to the danger.
incurred by the ships to decide the admiral to proceed on his way; but the majority regret that he did not inform the authorities, when passing through the Straits of Dover, that the trawlers were not in close: In closing their report the commissioners declared that their appreciations formulated therein were not in their spirit of a nature to cast any discord either on the military value or the sentiments of humanity of admiral Rozhestvensky and of the personal of his squadron. Count Benckendorff, Russian ambassador, paid to Lord Byron, 18th May, 1873, the sum of 65,000, the amount of the indemnity due to the Hull fishermen, assessed by adm. sir Cyprian Bridge and Mr. Butler Aspinall, appointed by the Board of Trade to inquire into the matter of compensation. The amount claimed by the fishermen was 103,850.

NOTABLES, French assemblies of nobles, bishops, knights, and lawyers. An assembly of the notables was convoked by the duke of Guise, 20 Aug., 1560, and by other statesmen. Calonne, the minister of Louis XVI., summoned one which met on 22 Feb., 1787, on account of the denounced state of the king's finances, and again in 1788, when he opened his plan; but as any reform militated too much against private interest to be adopted, Calonne was dismissed, and soon after retired to England. Louis having lost his confidential minister, De Vergennes, by death, called De Brienne, an ecclesiastic, to his council. The notables were re-assembled on 6 Nov., 1788. In the end, the states-general were convoked 5 Dec.; and from this assembly sprang the national assembly (which see). The notables were dismissed by the king, 12 Dec., 1788. The Spanish notables assembled and met Napoleon (conformably with a decree issued by him commanding their attendance), at Bayonne, 25 May, 1808.

NURSES.

NUMISMATICS, the science of coins and medals, an important adjunct to the study of history. In this country Evelyn (1697), Addison (1726), and Lockertor (1780), published works on this subject. Mercier's "Recueil des Médailles," 9 vols. (1762). Roding's "Annuals" is the great work on British coinage (new edition, 1830).—The Numismatic Society in London was founded by Dr. John Lee in 1830. It publishes the "Numismatic Chronicle."—Mr. Yonge Akerman's "Numismatic Manual" (1830) is a useful introduction to the science. Foreign works are numerous.

NUNCIO, an envoy from the pope of Rome to Catholic states. The pope deputed a nun to the Irish rebels in 1645. The arrival in London of a nun, and his admission to an audience by James II., July, 1687, is stated to have hastened the Revolution.

UNNERY. The first founded is said to have been that to which the sister of St. Anthony retired after the close of the 3rd century. The first founded in France, near Poitiers, is St. Sixtus, and the nuns are addressed to St. Martin, 360,—In France. The first in England was at Folkestone, in Kent, by Eadbad, king of Kent, 630,—In England. The nunns were expelled from their convents in Germany, in July, 1785; in France, in Jan. 1790. In Feb. 1801, monastic establishments were abolished in Naples, compensation being made to the inmates. Owing to the French anti-congregation law many French nuns settled in England, 1802 et seq. For memorable instances of the fortitude of nuns, see Acre, and Coldingham.

NUREMBERG, a free imperial German city in 1219. In 1522, the diet here demanded ecclesiastical reforms and a general council, and in 1532 secured religious liberty to the Protestants. It was annexed to Bavaria in 1805. Albert Dürer was born here in 1471. Population, 1896, 261,022; 1899, 287,124.

NURSES, their qualifications were greatly raised during the 19th century by the influence of Florence Nightingale and the viscountess Strangford. Nightingale died 24 March, 1899, and rendered eminent services to the sick and wounded in the Russo-Turkish wars. Institution of Nursing Sisters founded 1849, and many others since. See Nightingale Fund and John, St.

Mr. (afterwards sir) Henry C. Burdett in Oct. 1857, proposed a scheme for the establishment of the National Pension Fund Royal 1859, for nurses and hospital officials. In Jan., 1865, Misses Gibbs, Hamble, J. S. Morgan and Rothschild presented 26,000l. towards its foundation; incorporated Feb. 1868; 27 Oct. 1875; 5,000l. raised by subscription, presented 1 Jan., 1897. Total invested funds, over 527,000l. reported 17 March, 1898. Certificates of membership of the fund presented by the Winchester sisters at Marlborough House, 4 July, 1899, to about 650 nurses, who represented the first 1,000 investors in the fund; again to 1,200 nurses, 21 July, 1899.

The family of the late Janus S. Morgan presented 7,710l. 15s. 3d. to the fund named after him, 15 Dec., 1899. Total amount of the fund, 17,000l. 1895. The Women's Jubilee Offering was devoted to the benefit of nurses and nursing institutions for the sick poor by direction of queen Victoria 1877; 5,000l. presented by Mr. (att. sir) Henry Tate, Feb. 1896 (died 1899); total, 115,222l. 2s. 7d. subscribed in 1897. (See also from lady Tate, 24, 1890.) Secured about 40 of queen Victoria's Jubilee nurses received by queen Victoria at Windsor, 2 July, 1896; 370 received by queen Alexandra, London, 3 July, 1902.
British Nurses' Association, founded 1887, Royal 1891; charter, 1895; princess Christian, president; the duchess of Connaught vice-president, 1899. Annual meetings. Club room and offices, 10, Orchard-street, W. Membership 1910, about 5,000.

n.c. One was removed to Alexandria by Augustus, about 23 B.C. After being long imbedded in the shore, it was brought to Great Britain by Sir Ralph Abercromby, in 1814; but not removed. It was offered to the British government by Mehemet Ali, and again by the Khedive, 13 March, 1877.

Mr. James Erasmus Wilson (Ekt. Nov. 1853) having offered to pay all expenses, Mr. John Dixon, the engineer, undertook to convey it to England. The vessel, Cleopatra, containing it sailed with the Ogyg 25 Sept. 1854. During a violent gale, the vessel separated, 14-15 Oct.; six lives were lost in a fruitless attempt to recover it. The Cleopatra, which was abandoned, was found by the Fitzwilliam (Capt. Carter), and towed and later removed to the Anglia, and arrived in London, 20 Jan. 1878.

The salvage was awarded 2,000l. 6 April, 1878.

After much discussion, the Thames embankment (between Charing cross and Waterloo bridges) was selected for its site; where, by much engineering skill, it was placed, 12 Sept. 1878.

The obelisk weighs 36 tons, 7 cwt., 2 stones, 11 lb. Height, from base to point, 66 feet 51 inches.

Sir James Erasmus Wilson died 8 Aug. 1884.

In London are three English obelisks: first in Fleet-street, at the top of Bridge-street, erected to John Wilkes, lord mayor of London in 1775 (see North Bixley); and lastly and most recently to it, at the south end of Farringdon-street, stands another of granite to the memory of Robert Waithman, lord mayor in 1824, erected 23 June, 1833; the third, which stood at the south end of the Blackfriars-road, marked the distance of one mile and a fraction from Fleet-street. Taken down and re-erected in St. George's-road, at the side of Bethlem hospital, 1897.

OCTOBER, the eighth month in the year of Romeus, as its name imports, and the tenth in the year of Numa, 713 B.C. October still retained its first name, although the senate ordered it to be called Faustinus, in honour of Faustina, wife of Antoninus the emperor; Commodus called it Invictus, and Dominatus. October was sacred to Mars.

OCTOBER CLUB. A party of country gentlemen in the house of commons, about 1710, which professed high curch principles, and favoured Belinghore and the Jacobite cause.
OCTROIS (from the low Latin auctorium, authority), a term applied to concessions from sovereigns to the tax-harvest at the gates of towns in France on articles of food before entering the city. These octrois, of ancient origin, were suppressed in 1791; re-established, 1797, and re-organised in 1810, 1812, and 1852. The Belgian government became very popular in July, 1860, by abolishing the Octrois. The Coal and Wine duties of London were of this nature.

ODDFELLOWS, Unity of, the name of a large friendly society, originally a confraternisation character, which took its present name in 1812. ODES are very ancient; amongst the Greeks they were extempore compositions sung in honour of the gods. Anacreon's odes were composed about 525; Pindar's, 478 to 439; and Horace's from 24 to 18 B.C. All these ancient odes were divided into strophe, antistrophe, and epode; see Poets Laureate.

ODESSA, a port on the Black Sea, built by the empress Catharine of Russia, 1784-1792, after the peace of Jassy. In 1817 it was made a free port, since when its prosperity has rapidly increased. It was partially bombarded by the British, 21 April, 1854, in consequence of the Russian batteries having fired on a flag of truce, 6 April. On 12 May the English frigate Tigre stranded here, and was destroyed by Russian artillery. The captain, Giffard, and many of his crew were killed, and the rest made prisoners. Population, 1897, 403,051. 1899, 445,116. Great petroleum fire.

ODOMETER (from the Greek hodos, way, and metron, measure; see Distance.

ODONTOLOGY (from the Greek odontes, teeth). the science of the teeth, may be said to have really begun with the researches of professor Richard Owen, who in 1834 made the first definite announcement of the organic connection between the vascular and vital soft parts of the frame and the hard substance of a tooth. The Odontological Society was established 1836.

ODRYS, a people of Thrace. Their king Tero retained his independence of the Persians, 358 B.C. Stadles, his son, enlarged his dominions, and in 348, aided Amyntas against Pericles II., of Macedon, with an army of 14,000 men. Stadles, killed in battle with the Triballi, 424, was succeeded by Seuthes, who reigned prosperously: Cotys, another king (382-353), disputed the possession of the Thracian Chersonesus with Athens. After 9 or 10 years' warfare, Philip II. of Macedon reduced the Odrys to tributaries, and founded Philippopolis and other colonies, 344. The Romans, after the defeat of Alexander, took up the cause of the Odrys, and in 42 their king Sodates levelled his territories to the Romans. The Odrys, turbulent subjects, and often chastised, were finally incorporated into the empire by Vespasian, about A.D. 70.

ODYL, the name given in 1845 by baron von Reichenbach to a so-called new "inflammable, or influence," said to be developed by magnetism, meteors, the human body, heat, electricity, chemical action, and the whole material universe. The odyllic force is said to give rise to luminous phenomena, visible to certain sensitive persons only. The baron's "Researches on Magnetism, &c., in relation to the Vital Force," translated by Dr. Gregory, were published in 1850. Baron Dredenborg (died 1772) described similar phenomena.

OHM'S LAW, for determining the quantity of the electro-motive force of the voltaic battery, was published in 1827. It is in conformity with the discovery that the earth may be employed as a conductor, thus saving the return wire in electric telegraphy.

OIL, was used for burning in lamps as early as the epoch of Abraham, about 1921 B.C. It was the custom of the Jews to anoint with oil persons appointed to high offices, as the priests and kings, Isaiah xxxiii. 2. 1 Sam. x. 17, xvi. 13. The fact that oil, if passed through red-hot iron pipes, will be resolved into a combustible gas, was long known to chemists; and after the process of lighting by coal-gas was made apparent, Messrs. Taylor and Martinac contrived apparatus for producing oil-gas on a large scale, 1815. Oil springs; see Petroleum. Oil, Freesia; see under Fumitory.

OLD AGE PENSIOMS.

Royal commission appointed by the Australian government to inquire into the subject of old age pensions recommends that a federal pension, estimated to cost £1,000,000 per annum, should be paid to retired persons as the age of 70, not as a charity, but as a right; the yearly income of a pensioner from all sources not to exceed £24 a year. Newfoundlalnd legislature unanimously adopt a resolution in favour of old age pensions, mid April, 1906.

The old age pension act, 1906, provided that every man or woman, having attained the age of 70, and being a British subject with residence in the United Kingdom for 20 years, with income not exceeding £21. 15. 0., should be entitled to receive a pension varying in amount from 16. 16. per week, according to his or her means. There are certain statutory disqualifications, including the receipt of poor relief. The act came into operation 1 Jan. 1909.

The total number of claims received in the United Kingdom for the period from 1 Oct. 1902 to 31 March, 1903, was 257,831, and of these, 33,610 were subjected to a test examination: Buffet issued.

OLD BAILEY SESSIONS COURT.

held for the trial of criminals, and its jurisdiction comprehends the county of Middlesex as well as the city of London. It is held monthly by the royal commission of oyer and terminer.

The judges are, the lord mayor, those aldermen who have passed the chair, the recorder and the common-serjeant, who are attended by both the sheriffs, and one or more of the national judges.

The court-house, adjoining Newgate prison, was built in 1773, and enlarged in 1809; the lord mayor being the first stone of the new session house here, 20 Dec. 1902; see "Central Criminal Court."

During some trials in the old court, the lord mayor, one alderman, two judges, the greater part of the jury, and numbers of spectators, caught the small distemper. See the news, May, 1756.

This disease was fatal to several.

OLD BELIEVERS. 1004

OLD BELIEVERS. A Russian sect, said to number about 1,200,000, originated in a revolt against the credulities of the eighteenth century, whom they named Anti-Christ. They profess to adhere to the old reading of the Slavonian sacred books, which have been superseded by the present Russian church. The czar Alexander II. granted liberty of worship to the sect in 1870.

OLD CATHOLICS, the name assumed in Germany by the members of the Roman Catholic church opposed to the dogma of papal infallibility, headed by professor Dollinger of Munich (see Council, 18 July, 1870). After three days’ conference at Munich, Sept. 7, 1871, they decided to set up independent worship, first meeting in a church given them by the town council of Munich. The abbé Michaud began a similar movement in Paris in Feb. 1872. Dr. Dollinger preached in favour of union with the church of England, March, 1872. Père Hyacinthe (Charles Levesque) of the party at Munich, issued a programme, respecting the Vatican decrees, recognising ecclesiastical authorities, demanding reform, yet opposing schism, about May, 1872. The bishops of Lincoln (Wordsworth) and Ely (Browne) and the dean of Westminister (Dr. Stanley), by invitation, attended the conference at Cologne, and delivered addresses on Sept. 22, 1872. The Old Catholics elected their first bishop, Dr. Joseph Reinstein, Jan. 1873, who was recognised by the emperor and other powers.

Congress of old Catholics held at Constance, 18 Sept. 1873, at Freiburg. First synod held in Germany at Bonn, opened 27 May, 1874. Dr. Dollinger received delegates from eastern and western church at Bonn, with a view to union with the old Catholics; much result was not expected.

First old Catholic church in Berlin opened 30 Nov., 1874. In Prussia about 25,000 old Catholics (about 5,000 in Bonn). Congress at Bonn: bishop of Winchester, canon Liddon, and several oriental clergy present, 12 Aug., agreement respecting the eucharistic clause 16 Aug.

Circular put forth by the Old Catholics at Bonn asking for a church for their worship; (they declare opposition to the Vatican decrees of 18 July, 1872; they do not sect from the Catholic church, but desire Catholicism free from debasing doctrines, repudiate infallibility and supremacy of the pope; sanction reading of the Bible, and divine worship in the vulgar tongue; and marriage of priests). Dec. Congress at Bonn: strong opposition to celibacy of clergy; question discussed, early in June, 1876. Congress at Montreux, 23 Sept. 1877. Meeting at Berne: bishop Cotterill of Edinburgh and M. Hyacinthe Lion there, 17 Aug. 1877, at Geneva, 18 May 1878; at Baden-Baden 12 Sept. 1878; at Vienna, 8 Sept. 1878. Visits of the bishops of Liegbach (W. D. Maclean) and of Abbe Sercoux, in the church at Bonn, &c., in Switzerland, and at Vienna, Oct. 1877; international congress at Cologne, 12 Sept. 1879; at Leogren, 12 Sept. 1879; at Rotterdam, Aug. 12, 1879; at Vienna, 1 Sept. 1879; at Bonn, 22 Sept. 1879.

The doctrines of the Old Catholics closely resemble those of the church of England.

The progress of the Old Catholic church opposed to the papacy, reported. Feb. 1873. Dr. Dollinger’s ninetieth birthday celebrated at Munich, 23 Feb. 1833; he died 15 Jan. 1879. Dr. Weber, of Brunswick, consecrated bishop on succession of Dr. Reinstein, who died, Jan. 1876.

OLDENBURG, a grand duchy in North Germany, was annexed to Denmark in 1443; in 1773, Christian VII. ceded the country to Russia in exchange for Holstein Gottorp, and soon after the present dignity was established. The dukes joined the North German confederation, 18 Aug. 1866, and obtained a slight increase of territory from Holstein, 27 Sept. following. The grand duchy comprises Oldenburg proper, the principality of Lübeck, and that of Hirschfeld. Population in 1900, 398,300; 1919, 439,330.

GRAND-DUKES.

1833. Feb. 27. Peter, son; born 8 July, 1827; died, 13 June, 1855.

OLDHAM. Lancashire, a village in 1760, was incorporated in 1849, and has sent two members to parliament since 1852, when William Cobbett was elected one of the members, and has extensive cotton manufactories. The hand-some town-hall was built in 1841, and enlarged in 1879. Alexander park was opened in 1865. Population, 1901, 132,832; 1909 (est.), 143,301.

OLEFIANT GAS, a combination of hydrogen and carbon, which burns with much brilliancy. In 1862, Biberiethor formed it artificially by means of alcohol.

OLEOMETER, an instrument for determining the density of fixed oils at a standard temperature of 50° Fahr. The oleometers most in use are those of Gobey, Lefebre, Fisher and Brix. This instrument is also called the Elsiometer.

OLERON, see Navigation Laws.

OLIBANUM, a kind of gum obtained from various species of Boswellia found growing on the limestone rocks of Somaliland and in Southern Arabia. It is identical with the thur of the Romans, and largely used as incense, and a considerable trade in this product is carried on at Aden. Large quantities of olibanum are used in India.

OLIVES are named in the earliest accounts of Egypt and Greece. They were first planted in Italy about 522 B.C. The olive has been cultivated in England since 1448 A.D.; the Cape olive since 1730. From the olive is obtained oleic acid, a colourless, oily fluid, and in its combined forms is used in medicine, and in soap manufacture.

MOUNT OF OLIVES, also named Mount Olivet, a ridge of rocks situated east of Jerusalem, from which it is separated by the valley of Jehoshaphat. Here Titus encamped when he besieged Jerusalem 70 A.D. The Mount is chiefly associated with the life of our Lord; here, according to tradition, the angels appeared after the resurrection; Christ taught His disciples the Lord’s prayer; and here He went over Jerusalem. On the summit of the central peak is the Church of the Ascension, the site of an earlier church erected by St. Helena.

OLMÜTZ, the ancient capital of Moravia. Here the emperor Ferdinand I., on behalf of his nephew, Franscis Joseph, 2 Dec. 1838, and here the latter promulgated a new constitution, 4 March. 1849. A conference was held here, 29 Nov.
Olympiads, the era of the Greeks, from 1 July, 776 B.C., the year in which Coroebus was successful at the Olympic games. This era was reckoned by periods of four years, each period being called an Olympiad, and in marking a date the year and Olympiad were both mentioned. The computation of Olympiads ceased with the 305th, A.D. 440.

Olympic Games, so famous among the Greeks, traditionally said to have been instituted in honour of Jupiter by the Ilioi Paothi, 1453 B.C., or by Pelops, 1307 B.C., revived by Iphitus, 884 B.C., were held at intervals of four years, on the banks of the Alpheus, near Olympia, in the Peloponnesus, now the Morca, to exercise the youth in five kinds of contests; the conquerors being highly honoured. The prize contemplated for was a crown made of a kind of wild olive, appropriated to this use. The festival was abolished by Theodosius, A.D. 394. In 1858 M. Zappa, a wealthy Peloponnesian, gave funds to re-establish the games, under the auspices of the queen of Greece.

The revival of the games every four years at some European capital was decided on at an international congress at Paris in 1894. First to be at Athens in 1896, second at Paris in 1900. Preliminary contests to select champions held in the ancient stadium, capable of seating 50,000 persons, were held by M. Averoff of Alexandria (died 27 July, 1899, 6,000 lire), the king and family present (290 foreign athletes to compete). 21, 22 March, 1896. The statue of M. Averoff unveiled by the crown prince on 3 April.

The 75th anniversary of Greek independence, and inauguration of the Olympic games (ancient and modern) by the king and royal family, addresses by the crown prince, etc. 28 April, from Marathon won by Louis, a Greek peasant, 75,000 spectators, 10 April; end of the games, prizes distributed; Pindaric ode by Mr. G. S. Robertson, revised, several addresses presented, 15 April.

Close of the Olympic games held in Athens; prizes, consisting of branches of the classic wild olive, distributed to the successful competitors. King George of Greece: 75 prizes won by Americans, 30 by British, 28 by Greeks, 28 by Swedish athletes. The Marathon race, the chief event, 42 kilometres (about 26 miles), won by William Sherring, of the Irish athletic club, Hamilton, Canada. Sherring covered the distance in 2 hours 5 min.; he received a gold medal and a marble statue of Athens. 2 May, 1906 Olympic games open in the presence of King Edward VII, at the Stadium in the French-British exhibition. 13 July; the marathon race won by the U.S. champion Hayes (2h 59m 18s.), the Italian, Dorando (2h 54m 58s.), being disqualified on the ground that he revived help, 24 July; crown presented Dorando with a silver cup.

Olympium (near Peloponnesus), the great temple of Jupiter, erected by Libanias, about 450 B.C., at the charge of the Eleans, after their conquest of the country. For this temple Phidias made the colossal statue of the god, in gold and ivory, 437-433 B.C.

The German explorations by Messrs. Hirschfeld and Botticher, planned by prof. Ernst Curtius, the historian, began 5 Sept., 1852. Two other cities were found. Above 900 objects in marble, many coins, bronzes, inscriptions, &c., found, 1858. Exploration closed, Nov. 1859.

Olymthus. a city, N. Greece. To re-establish the predominance of Sparta, it formed a league with other cities, which was subdued in war. 382-379 B.C.
OMAHA, the principal city of Nebraska, situated on the river Missouri, which is spanned by a bridge 2,560 ft. in length. Founded in 1854, the city has rapidly developed, and is now (1903) one of the most prosperous of the cities of the Eastern States. Omaha contains many handsome public buildings and churches. Manufacturers and industries of various kinds are carried on, the most important being its large silver-smelting works, said to be the largest in the world, and its pork-packing business, third only in importance to that of Chicago. A large trade in grain is also carried on. Population 1860, 140,152; 1880, 154,097.

OMAN, an independent Mahometan state, S.E. Arabia, ruled by a sultan. Population, 1,500,000 (about); capital Muscat, which see.

OMENS, see Atrury. Alexander the Great and Mithridates the Great are said to have studied omens. At the birth of the latter, 131 B.C., there were seen for seventy days together, two splendid comets; and this omen, we are told, directed all the actions of Mithridates throughout his life.—Justin.

OMER, ST., N. E. France. At this town in 1392, the eminent Jesuit, father Parsons, founded a seminary for the education of English and Irish Roman Catholics, in which there were 50 pupils in 1534. The Seminary was suppressed in 1762, and the masters and pupils migrated successively to Bruges, Liége, and in 1791 to England, by invitation. The seminary of St. Omer was much referred to during the trials connected with Oates's plot in 1678. See Stonyhurst.

OMLADINA, an Austrian political society composed of Slav students, journalists, and working men; about 800 members, divided into groups, with officers, was formed at Vienna in 1890, to promote the federation of the empire, with equal rights for all classes. See Austria, 1894.

OMMIADES, a dynasty of Mahometan caliphs, beginning with Moawiyah, of whom fourteen reigned in Arabia, 661-750; and eighteen at Cordova, in Spain, 753-1031. Their favourite colour was green.

OMNIBUS (from omnibus, Latin "for all"). The idea of such conveyances is ascribed to Pascal, about 1642, when similar carriages were started, but soon discontinued. They were revived in Paris about 11 April, 1828, and introduced into London by a coach-proprietor named Shillibeer. The first omnibuses started from Paddington to the Bank of England on Saturday, 4 July, 1829. Regulations were made respecting omnibuses by 10 & 17 Vict. c. 33 (1853). See Omnibuses and Hackney Coaches. The London Omnibus Company was established in Jan., 1839, registered 16 Nov. 1838. The 24 omnibuses ran in 1839-40. The London Road Car Company registered 1 Jan., 1837. Strike of the men employed by the General Omnibus and Road Car Companies, claiming a twelve hours day, 5 June; closed by concessions, 13 June, 1847. First accident in omnibuses started by Messrs. Ellis, from Fenchurch to Oxford Circus in 1844; many others since. Accident to a motor omnibus while descending Hampstead hill, through the brakes failing, 19 July; 47 persons killed, 54 injured. 1 July, 1846, 2,155 horse omnibuses and 11,133 motor licensed in 1903.

OMNIMETER, a surveying apparatus (combining the theodolite and level, and comprising a telescope and microscope), invented by Eckhold, a German engineer, to supersede chain measuring; announced Sept. 1869.

ONE-POUND NOTES issued by the Bank of England, 4 March, 1797, withdrawn for England, 1823; re-issued for a short time, 16 Dec. 1825. Mr. Goschen's proposal in 1842 to issue one pound notes to increase the reserve of gold at the Bank of England was much discussed, and at a meeting of the London chamber of commerce the consideration of the question was deferred (15 to 14), 21 Jan. 1892.

ONEIDA, collision with the Bombay; see United States, 1870.

ONTARIO, formerly Canada West, or Upper Canada; federal capital, Ottawa (pop. 65,802); capital of province, Toronto, population 228,708. OPERA-HOUSE. THE ITALIAN, or QUEEN'S, or (since 1901) HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE. The original buildings were generally supposed to have been constructed by sir John Vanburgh, though Mr. Pennant attributes it to sir Christopher Wren. It was built as the "queen's (afterwards dedicated to king's) theatre," opened 8 April, 1770; and burnt down 7 June, 1780. The foundation of the new theatre was laid 3 July, 1790; and the house was opened 22 Sept., 1791, on an improved plan; a new exterior was erected in 1820, from designs by Mr. Nash; altered by Mr. Budd, 1851. This theatre was totally destroyed by fire on the night of 6—7 Dec., 1857. The loss of the lessee, Mr. Mapleson, was about 12,000l., and that of Melle. Titens was valued at 2000l.; rebuilt, but internal arrangements not completed. Moody and Stamp's opera meetings were held here, 12—23 May, 1875. The new house was opened for

OPHTHALMOSCOPE, an apparatus for inspecting the interior of the eye, invented by Professor H. Helmholz, in 1851.

OPUM, the juice of the white poppy, was known to the ancients, its cultivation being mentioned by Herodotus, and its medicinal use by Hippoocrates. It is largely cultivated in British India, and was introduced into China by our merchants, which led eventually to the war of 1839, the importation being forbidden by the Chinese government. The revenue derived from opium by the Indian government in 1882 was about 7,850,000l.; in 1875, 8,000,000l.; in 1898, about 10,000,000l. of Loudoum, a preparation of opium; was employed early in the 17th century. A number of alkaloids have been discovered in opium: naronitine by De Roence, and morphia by Sertürner, in 1803.

The Chinese government derives a large revenue from the duty on imported opium which was fixed by the treaty of 1858. The plant is now largely grown in China.

Sir Joseph Pease's resolution condemning the cultivation of opium in India, the traffic in the drug, and the revenue, was adopted by the house of commons (180-130), 10 April, 1854; this caused much excitement in India.

Mr. Webb's resolution for appointing a royal commission against the opium revenue was negatived by the commons (184-105), 30 June, 1854.

Royal commission appointed, July: president, lord

OPTIMISM (from optima, the best), the doctrine that everything which happens is for the best, in opposition to Pessimism (from pessimus, the worst). The germ of optimism is to be found in Plato, and in St. Augustin, and other fathers; and has been especially propagated by Malebranche and Leibnitz, and adopted by Pope, Bolingbrooke, Rousseau, and the optimistic authors, others. Origin of the term, "the best of all possible worlds," is ridiculed by Voltaire (1674-1778) in his "Candide." See Pessimism.

"OPTION," a term given at the time to the permission given to the inhabitants of Alase and Lorraine by the German government, before 30 Sept., 1872, whether they would quit their country or become German subjects. Great numbers emigrated into the French territories. The "option" of archbishops respecting their claims on a benefice becoming void on the creation or translation of a bishop, was abolished in 1847. A Stock Exchange term, meaning the liberty to sell or buy stock in a time bargain at a stated price.

ORACLES, a term applied to revelations made by God to man. They were given to the Jews at the Mercy-seat in the tabernacle; see Ezek. xxv. 18-22. The word, "oracle," is from the Latin root "oraclum," "oracles," Rom. iii. 21; 1 Pet. iv. 11. King Ahaziah sent to consult the oracle of Baalzabel at Ekron about 890 B.C. The Greeks consulted especially the oracles of Jupiter and Apollo (see Dodona and Delphi); and the Italians those of Faunus, Fortune, and Mars.

ORANGEMEN. The "Battle of the Diamond," 21 Sept. 1795 (see Diamond), and the treachery experienced by the Protestants on that occasion, convinced them they would become an easy prey to the Roman Catholics, from their small numbers, unless they associated for their defence, and consequently the Orange Society was formed in 1795. The first Orange lodge was formed in Armagh; but the name of Orangemen already existed. An Orange society was formed in Dublin; the members published a declaration of the principles (the maintenance of church and state under the house of Brunswick) in Jan. 1789. After 1813 Orangeism declined; but revived again in 1827, when the duke of Cumberland became grand-master; and it is stated that in 1836 there were 145,000 Orangemen in England, and 125,000 in Ireland. After a partial suspension of the Orange clubs were broken up in conformity with resolutions of the house of commons; but were revived in 1845-1889. In Oct. 1857, the lord chancellor of Ireland ordered that justices of the peace should not belong to Orange clubs. The Orangemen in Canada were greatly excited during the visit of the prince of Wales in 1866. Mr. W. Johnston, a grand-master, convicted of violating the Party Proclamations act, was elected M.P. for Belfast, Nov. 1869. See Belfast. The Orangemen vigorously oppose the home rule movement, see Ulster, 1892-3.

ORANGES. The sweet, or China orange, was first brought into Europe from China by the Portuguese, in 1547; and it is asserted that the identical tree, whence all the European orange-trees of this sort were produced, is still preserved at Lisbon, in the gardens of one of its nobility. Orange-trees were first brought to England, and planted, with little success, in 1595; they are said to have been planted at Beddington park, near Croydon, Surrey. The duty on imported oranges was repealed in 1860.

ORATORIEN. An eccentric English gentleman of some talents, in 1866, opened his "oratory," a kind of church, in New-market, London; where he gave lectures on theological topics on Sundays, and on other subjects on Wednesdays, every week. Novelty procured him many hearers; but he was too imprudent to gain any permanent advantage. He removed his oratory to Clare-market, and sunk into obscurity previously to his death, in 1756.

ORATORIANS (from the Latin oratio, to pray), a regular order of priests established by St. Philip Neri, about 1540, and so called from the oratory of St. Jerome, at Rome, where they prayed. They had the habit of the Franciscans, and were founded by Guillaume Gibouleau, and Pierre de Berulle (afterwards cardinal), 1612, approved by pope Paul V. 1613.—The rev. Frederick Faber and others, as "Fathers of the Oratory," established themselves first in King William-street, Strand, London, in 1838, and afterwards at Brompton.

Death of the rev. Chas. H. Bowden, one of the founders of the Oratory, aged 69, 2 May, 1856.

ORATORIO, a sacred musical composition, the subject of it being generally taken from the Scriptures. The origin of our oratorios (so named from having been first performed in an oratory) is ascribed to Italian music. The first true oratorio, Emilio del Cavaliere's "Rappresentazione," was performed at Rome in 1606. He was followed by Giovanni Carissimi, Alessandro Scarlatti, &c. Bach's "Passion Music," the "St. Matthew," was produced at Leipzig on Good Friday, 1730, see Passion-Week. Handel composed 17 English oratorios; his first, "Esther," was performed at the Haymarket Theatre, March 21, 1730; "Israel in Egypt" was produced in 1738, and the "Messiah" in 1741; Haydn's "Creation" in 1798; Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," 1803; Spohr's "Last Judgment" (properly "Last Things"), 1825; Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," in 1840, and "Elijah" in 1846; Costa's "Elia," 1863; "Nathan," 1865; "Samson," 1867; "Macfarren's "John the Baptist," 1875; Sullivan's "Prodigal Son," 1866; "Light of the World," 1873; "Martyr of Antioch," 1880. &c. Latterly the name has been modified, e.g., Dramatic Oratorio, such as Mackenzie's "Rose of Sharon," "Hubert Parry's "Judith," "Job," "King Saul," &c. Sacred Triology, such as Gounod's "Redemption," Berlioz's "Childhood of Christ," Elgar's "The Apostles," Pops. I. and II., 1903; or, again, as a form of Dramatic Cantata, as Schumann's "Paradise and the Peri," Sullivan's "Golden Legend," Mackenzie's "Dream of Jubal.

ORCHIDS, a natural order of plants of a very peculiar organization, recently much cultivated. In 1880 a great establishment for their cultivation was set up at St. Albans by Mr. Sander, "the orchid king," patronized by the Rothschilds, who introduced him to queen Victoria at Waddesdon Manor, 13 May, 1890. ORDONNANCES.

ORDINAL was known among the Greeks and Jews (Yoma, v. 2). It was introduced into England by the Saxons. A prisoner who pleaded not guilty might choose whether he would put himself for trial upon God and his church, by twelve men, as at this day, or upon God only. The trial by ordeal was abolished in 1218.

ORDER OF THE CORPORATE RE-

UNION, virtually a new episcopal church, said to arise out of the Christian Unity Association (which see). It proposed to form four stations, (Canterbury, York, Caerleon, and St. Andrews), with rectors and provincials; announced 11 Sept. 1877.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL were issued by the British government 7 Jan., and 11 Nov. 1807, prohibiting trade with the ports occupied by the French, being reprisals for Napoleon's Berlin and Milan decrees (see CONTINENTAL SYSTEM). They greatly checked the progress of manufactures in this country, and caused much distress and smuggling. They were repealed in regard to America, 18 June, 1812. The action under these orders led to the disastrous war with the United States in 1812-15.

ORDINANCES, see ORDONNANCES, SELF-

DENYING ORDINANCES.

ORDINATION of ministers in the Christian church began with Christ and His apostles; see Mark iii. 14, and Acts vi. and xiv. 23. In England in 1349 a new form of ordination of ministers was ordered to be prepared by a committee of six prelates and six divines.

ORDNANCE OFFICE. Before the invention of guns, this office was supplied by officers under the following names: the bowyer, the cross-bowyer, the galeter, or purveyor of helmets, the armourer, and the keeper of the tents. Henry VIII. placed it under the management of a master-general, a lieutenant, surveyor, &c. The master-general was chosen from among the first graduates in the service of the sovereign. The appointment was formerly for life; but since the Reformation it was held during good behaviour, and not infrequently by a subject minister. Hamilton, the letters-patent for this office were revoked 25 May, 1855, and its duties vested in the minister of war, lord Paunville. The last master-general was lord Fitzroy-Somerset, afterwards lord Raglan. The revival of the office recommended by the Ordinance Commission (see under Armes, 1889).

ORDNANCE SURVEY. The trigonome-

trical survey of England was commenced by gen. Roy, in 1741, continued by col. Colby, and completed by col. attt. sir Henry Jno. in 1839. The publication of these maps in large scale continued in 1814, under the direction of col. Mudge, and was completed in 1819; a large part of these maps have been coloured geologically. The survey of Ireland (6 inches to a mile) has been completed and published; that of Scotland, completed Nov. 1882. By the Survey act, passed 12 May 1845, the survey since 1801 was transferred to the Board of Works, and by an act passed in 1880, to the Board of Agriculture, beginning 1 April, 1880. Directors, lord A. C. Cooke; col. R. H. Stothard, 1855; col. Farquharson K.C.B. 1867; col. Duncan Johnston, 1891; col. S. C. Grant, 1898. In 1822 several sets of maps were in course of publication or preparation. The Ordnance Survey maps have been considered deficient, a departmental committee was appointed in April, 1882, and met during the year; sir John Dorington, M.P., chairman. Report, with recommendations, presented to the Board of Agriculture, 31 Dec. 1882; published, 6 March, 1893. New maps issued, May, 1892; survey sections sent to S. Africa springing. The 4-inch and 6-inch maps were revised, issued, Aug. 1902; others issued 1903. Pocket maps of many of the sections, scale 1 in. and 4 in. to a mile, are published at a cheap rate (1905). The outline and hill editions, 1 in. scale, completed for the whole of the United Kingdom, and coloured edition completed for England and Wales. The survey of Scotland began, and the coloured map of Ireland completed. The 2-mile map drawing of England and Wales completed. Drawing for Scotland begun. The 10-mile map, coloured edition, has been published for the whole of Great Britain, and will be issued for Ireland. The 1,000,000-scale map completed and published in 1903. One map for the whole of the British empire. The maps of the United States are being revised for more than 25 years, and there is now no area which has not been brought within this category. The re-survey of Ireland on the 6-inch scale is proceeding rapidly, the outline of the surveyors in 1903-4 having been about 4,750 miles. The new 6-inch map (spoken of as small-scale maps), 1 in. to 1 mile; 2 miles to 1 inch; 4 miles to 1 inch; 10 miles to 1 inch and 12½ miles to 1 inch or 1 inch to one million map (spoken of as small-scale maps). Little People Maps.—Revision of the large-scale maps is being carried out, with the sanction of the Treasury, at a rate to ensure that no part of Great Britain has been surveyed for more than 25 years, and there is now no area which has not been brought within this category. The re-survey of Ireland on the 6-inch scale is proceeding rapidly, the outline of the surveyors in 1903-4 having been about 4,750 miles. New editions of these maps are issued from time to time as the new revision of the 1-inch map in the field progresses. Maps on the scales smaller than 2 miles to a mile are now complete for the whole of the United Kingdom, viz. 1—4 miles to 1 inch, 10 miles to 1 inch, and 12½ miles to 1 inch, or larger. They are published in the forms given in the catalogues of publications: 234.654, expended for surveys of the United Kingdom 16, 234,743; 1901; 232,344; 1905; 224,064, 1908; 225,135, 1909.

New departure made 1903-4, with consent of the treasury, to supply schools who desire it with specially revised ordnance survey maps at a very low price. A considerable number of such maps were supplied in 1904-5. Specimens of the principal maps were also prepared for map (spoken of as small-scale maps) at which they can be ordered, and at nearly 700 other post-offices.

ORDONNANCES, the laws enacted by the Capetian kings of France previous to 1789. They began with "in the name of the king," and ended with "such is our good pleasure." The first in French is dated 1287 (Philip IV). The publication of these "ordonnances," ordered by Louis XIV., 1766, is still in progress. The "ordonnances" of Charles X., promulgated 26 July, 1830, led to the revolution.
OREGON TERRITORY. 1013

OREGON. TERRITORY. (N. America.) is said to have been visited by Drake in 1579. Lieut. Broughton took possession of part of it for Great Britain in 1792. In 1810 a settlement named Astoria was founded by a New York Company. Oregon was occupied by the English in 1814, and was claimed by the United States government, to whom the greater part was ceded, after much negotia-

ORGAN, a development of the pandem pipes; the organ in Gen. iv. 21 should be translated pipe. The invention is attributed to Ctesibius, a barber of Alexandria, about 250 B.C., and to Archimedes, about 220 B.C. The organ was brought to Europe from the Greek empire, and was applied to religious devotions in churches, about A.D. 657, Batarum. Organs were used in the western churches by pope Vitalianus, in 658. Ammonius. It is affirmed that the organ was known in France in the time of Louis I., 815, when one was constructed by an Italian priest. The organ at Harle- lem is one of the largest in Europe; it has 60 stops and 8000 pipes. At Seville is one with 110 stops and 5300 pipes. The organ at Amsterdam has a set of pipes that imitate a chorus of human voices. Of the organs in England that at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, by Mr. Willis, was the largest; next in order that at York minister, and that in the music-hall, Birmingham. In London, the largest was, perhaps that of Spitalfields church; and that in Christ Church was nearly as extensive. The erection of the famous Temple organ was competed for by St. Paul's organists. When the question was referred to vote, and Mr. Jefferys, afterwards chief justice, gave the casting vote in favour of Schmidt (called Father Smith), about 1682. A monster organ was erected in the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, in June, 1857. See Westminster Abbey, 1855.

Burlar organa are said to have been first made early in the 15th century. The first was the Stallhorn (which see).

See Asiatic Society.

ORIENTAL STUDIES: Professor Max Müller, in the presence of the prince of Wales, at the Royal Institution, gave a discourse to inaugurate the establishment of a school for modern oriental studies by the Imperial Institute, in union with University College, and King's College, London 11 Jan. 1870.

ORIENTATION, the setting of the chancel of a church so that it points to the east. This custom is followed in the churches of England, and those of northern Europe, but is not strictly adhered to in Italy and the South. St. Peter's, at Rome, has its choir pointing to the west.

ORIFLAMME, see Aurelianus.

ORIGENISTS pretended to draw their opinions from the writings of Origen, who lived 185-253. They maintained that Christ was the son of God in no other way than by adoption and grace; that souls were created before the bodies; that the sun, moon, stars, and the waters that are under the firmament, have souls; that the torments of the damned shall have an end, and that the fallen angels shall, after a time, be restored to their first condition. They were condemned by councils, and the reading of Origen's work was forbidden. Burke. These doctrines were condemned by the council of Constantinople in 533.

ORISSA, an ancient kingdom of India, now a province of N.W. Bengal, conquered by Cive in 1755, and nearly all acquired by the company in 1765. It suffered much by famine in 1770, and 1792-3, and more especially during Aux to Nov. 1796, when it is said about 1,500,000 persons perished. The government and officials were censured for neglect and want of forethought. It is also said that during a hurricane in Oct. 1836, 22,500 persons were drowned. Pop. 1861, 7,052,142; 1910 (est.), 5,231,749.

ORKNEY AND SHETLAND ISLES (North of Scotland), were conquered by Magnus III. of Norway, 1099, and were ceded to James III, as the dowry of his wife Margaret, in 1499. The Orkneys were the ancient Orkades; united with Shetland, they now form one of the Scotch coun-dies. The bishopric of Orkney, founded by St. Sermonus early in the 5th century, some affirm by St. Cohn, ended with the abolition of episcopacy in Scotland, about 1689; see Bishops in Scotland. Orkney and Zetland's null piers and harbours act passed, 14 Aug. 1896.

ORLEANS (a city in central France), formerly Aurelianus; gave title to a kingdom, 391, and afterwards to a duchy, usually held by one of the royal family. Attila the Hun, besieging it, was defeated by Aetius and his allies, 434. It was besi-ezed by the English under earls of Salisbury and Suffolk, 12 Oct. 1428, bravely defended by Gaucon (as its fall would have ruined the cause of Charles VI, king of France), and relieved by the heroism of Jean de Arc, afterwards crowned the Maid of ORLEANS. 1014 ORPHAN-HOUSES.

Orleans, 29 April, 1829, and the siege was raised 8 May, see Jauh of Arc. (The 439th anniversary was celebrated to May, 1868; the emperor and empress being present.) During the siege of Orleans, 1 Feb., 1563, the duke of Guise was assassinated.

After nine hours' severe fighting, Orleans captured by the Germans, under General von Temp. More than 4,000 prisoners were taken. The loss on our side, about 1,500, upon each side were engaged. The city was made to pay a war contribution of 10,000.

11 Oct., 1670

Von der Tann and the Bajarians defeated by general Louis de Meaulne de Planchard and Palhieres, and Orleans re-taken. The Germans acknowledged the loss of about 700 men, and 2,000 prisoners, chiefly wounded. The French loss was heavy. The chief conduct of the battle between Conduniers and Beun or Beuca.

OROQUETA, Navare, N. Spain. Here don Carlos, calling himself king Carlos VII., grandson of don Carlos, brother of Ferdinand VII., commanding about 4,000 men, was suddenly attacked by general Murrieta with about 2,000, and defeated after a short conflict, 4 May, 1872.

ORPHAN-HOUSES. The emperor Trajan first formed establishments for this purpose. Phin relates in his Panegyric that he had caused 5,000 free-born children to be sought out and educated, about A.D. 105. Orphan-houses properly so called are mentioned for the first time in the laws of the emperor Justinian. At the court of Byantium the office of inspector of orphans, orphanotrophos, was so honourable that it was held by the brother of the emperor Michael IV., in the 11th century; see Foundling Hospitals.

The orphanotrophos at Halae, established by Augustus Fraga, 1669-99.

ORREY, a planetary machine to illustrate and explain the motions of the heavenly bodies, appears to have been coeval with the depysdra.

Ptolomy devised the circles and epicycles that distinguished his system about 130 B.C. The planetary-clock of Finée was begun 1553. The planetarium of De Rhetis was formed about 1650. The planetarium, now termed the Orrery, is said, was constructed by Rowley, after a pattern devised by the clock-maker, George Graham, at the expense of Charles Boyle, earl of Orrery, about 1715. A large “planetarium” was constructed by the rev. Wm. Pearson, for the Royal Institution, London, about 1803. An excellent planetarium, constructed in London by signor N. Perini, was exhibited in Dec. 1879.

ORSINI’S PLOT against the emperor Napoleon III.; see Feanc, Jan. 1858.

ORTHES or ORTHÈZ (S. France), once capital of the principality of Bearn. Near it the British and Spanish armies, commanded by Wellington, defeated the French, under Soulé, 27 Feb. 1814.

ORTHOPÆDIC HOSPITALS, for the care of club-foot, spinal curvatures, &c., in London, National, Great Portland street, founded, 1836; Royal, Hanover-square, 1838; City, 1831.

OSBORNE HOUSE (Isle of Wight), was purchased by queen Victoria in 1815, and rebuilt by Mr. Cubitt. She died here, 22 Jan. 1901, and left the house and estate under her will to the king, who gave it to the nation, to be used as an army and navy convalescent home (for officers), 9 Aug. 1902; Osborne estate bill passed, 15 Dec. 1912. Royal Naval College, opened by king Edward VII., 4 Aug. 1903. The training colleges at Osborne and Dartmouth made part of the Portsmouth command, 1 Sept. 1905.

OSMIUM, one of the heaviest known metals, discovered in platinum ore by Tennant in 1836.

OSNABURG (N. Germany), made the seat of a bishopric, by Charlemagne, near the end of the 8th century. After the treaty of Westphalia in 1648, the bishop was a Roman Catholic and Protestant alternately, the latter being chosen from the house of Brunswick. Frederick, duke of York, the last bishop, resigned in 1833, when the lands were annexed to Hanover.

OSORY (S. E. Ireland), BISHOPRIC OF, was first planted at Saiger, about 402; translated to Aghadoc, in Upper Osory, in 1052; and to Kilkenny about the end of the reign of Henry II. It was united to Ferns and Leighlin in 1353.

OSTEND (Belgium). Now a fashionable summer resort. An important sea-port in the 11th century, it was destroyed by the sea 1334, rebuilt and walled by Philip the Good, the duke of Burgundy, 1415; sustained a siege by the Spaniards, from July, 1601, to Sept. 1604, when it honourably capitulated. On the death of Charles II. of Spain, the French seized Ostend; but in 1706, after the battle of Ramillies, it was retaken by the allies. It was again taken by the French in 1745, but restored in 1748. In 1756, the French garrisoned this town for the empress-queen Maria Theresia. In 1792, the French once more took Ostend, which they evacuated in 1793, but regained in 1794. The English destroyed the works of the Bruge canal; but the wind shifting before they could re-embark, they surrendered to the French, 19 May, 1798. The Ostend East India company, established 1723, was dissolved 1731. Riots and attacks on British fishermen landing fish quelled with bloodshed; intervention of the king; peace restored 23-30 Aug. 1857. Population, 1890, 39,541; 1901, 43,415.

OSTIA, a Roman port, at the mouth of the Tiber, said to have been founded by Ancus Martius about 627 B.C.

OSTRACISM (from the Greek oστρακoν, a potsherd or shell), a mode of proscription at Athens, is said to have been first introduced by the tyrant Hippias; others ascribe it to Cleisthenes, about 510 B.C. The people wrote the names of those whom they most suspected upon small shells; these they put in an urn or box and presented to the senate. Upon a scrutiny, he whose name was first written was sentenced by the council to be banished from his altar and hearth. 6000 votes were required. Aristides, noted for his justice, and Miltiades, for his victories, were thus ostracized. The custom was abolished by ironically proscribing Hyperbolus, a mean person, about 335 B.C.

OSTRICH (the struthio of the ancients), a native of Africa (see Job xxxix. 14). Ostriches were hatched and reared at San Donato, near Florence, 1859-61, and at Tresco abbey, the seat of Augustus Smith, in the Scilly isles, 1860.

OSTROGOTHIS, or EASTERN GOTHS, were distinguished from the Visigoths (Western Goths) by 330. After ravaging eastern Europe, Thrace, &c., their great leader, Theodoric, e-established a kingdom in Italy, which lasted from 493 to 553; see Italy.

OSTROLENKA (Poland). Near here the French defeated the Russians, 10 Feb. 1807. In another battle here between the Poles and Russians the slaughter was immense, but the Poles remained masters of the field, 26 May, 1831.

OTAGO, see New Zealand, 1848, 1861, 1866.

OTAHITE or TAHITI, an island in the S. Pacific Ocean, seen by Byron in 1765, and visited in 1767 by captain Wallis, who called it George the Third Island. Captain Cook came hither in 1769 to observe the transit of Venus; sailed round the whole island in a boat, and stayed three months. He visited it twice afterwards. See Cook’s Voyages. Otaheite, a native, was brought to England by Cook, and carried back in his last voyage. In 1799, king Pomare ceded the district of Matavai to some English missionaries. Queen Pomare was compelled to put herself under the protection of France, 9 Sept. 1843. She retracted, and Otaheite and the neighbouring islands were taken possession of by admiral Dupetit-Thouars in the name of the French king, Nov. 1819. The French imprisoned Mr. Pritchard, the English consul, 5 March, 1844, but the act was censured in France.

Queen Pomare IV., born, 21 Feb. 1811; succeeded her brother, Pomare III., in Jan. 1837; died Sept. 1877, having reigned 40 years. By consent of her successor the island was formally annexed to France, 25 June 1828. The queen arrived at Paris, 27 Feb. 1834.

Long rebellion in Raiatea and Huahine islands put down; the queen exiled by the French, reported, 10 April, 1847.

OLDENARDE (Belgium). Here the English and allies under the duke of Marlborough and prince Eugene thoroughly defeated the French besiegers, 11 July, 1708.

OULART (S.E. Ireland). Here 5000 Irish insurgents attacked the king's troops in small numbers, May, 1798. The North Cork militia, after great feats of bravery, were cut to pieces, five men only escaping.

OUNCE (from urceo), the sixteenth part of the pound avoirdupois, and twelfth of the pound troy. Its precise weight was fixed by Henry III., who decreed that an English ounce should be 640 dry grains of wheat; that twelve of these ounces should be a pound; and that eight pounds should be a gallon of wine, 1233.

OURIQUE (Portugal), where Alfonso, count or duke of Portugal, is said to have encountered five Saracen kings and a great army of Moors, 25 July, 1139, and signalily defeated them; and then to have been hailed the first king. Lisbon, the capital, was taken, and he soon after was crowned.

OUTLAW, one deprived of the benefit of the law, and out of the sovereign's protection; a punishment for such as being called in law do contumaciously refuse to appear. In the reign of Edward III., all the judges agreed that none but the sheriff only having lawful warrant therefor, should put to death any man outlawed. — Caled. Outlawry in civil proceedings was abolished by 42 & 43 Viet. c. 59, 13 Aug. 1879.

OUZEL GALLEY SOCIETY. In 1700, the case of the Ouzel Galley, a ship in the port of Dublin, excited great legal perplexity, and was referred to an arbitration of merchants, whose prompt decision was highly approved. This led to the foundation of the society in 1705.

OVATION, an inferior triumph which the Romans allowed those generals of their army whose victories were not considered. Publius Posthumius Tubertus was the first who was decreed an ovation, 503 B.C. A sheep (urus) was offered by the general instead of a bull.

OXYGEN. 1019 OYSTER.

At a meeting of the Royal institution, 20 Jan., 1863, Prof. Dewar exhibited some of the remarkable properties of liquid oxygen and air, and he showed how the liquid state could be maintained longer by surrounding it with a very high vacuum. Prof. Dewar reported to the Royal society that he had observed solid air in the form of ice, a mysterious body, 9 March, 1853. Further researches reported, 22 Jan., 1857. Prof. Dewar was awarded the Rumford medal of the Royal society in 1874.

A statue of Priestley, by F. J. Williamson, at Birmingham, was unveiled by professor T. H. Huxley, 1 Aug., 1874, the centenary of the discovery of oxygen. This was also celebrated at Northumberland, Pennsylvania, where he was buried, Feb. 1894.

A method of obtaining oxygen from air, devised and patented by M. Margis, of Paris. The principle is that of dialysis, or diffusion under pressure, 2-4 Dec., 1853. See Gases (dialysis).

By the explosion of a cylinder of compressed oxygen the carrier was killed, 15 March, 1869.

OXYGEN. 2. Fitzroy square, London; founded for the treatment of ulcers and wounds by oxygen gas, about 1856. The oxygen is supposed to turn the toxins or poisons of the body into certain micro-organisms into oxo-toxins or antibodies.

OYER AND TERMINER, a commission directed to the judges of the courts, by virtue Whereof they have power to hear and determine treasons, felonies, &c., 1253.

OYES! A corruption of the French oui, hear ye! The ancient term still used by a public crier and by the usher of courts of justice to enjoin silence and attention.

OYSTER (the Latin Ostrea edulis). British oysters are celebrated by the Roman satirist Juvenal (Sat. iv. 140) about 160. The robbering of oyster beds is prohibited by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 20 (1827).

In 1858 M. Coste commenced rearing oysters in great numbers on the coast of Brittany, and his plan has been found successful.

An Act for promoting the cultivation of oysters in the United Kingdom, passed 22 July, 1856 for the preservation of oyster fisheries 3 May, 1857. Certain restrictions of the Oysteries Fisheries Act, 1852, removed by the Fisheries Act, 1858.

The oyster-fisher, surgeon, and oyster-eater, a 4th August. The sale of deep-sea oysters between 15 June and 4 August; and the sale of others, between 15 May and 4 August; has been prohibited. 19 Aug. 1877. Professor Dewar at the Royal institution asserts the uselessness of restrictions and a close time for oysters, and the uncertainty of culture. 21 May, 1873. Artificial larven has greatly increased the supply. Brooks of Battersea (who discovered non-herniaedite), lieutenant Winslow, U.S., and M. Boehez Brandly, announced 15 June, 1874 Act for the cultivation of oysters in Ireland passed. Dean of Winchester and other gueists at a banquet poisoned by eating oysters, contaminated by sewage. The dean subsequently died. 22 Dec., 1894. Typhoid epidemic in Hampstead, occasioned by consumption of Ensmouth oysters (see Times, 11 July, 1894)....

Chairman representing the oyster trade to consider the nuisance of oysters by sewage, pass various resolutions. 5 Jan., 1895. At Colchester an oyster merchant was heavily fined for selling oysters which had been polluted with sewage秘密. 21 Nov., 1893. Oysters, about 1890, the commonest of food, are now becoming scarcer and scarcer, although their price has fallen from a million fold. Some say that the authorities recommend a close time for drilling, viz. 1 May to 1 Sept. Oysters are fishing to be restricted, as at present, from 15 June to 15 Aug., no oyster to be sold under 1 inch in diameter. The stable beds in 1875 are said to have produced about 79,568,000 oysters; value about 55,195.

American and Portuguese oysters are now largely imported.

Oysters successfully cultivated at Arcachon, near Bordeaux, 1839.
OZOKERIT.

OZOKERIT, a mineral hydro-carbon found in Moldavia and Wallachia. From it is distilled a substance suitable for making candles, introduced in the autumn of 1871.

OZONE (from the Greek ozéoin, to yield an odour), was discovered by Schönbein, of Basel, in 1840, when experimenting with the then newly-invented battery of Sir Wm. Grove, and was recognised by him successively as a minute constituent of the oxygen gas resulting from the electrolysis of water effected by a current of high tension; of air or oxygen through which electric discharges have taken place; and of air in which moist phosphorus has been undergoing slow oxidation.

Marignac determined the action of ozone on various substances to be due to their oxidation. 1845
Ozometers constructed. 1855
M. Schönbein announced his discovery of another modification of oxygen, which he termed ozone, hitherto found only in the compound state (in peroxides of sodium, potassium, &c.). 1859

The French Academy of Sciences appointed a committee of eminent philosophers to inquire into the nature and relations of ozone. 4 Dec. 1865
Andrews and Taft demonstrated ozone to be a condensed form of oxygen. 1866
This further established by Sorel and Brodie, by quantitative reactions. Ozing suggested and Brodie proved ozone to be 3 parts of oxygen compressed into the space of 2. 1872
Ozone, generated by a current produced by Wilde's magneto-electric machine, employed to bleach sugar, by Edward Beane's patent. Aug. 1868
Liquified by Hautefontaine and Chappuis. Oct. 1880
Other properties since discovered. 1884
The inhalation of ozone recommended as a remedy for phthisis; the institution at St. Raphael on the Mediterranean opened for the purpose; reported Dec. 1891
M. Emile Andreae's system for the commercial production of ozone economically carried on by Messrs. Allen & Hanbury in London. July, 1893
M. Otto, in Paris, discovers the means of purifying water by ozone; reported 6 Feb. 1902
Radium reported to possess the property of converting oxygen into ozone. 1933
PACIFICATION. 1021

PAINTING.

PACIFICATION. Edicts of the name usually given to the edicts of toleration granted by the French kings to the protestants; see Ghoent.

First edict, by Charles IX., permitting the exercise of the reformed religion near all the cities and towns in the realm. Jan. 1562

The reformed worship permitted in the houses of lords justiciaries, and certain other persons, March, 1563.

These edicts revoked, and all Protestant ministers ordered to quit France in fifteen days. 1568

Edict, allowing lords and others to have service in their houses, and granting public service in certain towns. 1570

[In Aug. 1572, the same monarch authorised the massacre of St. Bartholomew (see Bartholomew)]

Edict of Pacification by Henry III., April; re- voted, Dec. 1576; renewed for six years. Oct. 1577

[Several edicts were published against the protestants after the six years expired.]

Edict of Nantes (which see), by Henry IV., 13 April, 1598

PACIFIC ISLANDERS. See Kidnapping Acts.

PACIFIC OCEAN, the largest of the five oceans of the globe. It was first discovered in 1513 by Vasco Núñez de Balboa, and received its name from Magellan in 1521. Sir Francis Drake was the first Englishman who sailed upon it in 1577. The Santa Cruz and Duff islands annexed by Gt. Britain, June, 1895; Wake island, by U.S.A., Dec. 1898; 14 others annexed by Gt. Britain, Dec. 1900; 3 more, May, 1907. See Magellan; Steam, 1851; Wrecks, 1850; Kidnapping Acts; Panama.

PACIFIC RAILWAY, North American, from Omaha city, Missouri, to Sacramento, California, 1700 miles, opened 12 May, 1869. For new Pacific railway, see Canada, 1881 et seq. By means of this railway, the China and Japan mails were conveyed from Yokohama to London in 25 days; received 13 May, 1891.

PADDINGTON, a parliamentary borough, West London, returning two members; municipal borough by London Government act, 1899 (10 aldermen, 60 councillors). Population, 1900, 159,574. St. Mary's Church, Paddington-green, the old parish church, erected on the site of an ancient church, consecrated 1791; St. James's Church erected 1845, and made the parish church. On Paddington-green, now with the old churchyard converted into a public garden, stands a statue of Mrs. Siddons, the famous actress, whose remains are interred in the churchyard of St. Mary's. In the same burial ground are interred Haydon, the artist; Collins, the painter; and Nollekens, the sculptor. The Paddington canal was opened to July, 1801. The Lock of the canal, established in 1737, was removed to its present site from Grove-norplace in 1812.

PADLOCKS are said to have been invented by Beecher at Nuremberg, 1549, but are mentioned much earlier.

PADUA, the Roman Patarium, in Venetia, N. Italy, said to have been founded by Antenor, soon after the fall of Troy. It flourished under the Romans. Patarian Latin was considered very corrupt, and is traced in Livy, a native of Padua. After being an independent republic, and a member of the Lombard league, Padua was ruled by the Carrara family from 1318 with a short interruption till 1405, when it was seized by the Venetians. The university was founded about 1220. It was closed through disturbances, 1848-50.

PAGANS, the heathen, worshippers of idols, not agreeing in any set form or points of belief. See Idols. Constantine's nephew Julian, attempted their restoration, 361; but Paganism was renounced by the Roman senate in 382, and finally overthrown in the reign of Theodosius the younger, about 391.

PAISLEY, a borough, W. Scotland, the Roman Vindolanda, and grew out of the priory of Paisalet, founded 1104—9 by Walter Stewart, made an abbey about 1220; burnt by the English 1307; rebuilt 15th century. Made a burgh of barony 1488 and a Parliamentary borough 1832. Since 1805 Paisley silk and cotton cloth have been celebrated. Statue of Burns unveiled by the earl of Rosseley, 29 Sept. 1860. Serious fires, 35,000.000, damage, 7 April, 1903. Population 1901, 79,355; 1910 (est.), 125,000.

PALACE COURT, see Marshallsea, and Green Cloth.

PALACE OF JUSTICE, OR ROYAL COURTS OF JUSTICE. The names given to the new Law Courts, London. See Law Courts under Law.

PALACES, see Buckingham, St. James's, Parliament, 1833-52, 1885, Exeter, Taviers, St. Cloud, Versailles, &c. Palace Theatre, under Theatres (Royal English Opera-house).

PALEOGRAPHY, the science which deals with ancient manuscripts, their decipherment, date, origin, and authenticity; distinguished from Epigraphy, which treats of writings on hard substances as stone or metal. The oldest existing MS. written on sheets of papyrus, have been found in the tombs of Egypt. The most important is the Papyrus Prisse, found in a tomb of the Xth dynasty; stated to be the oldest book in the world. Papyrus rolls, chiefly parts of the Book of the Dead, are numerous. The chief ancient MSS. which have been preserved are those written on papyrus or vellum. See Diplomatics, Writing. Palaeographical society founded 1873. dissolved, 1 July, 1895. M. Leon Gautier, eminent paleographer, born 1832, died Aug. 1897.

PALEOLOGI, a family which reigned as emperors of the east from 1260 to 1453. George Paleologus raised Alexius Comnenus to the throne in 1081, and thereby founded his own family. And, the last Paleologus, son of Thomas, ruler of the Morea, after the overthrow of his father, became a Mahometan at Constantinople about 1333. A person who called himself John Anthony Paleologus Lascaris died at Turin, Sept. 1874. His claims were doubted.

PALEONTOLOGY (from the Greek palaios, ancient, and osteis, beings), treats of the evidences of organic beings in the earth's strata. It combines biology and geology (which see). Wm. Buckland, Cuvier, Montell, Agassiz, Owen, Edward Forbes, Cope, Marsh, and Blainville, all of the 19th century, may be reckoned as fathers of this science. The Palaeontographical society, which publishes elaborate monographs of British organic remains, was founded in 1847. The journal "Palaeontographia" (German) began 1851. Professor Owen's "Palaeontology" was published in 1860. Nearly 40,000 species of animals and plants have been added to the System of Nature by palaeontological researches. Huxley. See Man, and works on Palaeontology by Nicholson, Zittel, Steinmann, and Doderlein.

PALEOPOLIS, see Naples.

PALSIS ROYAL, Paris, originally Palais Cardinal, built for cardinal Richelieu by Lemercier, 1620-36, received its present name when occupied by Louis XIII., to whom the cardinal gave it partly by bequest in 1638. In 1692, gave it to his nephew Philippe, duke of Orleans, and it became the residence of his successors. It was confiscated by the republic in 1793, after the execution of Philippe Egalite. Louis Philippe resided in it, 1814-31. It suffered much injury at the revolution in 1838. Under the Second Empire it became the residence of prince Jerome and his son Napoleon. The buildings were much injured by fire by the communists, 25 May, 1871.

PALATINATE OF THE RHINE, one of the seven ancient electorates of Germany. It was long united to Bavaria, but was separated in 1794,—Frederic V., the elector palatine in 1610, married in 1613 Elizabeth, the daughter of James I. of England, and thus was an ancestor of queen Victoria; see Hanover. In 1619 he was elected king of Bohemia, but lost all by his defeat by the Austrians at Prague in 1620. The Palatinate was horribly ravaged by Tilly in 1622, and by the French in 1688. Several thousands of the ruined peasantry were sent to America by the British government and people. The elector palatine, Charles Theodore, inherited Bavaria in 1778; since when the two electorates have been united; see Bavaria.

PALATINE. William the Conqueror made his nephew, Hugh De Abriein, count palatine of Chester with the title of earl, about 1070. Edward III. created the palatine of Lancaster, 1359; see Lancaster, St. John's. The bishopric of Durham also made county palatine. There is also mention made of the county palatine of Hexham, in 33 Henry VIII. c. 10, which then belonged to the archbishop of York, but by the 14th of Elizabeth it was dissolved, and made part of the county of Northumberland. The palatinate jurisdiction of Durham was separated from the diocese, and vested in the crown, b Will. IV. c. 19, 21 June, 1836.
PALE.

The name given to the part of Ireland colonised by the English—viz., parts of the counties of Louth, Dublin, Meath, and Kildare. Anglo-Irish rulers were termed lords of the pale. Their arbitrary exactions led to a royal commission of inquiry in 1641. The result of the commission's report was that the pale in 1641 was followed by a general insurrection, and the royal cause was ruined in 1647. In 1652 Ireland was committed to the rule of four commissioners.

PALERMO (N. W. Sicily), the ancient Panormus. It has been held by the Carthaginians, 415 B.C.; taken by the Romans, 234 B.C.; by the Saracens, A.D. 827; and by the Normans, 1072. Here Roger II. was crowned king of Sicily, 1130. Palermo was the scene of the Sicilian Vespers (which see), 30 March, 1282. It suffered from earthquake in 1726 and 1736. The king Ferdinand resided at Palermo from 1699 to 1675, while Naples was ruled by Joseph Bonaparte and Joseph Murat. It revolted against the tyranny of Ferdinand II. 12 Jan. 1828. It was attacked by general Fianzigeri, 29 March, 1847, and surrendered on 14 May. It was taken by Garibaldi, 6 June, 1860. An insurrection against the abolition of the monastic system was put down at Palermo on 13 Sept. 1866, and was suppressed by the royal troops with much bloodshed; order was restored by 22 Sept. Population, 1891, 310,322; 1890, 311,397.

The Italian National Exhibition at Palermo opened, 15 Nov. 1891.

New monument to Garibaldi unveiled; speech by sig. Crispi, 27 May, 1892.

Rioting suppressed by the military; 8 persons killed; the town clerk and his wife killed by the mob, 30 Dec. 1893.

Visit of king Edward VII. and queen Alexandra, 23–25 April, 1907.

See Sicily.

PALESTINE, the name given by Moses (Exodus xv., 14) and other ancient writers, to a broad strip of land on the east coast of the Mediterranean, roughly inclosed by the Dead Sea, the Arabian sea, and the Red Sea. It was afterwards limited to the part termed the land of Canaan or Israel, Judea, and the Holy Land; see Jews. After being several times conquered by the Saracens, and taken from the 7th to the 10th century, and after being the scene of the wars of the Crusades (which see), and other conflicts, Palestine was united to the Ottoman empire by Selim II. in 1516. See Bible (note), Holy Places, and Syria.

PALIMPSEST (from the Greek, palein, again; and pallein, to efface), palimpsests written on after the previous writing had been partially effaced. Cardinal Mai, by removing the second writing in some MSS., recovered the original. This was the case with Cicero's "De Republica," published by Mai in 1821. It had been covered by a treatise of Lactantius.

PALLADIUM, the statue of Pallas, said to have fallen from heaven near the tent of Hiss, as he was building Hhus, which the oracle of Apollo declared should never be taken so long as the Palladium was found within its walls. The Greeks are said to have obtained it by craft during the Trojan war, 1184 B.C.; but some writers assert, another statue was taken, and that the real Palladium was conveyed from Troy to Italy by Enescus, 1185 B.C., and preserved by the Romans with the greatest secrecy in the temple of Vesta.—PALLADIUS is a rare metal, discovered in platinum ore by Dr. Wolston in 1863.

PALLAS, a minor planet, discovered by Olbers, at Bremen, 28 March, 1802.

PALLISER'S CHILLED SHOT, see Common.

PALL MALL, a street near St. James's palace, London, is named from a French game at ball (palle-maille, being a wooden mallet), resembling the modern croquet, having been played there about 1600, and introduced into England about 1660. Among eminent inhabitants were Noll Gwyn and dr. Thomas Sydenham. The PALL MALL GAZETTE, a daily (evening) independent political and literary journal, first appeared 7 Feb., 1863, and was edited by Mr. Frederick Greenwood till 1 May, 1880, when it became a liberal paper, edited by Mr. John Morley, who retired 25 Aug., 1883, Price 2d., reduced to 1d. 2 Jan. 1882. The paper became again conservative, Dec. 1892.

PALL, PALLIUM, in the Roman Church an ensign of dignity of a strictly personal character conferred by the pope upon archbishops. It consists of a narrow band of pure white wool, taken from two lambs, which annually, on the feast of St. Agnes, are brought to the church of St. John Lateran, and after being blessed are presented to... the pope; the wool is afterwards made up into palmia by a community of nuns. The palmia, which is worn around the shoulders, is ornamented with four purple crosses, and its form is indicated in the arms of the archbishop of Canterbury. By a decree of pope Gregory XI. (about 1370), no archbishop could call a council, bless the chrisms, consecrate churches, ordain a clerk, or consecrate a bishop, till he had received his pall from the see of Rome. The pall was first worn by an Irish archbishop in 1122, when Gelasius was recognised as primate of all Ireland. The late Cardinal Vaughan was invested with the pallium in the pro-cathedral, Kensington—the first occasion of its investiture in England since the time of cardinal Pole. Archbishops Bourne, present archbishop of Westminster, received the pallium from pope Pius X. at Rome, 12 Nov. 1905.

PALMERSTON ADMINISTRATION. The resignation of the Aberdeen administration was announced 1 Feb. 1855, but nearly all its members returned to office soon after under lord Palmerston, lord Derby and lord John Russell having each in vain endeavoured to form an administration. On 22 Feb., Mr. Gladstone, sir James Graham, and Mr. Stephen; ousted the government of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and succeeded Lord Stanley of Alderley, appointed Sept. 1866.

PALMISTRY, or CHIROMANCY, the art of studying the lines of the palm, to discover the character and fortunes of a person, practised in ancient India and Greece. The subject was noticed by Aristotle, Pliny, Paracelsus, Albertus Magnus, and Cardan. A work by Johann Hartlieb was published in Augsburg, 1475. M. le capitaine d'Arpentigny and M. Adrien Desbarolles are chief modern authorities. A. R. Craig's "Book of the Hand" (1867), L. Cotton's "Palmistry" (1891). Dr. F. Galton published his study of "Finger Prints," 1893. See Fortune Telling.

PALM-SUNDAY. When Christ made his entry into Jerusalem, multitudes of the people who came to the feast of the Passover, took branches of the palm-tree, and went forth to meet him, 30. It is usual, in some countries, to carry palms on the Sunday before Easter, hence called Palm-Sunday. In many parts of Great Britain Palm-Sunday is known as "Flowering-Sunday" from the fact that the graves of departed relatives are decorated with flowers and wreaths on this day.

PALMYRA (Syria) was supposed to have been the Tadmor in the wilderness built by Solomon, but was manifestly Grecian. The brilliant part of the history of Palmyra was the reign of Zenobia. At the death of Odenatus, Zenobia assumed the title of queen of the East, in 267. Auriac defeated her at Emesa, in 272, and made her captive, 273, and killed Longinus, the philosopher, her friend. Palmyra is now inhabited by a few Arab families.

PAMPHLETS. Their first appearance amongst us is generally thought to have been in opposition to the church of Rome. Those who were first convinced of the reasonableness of the "new learning," as it was then called, propagated their opinions in small pieces, cheaply printed, and (what was then of great importance) easily concealed. Political pamphlets written by Wm. Pleydell, Sir Wm. S. IV, and others, and were very numerous in the 17th and 18th centuries (by De Foe, Swift, Steele, and others).

Paul Louis Courier wrote "Simple Discours" and other pamphlets against the priests and nobles after the restoration of the Bourbons, 1815. His "Pamphlet des Pamphlets," defending pamphleteers, published, 1817, and approved by his murder, 25 April, 1818.

Large collections are in the libraries of the British Museum and the Royal and London Institutions.

PANTHAYS, Mahometans in the Chinese province, Yuman, became independent under a Sultan, during the eighteenth century, 1781–1804. After its suppression, the Pantahs, after a severe struggle, were also subdued. Their capital, Talifou, was captured, and its inhabitants cruelly massacred in Feb., 1873. The Pantahs sent an embassy to England in 1872, without effect. Sultan Suleiman committed suicide.

PANTHEISM, the formula of which is “everything is God, and God is one,” was especially taught by Xenophanes, who died 500 B.C. The doctrine is attributed to Spinoza, Kant, Fichte, and other philosophers. Ambrice of Chartres, censured for holding the doctrine, recanted 13th century. He is said to have asserted that “all is God, and God is all.”

PANTHEON, at Rome, a circular temple built by Agrippa, the son-in-law of Augustus, 27 B.C. It had niches in the wall, where the image or representation of a particular god was placed; the walls, the ceiling, and the roof were covered with gilt brass, and the roof covered with silver. Pope Boniface III. dedicated it to the Virgin Mary and all the saints, by the name of S. Maria della Rotunda, or “ad Martyres,” A.D. 608. —The Pantheon in London was erected by subscription, and opened 27 Jan. 1772; formed into an opera house; burned down 14 Jan. 1772; rebuilt for masquerades in 1775; opened as theatre, 1812; made a bazaar in 1834. "PAPAL AGGRESSION." In a consistory held in Rome, 30 Sept. 1850, the pope (Pius IX.), named fourteen new cardinals, of whom four only were French and Italian. Among them was Nicholas Wise- man, vicar-apostolic of the London district, who was at the same time nominated lord archbishop of Westminster.

The answer of the bishop of London (Mr. Blomfield) to a memorial from the Protestant clergy of Westminster, against a Roman hierarchy in this country, was so treated by another, and utterly rejected by a third, was adopted and promulgated at the general council at Rome 13 July, 1870, a great many bishops having withdrawn. The dogma was inculcated by the false decreets of Isidore and others, but not adopted by the council of Trent; see Councils XVI.

Professor Dollinger, the historian, was excommunicated by the Council for professing this dogma, 18 April, 1851: he was made a D.C.L. at Oxford about 16 June following; see Old Catholics.

PAPAL INFALLIBILITY. This dogma, maintained by one party in the Roman church, tolerated by another, and utterly rejected by a third, was adopted and promulgated at the general council at Rome 13 July, 1870, a great many bishops having withdrawn. The dogma was inculcated by the false decreets of Isidore and others, but not adopted by the council of Trent; see Councils XVI.

PAPER, see Papyrus. Paper was probably made in Egypt, and centuries before the Christian era. It is believed that about 300 B.C. and the rag about 1500.* White coarse paper was made by sir John Spilman, a German, at Dartford, in England, 33 Eliz. 1580; and here paper mills were erected. Stow, Paper for writing and printing manufactured in England, and an act passed to encourage it. 2 Will. III. 1699; before this time paper was for these articles to France and Holland 105,000, and annually. The French refugees taught our people; we made coarse brown paper almost exclusively, until they came among us; we made white paper first in 1650. Anderson, Paper-making by a machine was suggested by Louis Robert, who sold his model to Dibot, the greatest paper manufacturer in England, and, jointly with Foundreric, perfected the machinery. The latter obtained a patent for paper-making machine in 1804; and for manufacturing paper of an indefinite length in 1807. The machinery was improved by Bryan donkin. A sheet of paper,

* Mr. Joseph Hunter (in the "Archaeologia," xxvii.) states that the earliest paper which he had seen was a Ms account-book, dated 1062, probably of Bordeaux manufacture. He gives engravings of manufacturers' marks, French and English, the dates of which range from 1350 to 1471. He also gives an extract from a work by Bartholin, a writer of the middle of the 14th century, in which mention is made of a paper manufacture in the Marches of Lorraine. At the end of Wykin's "De Rebus," in the edition of Bartholin's "De Proprietatibus Rerum," 1474, its thin paper, made by John Tate in England, is commended.

16,800 feet long, and 4 feet wide, was made at Whitchurch-mills, Derbyshire, in 1830; and one 24,000 feet long, and 6 feet 3 inches wide, was made at Colton in Devon in 1860. Esparto, a Spanish grass, first imported in 1857, in large quantities employed in the manufacture since 1894. In 1860 wood was largely manufactured into paper at Philadelphia; and at the Paris exhibition, 1867, fine specimens of wood-paper were shown; see Parchment (note). Wood pulp now principally used in the manufacture of paper for newspapers. The paper duty, imposed in 1664 (producing about 1,400,000,000 annually), after having been the subject of agitation for several years, was repealed in 1861. PARCHMENT. Invented for writing books by Eumenes (some say by Attalus), of Pergamus, the founder of the celebrated library at Pergamus, formed on the model of the Alexandrian, about 190 B.C. Parchment-books from this time became those most used, and the most valuable as well as oldest in the world are written on the skins of.
geats. It should be mentioned that the Persians and others are said to have written all their records on skins long before Emperor's time. Parchment was superseded by paper of a special kind for grants of property. Dec. 1879.
Parags of paper (or vegetable parchment) was invented and patented in 1822, by Mr. W. E. Gaine, C.E., who discovered, that when paper is exposed to a mixture of two parts of concentrated sulphuric acid and one part of water for no longer time is required to draw it through the fluid, it is immediately converted into a strong tough skin-like material. It must be instantly washed with water. Its great strength points out many applications of this material, e.g., maps, school and account-books, and drawing paper. In 1859 it appeared that a similar invention had been made in Paris by Fugier and Poumard in 1838.

PARISHES. Their boundaries in England are said to have been fixed by Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, 611, or by Alfred about 890. They were enlarged, and the number of parishes was consequently reduced in the 15th century, when there were 10,000. Parish registers were commenced in 1538. Acts were passed in 1834 and 1856 by which new parishes may be formed out of too extensive ones; acts amended in 1869. The appointment of two local counsellors is made unnecessary by an act passed Aug. 1872. See Registers, and Benefits. Number of ecclesiastical parishes or districts in 1869, 1,400. By the Local Government act, passed 5 March, 1894, Parish and District Councils were appointed for rural parishes and urban parishes, to consist of from 2 to 5 members (women eligible) annually elected, on 15 April; 1st election in 7,142 parishes, 4 Dec. et seq. 1894. Parish councils were established in Scotland by the Local Government act of 1894. Parish registers of several counties are now published by the Parish Register Society, 1877. Parish councillors (tenure of office) act passed, 20 June, 1874.

PARK LANE MURDER, see Trials, 1872.

PARKS. The Romans attached parks to their villas. Fulvius Lupinus, Pompey, and Hortensius, among others, had large parks. In England, the first great park of which particular mention is made... was that of Woodstock, formed by Henry 1., 1125.
Queen Caroline, consort of George II., inquired, it is said, of the first Mr. Pitt (afterwards earl of Chatham), whether it would not cost him to shut up the parks as private grounds. He replied, "Three crowns, your majesty." The design was never afterwards entertained. See Finch, Southwarck,

PARK'S TRAVELS. Mungo Park set sail on his first voyage to Africa, under the patronage of the African society, to trace the source of the river Niger, 22 May, 1795; and returned 22 Dec., 1797, after his health had become great danger.
He again sailed from Portmouth on his second voyage, 30 Jan., 1805, appointed to a new expedition by government. It is stated that his party fired on the natives when resisted, and that he was killed at Brousse on the Niger, Nov. 1805.

PARLIAMENT (from the French parlement, discourse) derives its origin from the Saxony general assemblies, called Wittumswort. The name was applied to the assemblies of the state under Louis VII.
of France, about the middle of the 12th century, but it is said not to have appeared in our law till its mentioning the state of Westminster, 2 Feb., 1272; and yet Coke declared in his Institutes, and spoke to the same effect, when speaker (1542), that this name was used even in the time of Edward the Confessor, 1014. The first clear account we have of the representatives of the people forming a house of councillors, was in the 3rd Hen. III. 1258, when it was declared by the state of Oxford that twenty persons should be chosen to represent the commons in the three parliaments, which, by the sixth statute, were to be held yearly. See Commons.

The general representation by knights, citizens, and burgesses, took place 40 Hen. III. 1295. See Commons and Lords. The power and jurisdiction of parliament are so vast, eminent, and absolute, that it cannot be confined, either for causes or persons, within any bounds. It hath sovereign and uncontrollable authority in making and repealing laws. It can regulate or new-model the succession to the crown (as was done in the reigns of Henry VII. and William III.). It can alter and establish the religion of the country, as was done in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth.
See Edward Coke. The ninth edition of Mr.
G. Burnett Smith's elaborate "History of the English Parliament" was published Nov. 1876; members of parliament from the earliest period to the present time, ordered by the house of

* When the royal assent is given to a public bill, the clerk says "Received the royal assent to this bill," and when the royal assent is given to a private bill, he says "Saiit fait comme it est desire." If the bill has subsidies for its object, he says, Le roi [or le reïgn] remeuvre a souverain sujet, accepte leur bienveillance, d'autant le rest. If the king do not think proper to assent, for a refusal, it is singular that the French language should still be used.

18th to 12th sitting: Sir Henry James' address for the Times, 29 Oct., 28 Nov.

The report of the commissioners was before Parliament, 13 Feb. 1889. The following is an abridgment of their conclusions: I. That the respondent members of Parliament collectively were not guilty of conspiring for the absolute independence of Ireland as a separate nation, but that some of them (Messrs. M. Harris, Dillon, W. O'Brien, W. Redmond, O'Connor, J. Condon, and J. J. O'Dwyer), together with Mr. Davitt, established the Land League mainly for that purpose. II. That the respondents [144] did combine to promote agrarian agitation, the non-payment of rents, and the expulsion of the landlords (styled the English garrison). III. That they acquitted Mr. Parnell and others of the charge of inciting them to commit the Phoenix Park murders, and affirmed the far-simile letter to be a forgery. IV. That they found that the respondents did disseminate the Irish World and other newspapers, intending to incite to sedition and other crimes, and the charge of incitement to crime, except by intimidation and inflaming passions for that purpose, were not proved. VI. They found that the respondents did not denounce the system of agrarian agitation, through all their influence, and VII. That they defended persons charged with agrarian crime, and supported their families, but it was not proved that they subscribed for rewards for, or were in any way associated with, notorious criminals, or aided their escape by payments. VIII. That they found that the respondents made payments to compensate persons injured in the commission of crime. IX. That the respondents did invite and obtain the assurance and cooperation of the Physical Force Party in America, including the Clan-na-Gael, and did not repudiate the action of that party.

[Certain allegations against Mr. Parnell were declared not proved.]

The report adopted with thanks, by the commons, after 7 days' debate, 3-12 March; by the lords (without a division), 21 March, 1889. Mr. Gladstone's amendment rejected by 332 to 285.

Parnell and Walter, another, for libel, Queen's bench division, justices Davitt and O'Brien; damages claimed, 100,000; 496 sold into court, 11 Jan. Verdict for the plaintiff, by consent, 5,000; damages.

Mr. Parnell was requested by Mr. W. E. Gladstone and other English liberals to retire from the chairmanship of the Irish party. He declined; and issued a manifesto to the people of Ireland, giving an account of private conferences with Mr. Gladstone and Mr. John Morley, 29 Nov. The Irish R.C. bishops demanded Mr. Parnell's resignation, Dec. After a week's angry discussion in the commons' committee-room, No. 15, the Irish party divided: Mr. Justin McCarthy, the vice-chairman, was elected chairman by 44 members; Mr. Parnell continuing chairman with 26 followers, 6 Dec. Manifestation of the two parties issued, 6 to 10 Dec. Collapse of negotiations (chiefly at Boulogne) of Mr. Parnell with Messrs. Wm. Davitt, Dillon, Justin McCarthy, Sexton, and others; Mr. Parnell refuses to resign the leadership, 11 Feb.; counter manifestoes issued, 12 Feb. 7th seq. 1889.

PASSIONISTS.

PAROCHIAL CHARITIES COMMISSION, see London, 1878, and under Charities, 1883.

PARRICIDE. There was no law against it in Athens or Rome, such a crime not being supposed possible. About 172 n.c., L. Ostius having killed his father, the Romans scourged the parricide, sewed him up in a leather sack made air-tight, with a live dog, a cock, a viper, and an ape; and thus cast him into the sea. Miss Blandy was executed at Oxford for the murder of her father, April, 1752; see Trials, March, 1809.

PARSEE or GUJEREE, the followers of Zaradust, called by the Greeks Zoroaster, who is doubtfully said to have lived before sixth century B.C. (see Magi), dwelt in Persia till 538, when, at the battle of Kadsan, their army was decimated by the Arabs, and the monarchy annihilated at the battle of Nahavend in 641. Many submitted to the conquerors, but others fled to India, and their descendants still reside at Bombay (where they are termed Parsees). Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhy, the 3rd baronet, was elected president of the community there, July, 1857. Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, a Parsee merchant, was for several years professor of Gujarati at University college, London. He was nominated as an under-secretary for the Holborn district, but not elected, 1886; elected 6 July, 1892, for Central Finsbury; visits Bombay, Dec. 1893. See Bombay. A Parsee fire temple at Bombay was consecrated, Nov. 1891.

Coverdham, an eminent scholar, promoter of native female education, the mother of Mr. M. M. Bhow-macree, m.r. for N.E. Bethnal-green (1795), died, aged 62, at Bombay, 6 Feb. 1856.

Death of Bai Motilibai Wadia, great benefactress to Bombay, aged 87, 15 June, 1897.

Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, a noble benefactor, died at Bombay, aged 70, 5 May, 1901.

"PARTANT POUR LA SYRIE," popular French song; words by comte Alexandre de Laborde; music by Hortense Beurnhamais, wife of Louis Beurnhamais, king of Holland, about 1809. The music became very popular after her son became emperor, in 1812, as Napoleon III.

PARTHENON (from Greek parthenos, virgin), a temple at Athens dedicated to Minerva, erected about 440 B.C. In it Phidias placed his renowned statue of that goddess, 13 ft. The roof was destroyed by the Venetians in 1687. Ruinous state of the building through earthquakes, described Times, 14 Aug. 1897. See Elgin Marbles.

PARTHENOPAEAN REPUBLIC was established by the French at Naples (anciently called Parthenope), 23 Jan. 1799, and overthrown in June same year.

PARTHIA (Asia). The Parthians were originally a tribe of Sythians, who, being exiled, as their name implies, from their own country, settled near Hyrcania. Arsesee laid the foundation of an empire which ultimately extended over a large part of Asia, 250 B.C.; the Parthians were never wholly subdued by the Romans. The last king, Artabanus V., was killed, A.D. 224; and his territories were annexed to the new kingdom of Persia founded by Artaxerxes, who had revolted against Parthia.

PARTICULARISTS. The name given to those Germans who desire the maintenance of the independence of the German states, and oppose their absorption into the empire. M. Gisnet, one of them, failed in an attempt to form a ministry in Bavaria, Sept. 1872. Particularism revived during the election in 1893.

PARTITION ACT, relative to the division of property sold by direction of the court of chancery, passed 25 June, 1888.

PARTITION TREATIES. The first treaty between England and Holland for regulating the Spanish succession (declaring the elector of Bavaria next heir, and ceding provinces to France) was signed 19 Aug. 1668; and the second (between France, England, and Holland, declaring the archduke Charles presumptive heir of the Spanish monarchy, Joseph Ferdinand having died in 1679), 13 March, 1700. Treaty for the partition of Poland; the first was a secret convention between Russia and Prussia, 17 Feb. 1772; the second between the same powers and Austria, 5 Aug. same year; the third was between Russia, Austria, and Prussia, 24 Oct. 1795.

PARTNERSHIP. The laws respecting it were amended in 1865 and 1890; see Limited Liability.

PARTY, see Proclamations.

PASGUIADES. Small satirical poems obtained this name about 1530-40.

At the stall of a cobbler named Pasquin, at Rome, idle persons used to assemble to listen to his sallies, to relate anecdotes, and rail at the passers-by. After the cobbler's death, his name was given to a statue to which lampoons were affixed.

PASSAROWITZ TREATY, concluded 21 July, 1768, between Germany and Venice, and the Turks, by which the house of Austria ceded certain commercial rights, and obtained from Turkey the Tenezwar, Belgrade, and part of Bosnia, Servia, and Wallachia. The Turks gained the Morea.

PASSAU (Germany). Treaty of, whereby religious freedom was established, was ratified between the emperor Charles V. and the Protestant princes of Germany, 29 July and 15 Aug. 1552. In 1562 the cathedral and great part of Passau were consumed by fire.

PASSENGERS—by public vehicles, are protected by 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 22 (1834), 1 & 2 Vict. c. 50 (1838), and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 33 (1853); another act was passed in 1886. Mr. Cleghorn, under whom the front seat on the near side of one of the general omnibus company's carriages had given way, recovered 400l. damages against the company, in a verdict by consent, in the Queen's Bench, Dec. 1850. The Ships Passenger act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 119, passed in 1855, was amended in 1865; see Campbell's Act, and Under Railways.

PASSIONISTS, a congregation of clerks of the holy cross, founded by St. Paul of the Cross, who died 1775, and was canonized by the pope 1857. A house was set up in England in 1831, and PASSION PLAY.

PASSION PLAY, see Drama.

PASSION-WEEK, the name given since the Reformation to the week preceding Easter, was formerly applied to the fortnight. Archbishop Lanman said the two weeks were so called "for a thousand years together," and refers to an epistle, by Ignatius, in the 1st century, in which the practice is said to have been "observed by all." The week preceding Easter is termed "Holy Week," the previous week "Passion Week."

Passox Musc: Gregory Nazianzen (a.d. 330-390) is said to have first set forth the history of the Passion in a dramatic form.

Guidetti, in 1536, published music for this subject, which has been treated since by many composers.

The Bach's great "Passion Musik" first performed on Good Friday, 1729, has been revived with great success in this country, beginning with that "according to St. Matthew," 6 April, 1734.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE, the term used by the opponents of the Education Act, 1902, in justification of their action in refusing to pay the rate levied for education on the alleged ground that the act gives an unfair advantage to the schools of the established church, and to its clerics in the support of religious instruction. Early in the spring of 1903 many nonconformists in London and the provinces refusing, as they stated, on conscientious grounds to pay the rate their goods were seized and sold. Much agitation has resulted and still (1903) continues, see Education Acts 1902, 1903.

Summonses issued to end of 1903: in London, 5,093; in the provinces, 51,447; distress sales in London, 69; in the provinces, 2,163. legacies, 547; imprisonment, once, 168; twice, 42; thrice, 13; four times, 6; five times, 3.

The Duke of Edinburgh, p. Corder and Lamb, heard (1903) on appeal before the master of the rolls, and lords justices Stirling and Mathews, established, that the scale of costs under the act 56 Geo. III., c. 90, still applies, a result for which, and for the precedents, has been repeatedly by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 14, Distress for Rates act, 1849.

PASSMORE EDWARDS’ SETTLEMENT, Tavistock-square, St. Pancras, founded by Mr. Passmore Edwards with a gift of £15,000, the duke of Bedford 1500l, to promote education, &c., partially used since 9 Oct. 1847; opened by Mr. John Morley, 12 Feb. 1898. See Libraries.

The Passmore Edwards’s hall, built for the London university school of economics (Mr. Passmore Edwards gave 14,000l), lord Rothschild 500l., site granted by the London County Council in Clare market, Strand; opened by lord Rosebery 29 May. 1902.

PASSOVER, the most solemn festival of the Jews, instituted 1901 b.c. (Exod. xii.) in commemoration of their coming out of Egypt; because the night before their departure the destroying angel, who put to death the firstborn of the Egyptians, passed over the houses of the Hebrews without slaughtering any of their firstborn. It was celebrated in the new temple, 18 April, 515 b.c. Uher.

Passport System forbids subjects to quit one country or enter another without the consent of the sovereign thereof. In 1838 the system was somewhat changed in this country, and the stamp duty on passports was reduced from 5s. to 6d.

Passports were abolished in Norway in 1859; in Sweden in 1860; and (with regard to British subjects) in France, 16 Dec. 1860; in Italy, 26 June, 1862; in Portugal, 23 Jan. 1863; and are falling into disuse in other countries. The passport system was established in the United States on 19 Aug. 1815. The passport system, revived in France on a count of the war, 1 Aug. 1870, was abolished by M. Thiers, to April, 1872, in compliance with the wish of the British government.

PASTEL, a roll of paste made of different colours ground with gum water, used as a crayon. Pastel painting has been recently much practised on the Continent. The Society of British Pastellists, president sir Coutts Lindsay, first exhibited at the Grosvenor gallery, 18 Oct. 1893. Its members included Mr. Watts, Mr. Orchardson, and other eminent artists. Another started, exhibition at the Royal institute, Piccadilly, opened, 4 Feb. 1897.

PASTEUR INSTITUTE, Paris, see under Hydrophobia. The remains of M. Pasteur (died 28 Sept. 1895) transferred from Notre Dame to a crypt in the institute, 26 Dec. 1896. Monument to the memory of M. Pasteur, erected in the Place Breteuil, unveiled by president Loubet 16 July, 1904. Mr. Daniel Osiris left an income, producing 30,000l. to the institute.

PASTON LETTERS, the correspondence of a Norfolk family, 1422-83, giving a picture of social life in England, were edited by sir John Fenn, and published in five volumes, quarto, 1787-1823. Their authenticity was questioned Sept. 1865, but was satisfactorily vindicated by a committee of the Society of Antiquaries in May, 1860. Part of the MS. was soon after purchased by the trustees of the British Museum. The publication of a new edition, by James Gairdner, with additional letters, 1877-5. The MS. of the second series with other letters was published in 1875, by Mr. Freye, of Royalton Hall, near Diss, Norfolk. The MS. of the first series, long lost from the Royal Library, found in the library of col. Geo. Tomline at Orwell Park, who died 25 Aug. 1888, announced April, 1890.

PATAV (France), where Joan of Arc, the maid of Orleans, was present, when the earl of Richmond signally defeated the English, 18 June, 1429. Talbot was taken prisoner, and the valiant Fastolfe was forced to flee. In consequence, Charles VII. of France entered Rheims in triumph, and was crowned 17 July, following year, Joan of Arc assisting in the ceremony in full armour, and holding the sword of state, see Joan of Arc.

PATENT MEDICINES: received for stamps, year 1883-4, 150,239l. ; 1884-5, 231,892l. ; 1885-6, 331,439l. ; 1886-7, 327,160l. ; 1887-8, 315,580l.

PATENTS (from petur, I give open), licences and authorities granted by the king. Patents have been granted for titles, nobility in 1344, by Edward III. They were first granted for the exclusive privilege of printing books, in 1581. The property and right of inventors in arts and manufactures were secured by letters patent by an act passed in 1623. The latter laws regulating patents are very numerous; among them are, edited by sir will. IV. c. 29 (1825), and 43 & 44 Vict. c. 52 (1852). By the latter Commissioners of Patents were appointed, viz., the lord chancellor, the master of the rolls, the attorney-general for England and Ireland, the lord Patriotic Funds.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS. Established to encourage the army and navy in times of war.

1. Founded by the subscribers to Lloyd's, "to animate the efforts of our defenders by sea and land" by providing a fund for the relief of themselves when wounded, and of their widows and orphans, and for granting boundary rewards and badges of distinction for valor and merit. July 28, 1801; 24 Aug., 1809; 144,837 l. had been received, and 334,616 l. expended. From 1812 to 1826 the total sum received was 624,827 l. 400 l.

2. A commission was appointed to raise and distribute a fund bearing this name, for the relief of the families of those who might fall in the Russian-Turkish war. July 4, 1828. Funds were collected in London and throughout the empire, and were distributed to the families of those who had fallen in the war. 300,000 l. were appropriated to founding an asylum for 300 orphan girls (the Royal Victorian Patriotic Asylum) on Wandsworth common, the first stone of which was laid by Queen Victoria, 11 July, 1857.

A large fund contributed for the relief of the sufferers by the Indian mutiny, Aug. 1857, 44,720 l. collected up to Nov. 1857. An act for its administration was passed, 12 Aug. 1857, amended 1858. See India, 1857.

The allied military administration of the Patriotic Fund was brought before the house of commons by baron de Worms a Nov. 5 Aug. 1858, and in Jan. 1881.

Liberal subscriptions to the fund from Australia, under the title of the Australian soldiers fund, were sent in large numbers from the continent and the colonies, amounting to £171,756, in July, 1855; finally to £40,676, in Jan. 1874, 1,006,506 l. expended.

For the 1875-76 session this fund was connected with the Royal Patriotic Fund by an act, and regulations were framed, to arrange the procedure for the distribution of funds to the relief of soldiers, sailors, and their families in a new patriotic fund, proposed by the duke of Cambridge, 8 Jan. 1851.

PATRONE OF LIVING'S.

PAULIANISTS or PAULINIANS, followers of Paul, bishop of Samosata, afterwards patriarch of Antioch, 260, who are said to have denied Christ's divinity and the trinity; he was excommunicated 269 by a council at Antioch.

PAULIANS, a sect of Christian reformers, arose about 652. Although they were severely persecuted, they spread over Asia Minor, in the 7th century, and finally settled at Monfardt, in Italy, where they were attacked by the bishop of Milan in 1052, and they were finally dispersed; very probably sowing the seeds of the great reformation of the 16th century.

PAUL JONES, a Scotman, born 1742; died at Paris, 1792. He commanded an American privateer during the American war, and made daring depredations on British commerce. He pillaged the house of lord Selkirk, near Kirkend- bright, and at Whitewaken burnt shipping in the harbour, April 1778. The Dutch permitted Paul Jones to enter their ports with two British ships of war which he had taken, and which the staidholder peremptorily refused to deliver up, 1779.

His remains discovered in Paris and removed to the United States by a squadron of U.S. warships under the command of Mr. D. C. Sigsbee (see France). 500 naviculars escort the body from Paris to Chertsey, 7 July, 1855.

PAUL'S CROSS, ST. (London), which stood at the north side of the cathedral, was a pulpit formed of wood, mounted upon steps of stone, and covered with lead, from which the most eminent divines were appointed to preach every Sunday in the forenoon. To this place the court, the mayor, the aldermen, and principal citizens used to resort. It was in use as early as 1250, and was appropriated, not only to public preaching, but to political and ecclesiastical discourses. &c. The cross was demolished in 1643, by order of the parliament.

Mr. Henry C. Richards, R.C.A. M.P. for East Finsbury, 1847-1910, died 1 June, 1913, left 1 Nov., 1922, for the erection of a new cross on the site of the old cross.

PAUL'S SCHOOL, ST., was endowed in 1572, by John Colet, dean of St. Paul's, for 153 boys "of every nation, country, and class", in memory of the number of fishes taken by Peter (John xxi. 11). The first schoolhouse was burnt in 1666; the second, by Wren, was taken down in 1824, and another building erected by George Smith. William Lilly was the first master.

Tomb. The claim of the Mercers' company to be owners instead of trustees of Colet's estate was set aside by the vice-chancellor, 11 Feb., 1879. The school order to be removed to Westminster, 17th June, 1879, and the building occupied by Mr. Waterhouse opened by lord Selborne, 23 April, 1884. The number of scholars has been increased. New schemes for the management of the school were issued by the charity commissioners, 1876, 1878, and 1893; after much discussion and opposition a scheme was sent to the committee of council for approval, May, 1891; finally modified, July, 1891; new arrangement, Feb., 1891; further arrangement, 16 June, 1900, under which scheme it is now governed.

Organ erected by subscription in memory of the late prot. Dowett in large hall of the school, enclosed in new oak case with life-size bust of Dr. Dowett in centre, pitch pine boards round all round the walls and gallery of the hall replaced by oak panelling at the cost of 1,602, presented by the governors. Collection of engravings of distinguished old Paulines, presented by Dr. J. L. Collins-Morley, and placed above the oak panelling. Organ-case unveiled by Rev. P. Clement-Smith, master of the Mercers company, 5 Oct., 1904.

St. Paul's Industrial School, Mile End, ordered to be closed by the home secretary in consequence of serious charges against the managers; brought forward by Mrs. Surry, member of the metropolitan school board, Nov.; she is warmly commended in the home secretary's letter, 15 Nov.; who remitted the case to the public prosecutor. Nov., 1881, Mr. T. Scrutton, manager, sued Miss Helen Taylor, and obtained 1000l. for damages; the charges were withdrawn, 30 June, 1882.

PAUPERS, see Poor.

PAVAN, Pavane, or Pavin, was a slow dance of the 16th and 17th centuries, sometimes accompanied by singing.

PAVEMENT. The Carthaginians are said to have been the first who paved their towns with stones. The Romans, in the time of Augustus, had pavement in many of their streets; the Appian way, a paved road, was constructed 312 B.C. In England there were few paved streets before Henry VII.'s reign. London was first paved about 1533. It was paved with flagstones between 1815 and 1825; see Wood Pavement. Ashphalte has been much used since 1869. Wood reported to be the best for road paving in London, May, 1876, and is now (1875) extensively used for paving the leading thoroughfares in London, and other cities and large towns.

Granite or metal stone laid down in a plastic state in part of the Strand, London, and in other places. 1885 Tarred macadam, as a new and durable pavement at Hamilton, Ontario, reported successful, Nov., 1909.

PAVIA (N. Italy), the ancient Ticinum or Pontina. Its university, founded by Charlemagne, is said to be the oldest in Europe. Pavia was built by the Gauls, who were driven out by the Romans, and these in their turn were expelled by the Goths; in 588 it was taken by the Lombards, and became the capital of their kingdom. In the 12th century it was erected into a republic, but soon after was subjected to Milan and followed its fortunes. On 24 Feb., 1525, a battle was fought near here between the French and the Imperialists, when the former were defeated, and their king, Francis I., after fighting with heroic valour, and killing seven men with his own hand, was at last obliged to surrender himself a prisoner. It was long asserted that Francis wrote to his mother, Louisa of Savoy, regent of the kingdom, during his absence, saying, Tout est perdu, madame, 'fors l'honneur (All is lost, madam, except honour). The words are now said to have been, L'honneur et la vie qui est saulée.

PAWNBROKING. The Roman emperors lent money upon land. The origin of borrowing money by means of pledges deposited with lenders is referred to Perugia, in Italy, about 1402. The institutions were termed monti di pieta (which see). Soon afterwards it is said that the bishop of Winchester established a system of lending on pledges, but without interest. The business of pawnbrokers was regulated in 1756, and licences issued in 1783. The rate of interest on pledges was fixed in 1800. In London there were, in 1831, 334 pawnbrokers; and in England, exclusively of London, 1127; in 1899 there were 5,275 in the United Kingdom (England and Wales 4,197, Scotland 408 and Ireland 372). In the metropolitan district of London in 1860 an act was passed enabling pawnbrokers to charge for every ticket describing things pledged. The acts relating to pawnbrokers were amended in 1856, 1859, 1890. The law was consolidated in the pawnbrokers' act passed to Aug. 1872.

PAX, a small tablet, generally silver, termed, tabula pacis or osceulatorium, kissed by the Roman Catholic priests and laity; substituted for the primiaval kiss of peace in the early church. The pax is said to have been introduced about the 12th century.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL. In 1836 the army and navy pay departments were consolidated into the paymaster-general's office, sometimes held by a cabinet minister.

PEACE. A temple was dedicated to peace by Vespasian, 75; see Fireworks, Treaties, Justices, &c.—"Peace of Religion" (between catholics and protestants) was signed at Augsburg, 15 Sept. 1555.

A PEACE SOCIETY, founded 1836, for the promotion of universal peace; holds annual meetings; proposed amalgamation with the International Arbitration and Peace association (founded by Mr. Lewis Appleton in 1834). The association divided in May, 1862, when the British arbitration association was founded by Mr. Appleton.

A congress of the friends of peace, from all parts of the world, commenced its sitting at Paris, 22 Aug. 1892. It met in London at Exeter hall, 20 Oct. following; and at Frankfort, in St. Paul's church, 22 Aug. 1892; at Birmingham, 28 Nov. 1892; and at Exeter hall, 20 Nov. 1892, for many meetings and international congresses since.

Mr. Bright and Mr. Cobden were among the most conspicuous members of the society. A deputation from the Peace society, consisting of Messrs. J. Sturge, A. Pease, and another quaker speaker, stated their views to the emperor of Russia at St. Petersburg, at an interview granted them in Feb. 1894.

Storny international arbitration and peace congress held at Geneva; Garibaldi present 9-12 Sept. 1867.

At the peace congress held at Lausanne, the violence of the communists at Paris in May, was warmly deprecated 25 Sept. 1871.

The principle of arbitration in place of war was adopted by the Pan-American congress at Washington; a treaty was signed for several of the states 28 April, 1873.

PEDESTRIANISM. Embibas, a citizen of Plataea, is said to have gone from thence to Delphi to bring the sacred fire to the sanctuary, and returned with it the same day before sunset, having travelled 125 English miles. No sooner had he saluted his fellow citizens, and delivered the fire, than he fell dead at their feet. After the battle of Marathon, a soldier was sent from the field to announce the victory at Athens. Exhausted with fatigue, and bleeding from his wounds, he cried out, "O Iphicrates! we are conquerors!" and immediately expired.

Foster Powell, the English pedestrian, performed many astonishing journeys on foot. His expedition from London to York and back again, in 1788, is said to have been completed in 400 hours. Captain Barclay, for a wager (on which many thousands of pounds depended), walked 1000 miles in 1000 successive hours, each mile in each hour, in forty-two days and nights (less 3 hours). His task was accomplished on 10 July, 1809.

PEDIARDS, see hawkers. The pedlars act passed, Aug., 1871.

PEDEPIOMETER AND ODOROMETER, apparatus for measuring the distance traversed by a walker or carriage.

Odometers, or read-meters, are said to have been known in the 5th century; and improvements in their working were made by Galileo and Piver in 15th century, about 1678; and by Meynier, in France about 1747.

Wm. Grayson's odrometer, or read-measurer, to be attached to carriages, was patented 1831. Ralph Gounts' pedometer for indicating the steps taken by a walker, was patented 4 Nov., 1729.

Wm. Payne's pedometer for the waistcoat pocket, was patented 15 Feb., 1823.

Other improvements since.

PEEL ACTS. Among the most important were the Bank acts of 1819 and 1844; the amending the criminal laws, 1827; dividing parishes into districts, 1843, and the act repealing the corn laws in 1846.

PEEL ADMINISTRATIONS. The first succeeded the Melbourne administration, which was broken up on the retirement of lord Althorp, the chancellor of the exchequer, in Nov., 1834.

Sir Robert Peel was born 2 Feb., 1788; entered parliament in 1805, and was under-secretary of the colonies in 1811, chief secretary for Ireland in 1812; M.P. for Oxford in 1818 (when he resigned his office); secretary for home department in 1822; resigned office and re-appointed in 1823; resigned again in 1827; became premier in 1834 and 1844 (see above). He was thrown from his horse 29 June, and died 2 July, 1850. He greatly relaxed the severity of our criminal code in 1827 and 1835; established the Poor Law Board in 1834, and carried the emancipation bill in 1829, and the repeal of the corn laws in 1846. The 6th Act was erected to him—at Salado, in 1852; at Tamworth, Leurs, Burg, and Manchester, in 1853; and in London and Birmingham in 1855.
Sir R. Peel, then in Italy, was summoned home, the duke of Wellington holding the seals of office in the interim. They both resigned in April, 1835. In May, 1831, sir R. Peel carried a vote of want of confidence in the Melbourne cabinet, but did not take office; and in Sept. of that year, he became again premier. He lost the support of the conservative party by obtaining the repeal of the corn laws, and resigned 29 June, 1846.

FIRST ADMINISTRATION (Dec. 1834).

Sir Robert Peel, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer.

Lord Lyndhurst, lord chancellor.

Earl Grey, first lord of the admiralty.

Lord Ellenborough and Alexander Baring, board of control and trade.

Sir Edward Knatchbull, paymaster of the forces.

J. C. Herries, secretary of state.

Sir George Canning, president of the council, &c.

SECOND ADMINISTRATION (Sept. 1841).

Sir Robert Peel, first minister.

Duke of Wellington in the cabinet without office, &c. lord commissary-in-chief.

Lord Lyndhurst, lord chancellor.

Duke of Buckingham, lord privy seal (succeeded by duke of Bedford).

Sir James Graham, earl of Aberdeen, and lord Stanley, home, foreign, and colonial secretaries.

Henry Goulburn, chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl of Haddington, first lord of the admiralty.

Earl of Ripon, lord of trade (succeeded by W. E. Gladstone).

Lord Ellenborough, lord of the admiralty.

Sir Henry Hardinge, sir Edward Knatchbull, sir George Murray, &c.

[Terminated 29 June, 1846, by sir Robert's resignation.]

PEELITES, a name given to gentlemen, whigs and Tories, who adhered to sir Robert Peel, after his defeat by the conservative party, on account of his free trade measures carried in 1846. The prime ministers were Henry Goulburn, W. E. Gladstone, Sidney (afterwards lord) Herbert, sir James Graham, Edward Cardwell, sir George Clerk, lord Lincoln (afterwards duke of Newcastle), and lords Canning and Elgin, and others. Several of them became members of the Palmerston and Aberdeen administrations (which see).

PEEL PICTURES. The family collection (70) were purchased for the National gallery for 75,000l. 1871.

PEEP-O'-DAY-BOYS, insurgents in Ireland, who visited the houses of their antagonists at break of day, in search of arms. They first appeared 4 July, 1874, and were long the terror of the country; see Defenders.

PEERESSES of the United Kingdom (in their own right): 2 in 1852; 18 in 1880: viscountesses Hambledon and baronesses Amberth of Hackney, Beaumont, Berkeley, Birtwistle, Burton, Clifton, Crewe (earl), Strathearn, and St Clair (right of Powis), De Ros, Dacre, Faulconberg and Conyngham (countess of Yarborough), Gray, Hennebry (duchess of Norfolk), Kimbrough, Macdonald of Earnside, Melfort (countess), Wentworth.

PEERS, see Lords and Gentry.

PEGU, a province of the Burman empire, discovered by the Portuguese in 1520. Pego, the capital, was taken by major Cotton, with 300 men, in June, 1522, without loss; and afterwards abandoned. It was again occupied by the Burman and strongly fortified, with a garrison of 4000 men. It was recaptured by general Godwin with 1200 men and two guns, in two hours, with the loss of six killed and thirty-two wounded. The province was annexed to our Indian possessions, by proclamation, 20 Dec. 1852, and has since prospered. In Feb. 1862, it was united with Arracan and Tenasserim as British Burmah.

PEETHO, see China, 1859, 1860.

PEISHWA, the prime minister of the Mahrattas, seized the sovereign power and settled at Poonah, 1749. The title was abolished in 1818.

PEIWAR PASS (Ketul), in the Khoorom valley, Afghanistan. Here general (afterwards Lord) Roberts, with the 72nd highlanders and the Ghoooraks, defeated the Afghans, 2 Dec. 1878. Major Anderson and capt. Kelso were killed, and about 80 men were killed and wounded. Enemy lost heavily.

PEKIN, the capital of China, was built by Kuchelnng-Khan, grandson of Genghis-Khan, about 1267. Here was held the court of the Mongol or Yuan dynasty, and in 1280 to 1281, the capital of the Ming dynasty, removed to Nankin, which was the capital till Yung-lo removed his court to Pekin in 1410; and by him and his successors the city was enlarged, fortified, and beautified. It was visited by lord Macartney, Sept. 1793; surrendered to the allied English and French armies, 12 Oct. 1860; evacuated by them 5 Nov.; after peace had been signed 24 Oct. It was described as being in a very desolate state, and the inhabitants scattered and indigent. English and French representatives were settled at Pekin, March, 1861. Preliminary peace with France concluded here, 5 April, 1885. The famous temple or altar of heaven burnt 18 Sept. 1889. Population (estimated) 1,000,000.

PELAGIANS, followers of Pelagius, a Briton, appeared at Rome about 400. Their doctrines were condemned by councils at Jerusalem, Carthage, and other places, 415, 530. They maintained:

1. That Adam was by nature mortal, and whether he had sinned or not would certainly have died.
2. That the consequences of Adam's sin were confined to his own person.
3. That new-born infants are in the same condition with Adam before the fall.
4. That the law qualified men for the kingdom of heaven, and was founded upon equal promises with the gospel.
5. That the general resurrection of the dead does not follow in virtue of Christ's resurrection.

PELASGI, the primitive inhabitants of Asia Minor, Greece, and Italy, appear to have belonged to the Indo-Germanic race. They were in Greece about 1600 B.C., and in Italy about 1600 B.C. They have been termed Tyrrheni, Sicani or Siculi, Apuli, &c. From the Pelasgi came the Dorians, Pelasgi, and Ionians; all three being Hellenic or Greeks. The Pelasgi appear not to have had the art of writing, but have left numerous architectural remains; they were probably a wealthy, powerful, and intelligent people.

PELÉE, MONT. see Earthquakes.

PELEW ISLANDS (N. Pacific Ocean), discovered by the Spanish in the 17th century. The East India company's packet Antelope, captain Wilson, was wrecked here in 1753. The king, Abba Thulle, allowed captain Wilson to bring prince Le Boe, his son, to England, where he arrived in 1784, and died of the small-pox soon after. The last English convict erected a monument over his grave in Rotherhithe churchyard.

PELM ADMINISTRATION. Mr. H. Pelham replaced the earl of Wilmington as premier, 25 Aug. 1743; see Wilmington. In Nov. 1744, the following ministry was formed (termed "the broad bottom administration," because it comprehended a grand coalition of the parties). It was dissolved by the death of Mr. Pelham, 6 March, 1754.

Henry Pelham, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer.

Lord Hardwicke, lord chancellor.

Duke of Dorset, president of the council.

Earl Gower, lord privy seal.

Duke of Newcastle and the earl of Harrington, secretaries of state.

Duke of Montagu, master-general of the ordinance.

Duke of Bedford, first lord of the admiralty.

Duke of Grafton, lord treasurer.

Duke of Richmond, master of the horse.

Duke of Argyll, keeper of the great seal of Scotland.

Marquis of Tweeddale, secretary of state for Scotland.

All of the cabinet.

The duke of Devonshire and duke of Bolton were not of the cabinet.

PELLAGRA. A malady chiefly affecting the cultivators of the soil and, in recent times, extensively prevalent in Lombardy and other parts of northern Italy, the Asturias, Guascón, Rumania, and Corfu. The spread during recent years of this disease led to the formation, in London, of a committee for the investigation of its nature and causation. Dr. L. W. Sambon suggests that pellagra, like sleeping sickness, is dependent on the presence in the blood of a microscopical living organism, Feb. 1910. The Pellagra field commission proved that the cause of pellagra was not maize, but that the parasitic conveyor was Smadium repans. May, 1910

PELLS (from pelli, skin), receipts on parchment rolls deposited in the court of exchequer. By an act passed in 1534, the office of clerk of the pells was abolished, and a comptroller-general appointed. "Pell records," or "issues of the exchequer," or payments made out of his revenue by James I., were published by the government in 1856.

PELIOPIUM, see Niobium.

PELONPONNESUS (the island of Pelops), a peninsula, S. Greece, termed Morea in the 13th century, said to have been settled by Pelops about 1253 B.C. Peloponnesian War continued for twenty-seven years between the Athenians and the people of the Peloponnesus, with their respective allies, and is the most famous of the wars of Greece. It began by an attempt of the Boeotians to surprise Plataea, 431 B.C., on 7 May, and ended 404 by the taking of Athens by the Lacedaemonians.

PELOTA. The national ball game of the Basques, but, like the Basques themselves and their language, the origin is unknown. It is extensively played in Spain as well as the Basque provinces, and also in South America and Mexico. Pelota somewhat resembles racquets. Its distinctive feature is the chistera or basket, which takes the place of the racquet, a stickle-shaped, wickerwork instrument, 2 ft. long on the outer curve, and 4 or 5 in. wide, with a flange on each side of the inner curve, converting it into a curved scoop; the chistera is strapped firmly to the right wrist of the player, enabling him to send the ball with terrific speed against the wall of the court. The qualities of pace and endurance, combined with accuracy and skill, are essential to the game. Introduced into England by the Winter Club, Olympia, London, 4 Jan. 1896.

PELUSIUM (now Tebe), formerly Sin, the key of Egypt. Here, in 525 B.C., Ptolemy III. was defeated by Cambyses, the Persian, who thereby obtained possession of the kingdom. Pelusium surrendered to Alexander, 333; was taken by the Persians, 399; by Antiochus, 175; by Augustus, 30 B.C.; and after a protracted resistance by Ammon, the Saracen, A.D. 638.

PEMBROKE (S. Wales). A county palatine till 1536. The royal dockyard at Milford was moved to Pembroke in 1814. Pembroke College and Hall, see under Oxford and Cambridge. Population, 1901, 15,853; 1909, 16,438.

PENAL LAWS, see Criminal Laws and Roman Catholics. Penal Servitude was substituted for transportation by act passed in 1853 and 1857, and amended in 1864. A penal servitude commission appointed, 22 Jan. 1878.

First session of the International Penal Law union, opened at Brussels. 7 Aug. 1829. The Penal Servitude acts, 1853 et seq. combined by act passed. 5 Aug. 1857.

PENANCE, a sacrament in the Roman church, arose out of the practice of auricular confession (which see). The council of Trent, in its 14th session (1551), decreed that every one is assured who shall affirm that this sacrament was not instituted by Christ.

PENANG, or PRINCE OF WALES'S ISLAND, was given up to the East India company in 1786, by captain F. Light, who received it as a marriage portion with the daughter of the king of Kedah. After several changes it became one of the Straits Settlements (which see).

PENDULUM. The isochronous property of the pendulum is said to have been applied to clocks by Galileo about 1589, and by Richard Harris about 1641. Christian Huygens claimed this discovery, 1658. See Clocks. George Graham invented the compensating pendulum, 1715. Experiments were made to determine the density of the earth by pendulums by Mr. (aft. sir) G. B. Airy (aftds. astronomer-royal), and others, in a mine in Cornwall, in 1820 and 1828; and at Horton colliery 1854. In 1854, M. Foucault demonstrated the rotation of the earth by the motion of a pendulum.

PENTENTIARIES. The London Female Penitentiary, Pentonville-road, was established in 1857; and the British Penitent Female Refuge at Cambridge heath, Hackney, in 1850. The Church Penitentiary association, founded 1851: many others since. International penitentiary congresses held, first in London, 1872, at other capitals since. See Millbank.
The Pennsylvania (X. America), the first state in the Union in regard to mineral wealth. The settlement by the Swedes here in 1643, was taken by the Dutch in 1655, and acquired by the English in 1663. Pennsylvania was afterwards purchased from the Indians by the celebrated William Penn (son of Admiral Penn), who went out from England with a number of colonists in 1682; from which period the settlement gradually increased. Mr. Penn granted a charter in May, 1701, but the emigrants from the Low Countries refused it, and separated themselves from the province of Pennsylvania. They afterwards had their own assembly, in which the governor of Pennsylvania presided. This state adopted an independent constitution in 1776. See also: Jan. 1786. Capital: Harrisburg, principal cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. (Which see.) It was strongly unionist during the civil war, 1861-5; see United States of America and Petrology. For strikes see United States, 1875, 1882. Population in 1860, 2,906,576; 1870, 6,392,115; 1890, 9,932,436.

Several days' violent storms and heavy rain in the Allegheny chain required the river and caused the overflow of the lakes. May, 1885. At 3 p. m. May, the South Fork reservoir, a lake about 4 miles square, burst the dam, and a mass of water washed into the South Fork, 4 miles by the deep cirque of Conemaugh valley, to its junction with the Conemaugh river, driving all before it. For a distance of about 1 mile the town of Johnstown was completely swept out, towns and villages, destroying all the bridges, railways, and factories. South Fork, Johnstown, Cambria city, Morriceville, Sherman, and other flourishing towns were completely blotted out. A great mass of floating wreckage, which was stopped by a stone railway bridge at Johnstown, took fire; above five hundred persons, who were hurled on the burning mass, perished. No one was saved. (July 6.)

The most zealous measures were taken by the government, by several states, and by the railway companies for the relief of the sufferers, and for averting imminent danger. The Philadelphia and Wheeling Railroad officers and the dead and living were buried by a vigilance committee. Troops were sent to maintain order, liberal subscriptions were made, and aid of every kind was rendered. June 28. It is stated that the dam had previously given visible signs of its being in a very insecure condition, and had not been properly constructed. Several towns and villages submerged, June; many bridges swept away; above 1500 deaths reported.

Penny in a theatre at Johnstown, 10 persons killed, many injured. (Dec. 29.)

At Hartsgrove, west, the Wyoming valley, 23 men were wounded and 6 perished by a cannon explosion. (May 1?)

A cyclone in the Wyoming valley and neighbor- ing districts caused loss of life and extensive destruction of property, reported 3 March; desperate light, men killed, 2 April; soldiers maintaining order, 3 April; rioting renewed, death of 4 reported, 19 April.

A train containing 22 men thrown off the line while rushing through a burning forest near Conners- port, Potter county; 5 men killed, many injured. About 12 May.

After heavy rains, when the river had become torrents, early on 4 June, a cloud burst over the Pittsburg oil region, causing great inundations.

At Titusville the tanks of oil and distilled benzene were upset and were ignited by lightning and the fire was spread. A flaming stream with floating wreckers was carried all before it, bursting all bridges. Explosions followed, causing a panic, and the people fled to the hills, women and children being trampled on during the rush. The heavy river reached Oil city, 13 miles distant, and a large part of it was reduced to ashes or sub- merged. About 150 persons were either drowned or burnt at Titusville, and about 200 missing. The loss of life was estimated at $3,000,000. June 6th, 1892.

Strike of about 60,000 colliers for an advance of 20 cents per ton, reported 20 April; subsidence of the strike reported. 10 June, 1894.

Forest fire in the North oilfields, several small towns destroyed, reported. 4 June, 1895.

Railway collision near Atlantic city, on the Penn- sylvania railway, 36 deaths. 30 July, 1896.

The capitol at Harrisburg burnt down 2 Feb., 1897. A body of foreign miners on strike, refusing to disperse, fired on by order of sheriff Martin, 22 killed, near Hazelton, 10 Sept.; strike over, men's terms agreed on, 12 Sept.; further rioting, 15, 20 Sept.

Sheriff Martin and 82 deputy-sheriffs tried for the death of miners (10 Sept.); 1, Feb. 1898, acquitted.

Railway Riot at Shamokin in connection with coal strike; troops sent to restore order. 30 July, 1892.

Part of a body of colliers on plantations were to be sent to mine workings; 2 buildings burnt. 2 Jan. 1893.

43 Italians killed, 27 injured by conflagration of a large shanty at Lily and Connoquenessing, Pennsylvania university conferred the degree of Bachelor of Letters. 1st on king Edward VII. 16 April 1906.

Trial of state officials in connection with defrauding the state of vast sums. 28 Jan. 1898.

At the trial, the bank was indicted on charges of using false paper money, and fines and penalties were ordered to be paid.

PENNIES. The ancient silver penny was the first silver coin struck in England, and the only one current among the Anglo-Saxons. The penny until the reign of Edward I. was struck with a cross, so deeply impressed that it might be easily parted into two for halfpence, and into four for farthings, and hence these names. Copper penny and two-penny pieces were coined by Boulton and Watt, at Soho, Birmingham, in 1798, and were accounted the finest of our copper currency; see Coins, &c.—Penny-Post; see Post-office. — The PENNY CYCLOPEDIA. — 1853 (supplements in 1856 and 1858). The Penny stamp was introduced in 1840 (postage stamps authorised to be used for receipts after 1 June, 1881), and in 1848 a penny stamp was directed to be placed on bankers' cheques.—Penny Banks (in 1801 about 200) were established about 1850. They have become numerous, and in 1878 were authorised to invest their funds.—Penny Readings, for the working classes, became general in 1859. Carpenter's "Penny Readings," published in 1856-7. "Penny Poets," &c.; Mr. W. T. Stead began the series with Macaulay's "Laws of Ancient Rome," price one penny, May, 1895.

The value of the Penny (mentioned Matt. xx. 2), according to some, was estimated at 7/6. of our money, by the Barbour School of children, organisation proposed at Society of Arts; 6 Dec., 1824, see Indigent Children.

PENRODDUCK'S REBELLION on behalf of Charles H. was suppressed, and colonel John Penruddock himself executed, 16 May, 1655.

PENSIONS. The crown's power of granting them, often much abused, was materially checked by statute 1 Anne, c. 1 (1702), see Poor, 1893-5.

For past pensions were granted to the dukes of Grafton, Richmond, Marlborough, and many others in the 17th and 18th centuries.
mode of thought of the prophetic writings, and those indicating the interests and ideas of the priesthood, led to the inference that the Pentateuch was compiled from various sources. This found expression in the views of some medieval Jewish scholars, as Ibn Ezra; of Roman Catholics, as Andreas de Prescis (17th cent.), and by philosophers, as Spinoza (17th cent.). Jean Astruc, a Belgian physician (1753), may be regarded as the inaugurator of modern criticism on the subject. He distinguished two great sources—A the Elohist, and B the Jehovistic, and to smaller writings; the compilation of these he attributed, however, to Moses.
(His hypothesis was introduced into Germany by Eichhorn). Investigations of the documents and hypotheses founded on them were carried on by Eichhorn, then, Guille, De Wette, Bleek, Delitzsch, Ewald, Schrader, Hopf, Kuenen, Wellhausen, and other scholars, giving rise to the "Older Document Hypothesis," the "Fragment Hypothesis," the "Supplementary Hypothesis," the "Cristalization Hypothesis," and the "Modern Document Hypothesis," which regards the Pentateuch as composed of 4 principal elements: P the Priestly Code, the older Elohist (the "Grundschrift" of Wellhausen); E the second Elohist; J the Jahwistic, and D the Deuteronomist, designed by some critics A, B, C, D respectively. Scholars differ as to the relative age of the Jahwist and Elohist documents. The Deuteronomist, who composed the law-book found in the book of Joshua, Judges, Samuel,
I and II Kings (near the 9th cent.), is third in point of time; the Priestly Code is regarded as the latest of these writings, and is post-exilic. See Kuenen's "Historicocritical Inquiry into the Origin and Composition of the Hexateuch," Driver's "Literature of the Old Testament," G. A. Smith's "Modern Criticism and the Proclaiming of the Old Testament," "Founders of the Old Testament Criticism," Wellhausen's "De Komposition des Hexateuchs."

PENTECOST signifies the fiftieth, and is the solemn festival of the Jews, called also "the feast of weeks," because it was celebrated fifty days, or seven weeks after the feast of the Passover, 114 p. b. c. (Lev.

PEOPLE. The duke of Norfolk and C. J. Fox, at a dinner in 1758, gave a toast "the majesty of the people," and when their names were struck off the list of privy councillors. A "people's petition" was presented to parliament by Mr. T. Duncombe, and rejected, 2 May, 1812. "People's Parks," principally through private liberty, have been opened since 1843, at Manchester, Halifax, Bir-ingham, Sheffield, Dundee, Bradford, Hull, Bath, Bristol, Liverpool, Leeds, and other towns (whence

PERCY FAMILY. William de Percy obtained lands in Yorkshire from William the Conqueror, and died at Athol about 1066. The heir of the last baron Percy married Josephine de Courtenay, granddaughter of Geoffrey, duke of Brabant, in the reign of Henry II. — 1549. He was descendant of Sir Henry de Percy, their first lord of the manor of Percy, in the parish of Northumberland, and was created earl of Northumberland in 1687.

Many of his descendants were slain during the wars of the Roses. Lady Elizabeth Percy, the heiress of Josephine de Percy, married Sir Charles, duke of Somerset. Lady Elizabeth Percy, heiress of her son Alen Percy, was married to Charles, duke of Somer- set. Their descendant, duke of Alen, died without issue, 12 Feb., 1862, and was succeeded by his son, George Percy, earl of Beverley, who died 22 Aug., 1867; succeeded by George Alen; 1867-1887.

PERIPLUS. The voyage of Hanno, the Carthaginian navigator, about the third century B.C. His account of his travels, written in the Punic language, was translated into Greek; an English translation, edited by Falconer, in London, 1797.

PERJURY. The early Romans threw the offender headlong from the Tarpeian precipice; and the Greeks set a mark of infamy upon him. After the empire became Christian, any one who swore falsely upon the Gospels, was to have his tongue cut out. The canons of the primitive church enjoined eleven years' penance; and in some states the false swearer became liable to the punishment he charged upon the innocent. In England perjury was punished with the pillory, fine, and imprisonment, 1672. The Abolition of Oaths bill, persons making a false declaration are deemed guilty of a misdemeanour; Act 5 & 6 Will. IV, cc. 60 and 61, 9 Sept. 1855; a perjury bill was read a second time, 2 April, 1895. Perhaps the greatest perjurier in modern times was Titus Oates; see Oates. PETEELBURG, ST., the modern capital of Russia, founded by Peter the Great, 27 May, 1703.

He built a small hut for himself, and some wooden hovels. In 1710, the count Golovkin built the first house of brick; and the next year, the emperor, with his own hands, laid the foundation of a house of the same material. The seat of empire was transferred from Moscow to this place in 1712. Here, in 1736, a fire consumed 2000 houses; and in 1760, another fire consumed 11,000 houses; this last fire was occasioned by lightning. Again, in June, 1799, a large magazine of naval stores and 100 vessels were destroyed. The winter palace was burned, 24 Dec, 1811. The railway from Moscow was finished in 1851; to Berlin, opened 5 May, 1862. On June 1862, property to the amount of nearly a million sterling was destroyed by fire. Population, 1860, 1,285,435; 1890 (est.), 4,135,507.

PETEEL'S CHURCH ST. (Rome), originally erected by Constantine, 306. About 1450, pope Nicholas V. commenced a new church. The present magnificent pile was designed by Bramante: the first stone laid by pope Julius II. in 1566. In 1864, Leo X. employed Raphael and two others to superintend the building. Paul III. committed the work to Michael Angelo, who devised the dome, in the construction of which 30,000 lbs. of iron were used. The church was consecrated 18 Nov, 1626. The front is 400 feet broad, rising to a height of 180 feet, and the majestic dome ascends from the centre of the church to a height of 324 feet; the length of the interior is 1,000 feet, forming one of the most spacious halls ever constructed. The length of the exterior is 660 feet; its greatest breadth within is 422 feet; and the entire height from the ground 522 feet. Renewal of the leaden envelope completed, July, 1884.

PETROPAULOVSKI, a fortified town on the east coast of Kamtschatka, was attacked by an English and French squadron, 30 Aug. 1854. They destroyed the batteries, but failed to capture some Russian frigates, except the Sibka, a store-ship taken by the French. A school for seamen, named after the French Admiral Price, was killed, it is supposed by the accidental discharge of his own pistol. A party of 700 sailors and marines landed to assault the place, but fell into an ambuscade; many were killed, including captain Parker and M. Bourassé, French and English officers. The objects of the attack were not attained. After this the Russians greatly strengthened their defences, but on 30 May, 1855, the allied squadron in the Pacific arriving here found the place deserted. The fortifications were destroyed, but the town was spared. The Russian ships escaped.

The Philippine commercial company was unsuccessful, 1785. Population, 1890 (Est.), 8,32,660.

Mr. John Foreman's "Philippine Islands" was published by Fields, Tannen, and Company, 1845. The natives rebelled against Spanish rule, and from 1868 to 1874 fighting between the natives and the Spanish troops was almost continuous and sanguinary. The rebels submitted in return to new governors, 1875; but again rose against authority, 1877. The rebels were suppressed by the government, 1878. The government of the islands taken over by the United States, 1898; see American Occupation.

PHILIPPIANS. The four epistles of the New Testament addressed to the Christian Church at Philippi. The date of the letter is disputed, but the general opinion is that it was written from prison shortly before the second and third epistles, about A.D. 67. The writer of the epistle is St. Paul the Apostle. The three epistles were written at Rome, Philippi, and Ephesus; the fourth letter was written from prison in Rome. The first epistle of the Philippians is the most celebrated of the four, and is frequently referred to in the writings of the Church. The second and third epistles are both addresses to the Christians at Philippi, and the fourth letter is addressed to the Christians at Rome.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE, see Alchemy.

PHILOSOPHICAL LAMP, constructed by Johann Wolfgang Dobriner, who applied in it the property possessed by spongy platinum of causing the combination of oxygen and hydrogen, discovered by him in 1723.

PHILOSOPHY (from of wisdom), the knowledge of the reason of things (distinguished from history, the knowledge of facts, and from mathematics, the knowledge of the quantity of things) — the hypothesis or system upon which natural effects are explained. Locke. Pythagoras first adopted the name of philosopher (such men having been previously called magi) about 528 B.C. Philosophers were expelled from Rome, and their schools suppressed, by Domitian, A.D. 85. Philosophy is now divided into: 1. Moral or Ethical; 2. Intellectual; 3. Natural or Physical.

MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL PHILOSOPHY.

Ancient and Modern. The Fathers (which are) contain what is now considered to be the most ancient moral philosophy, the science of later systems, about the sixth or seventh century, prof. Max Muller, March, 1854. Hesiod, about 520 B.C. Plato, about 524; Aristotle, (the Academy), by Plato, 347; Porphyry (the Lyceum), by Aristotle, 314. Sept., by Pyrrho, 334. Cynic by Diogenes, 335. Epicurean by Epicurus, 306. Stoic, by Zeno, 260. Mobile Academy, by Arcaden, 275. New Academy, by Carneades. Epictetus. New Platonists (who attempted to substitute the Platonism with Christianity). Ammonius Saccas, about 241; Plotinus, died about 270; Porphyry, died about 303; Iamblichus, died about 333. Julian the emperor, died 363.

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

PHIPPS'S EXPEDITION. The hon. captain Phipps (afterwards lord Mulgrave) sailed from England in command of the Sea-Horse and Courageous ships, to make discoveries, as near as possible to the North Pole. In August 1773, he was for nine days environed with barriers of ice, in the Frozen Ocean, north of Spitzbergen, 80° 48' N. lat. A black wind in two or three days accomplished their deliverance. They returned to England without having made any discoveries, 20 Sept., 1773. Nelson was coxswain to the second in command.

PHILOGISTON, a term employed by Stahl to designate the hypothetical matter or principle of fire; "the indammable principle" of bishop Watson, near the close of the 17th century. The chemical theory based upon it was refuted by Lavoisier, 1790, who substituted for it the theory of oxygenation.

PHOCIS, a state in Northern Greece. The Phocians seized Delphi 357 B.C., and commenced the second Sacred War. They were opposed by Thebes and other states, and were utterly subdued by Philip II. of Macedon in 356. By the excavations of the British school of archaeology at Abu Simbel, the remains of two ancient temples of Apollo, with relics of bronzes, inscriptions, &c., and at Hyampolis, a shrine of Artemis (Diana), &c., were discovered, reported, 30 Aug. 1894.

PHOENICIA, on the sea coast of Syria. The natives were the most eminent navigators and traders of antiquity, their cities or allied states being Tyre, Sidon, Byblos, Tripoli, Byblos, and Ptolemais, or Acre. From the 19th to the 13th centuries before Christ, they established colonies on the shores or isles of the Mediterranean — Carthage, Hippo, Utica, Gades, and others, which are said to have visited the British Isles. Phoenicia was conquered by Cyrus, 539 B.C.; by Alexander, 322; by the Romans, 47; and after partaking of the fortunes of Palestine, was added to the Ottoman empire, A.D. 1510. See Sidon and Tyre.

PHENIX CLUBS. of a treasonable character, were formed in Ireland in 1838. They met at night to drill. Several persons were arrested and tried in March, 1839, at Tralee; but the jury could not agree on their verdict. Daniel Sullivan was condemned to penal servitude for ten years, April, 1839. Eventually some of the prisoners pleaded guilty, and were discharged on being bound over to keep the peace.
PHENIX PARK. A beautiful park, 1,327 acres, in Dublin; for the murders here see Ireland, 1882-3, 1890.

PHONEIDOSCOPE, an instrument for observing the colour-figures of liquid films under the action of sonorous vibrations, being a visible demonstration of the vibratory and molecular motion of a telephone plate; invented by Mr. Sedley Taylor, 1877; manufactured by S. C. Tilsley & Co., London, 1878.

PHONO-CINEMA, a combination of the phonograph and cinematograph, which preserves the face, voice and gestures of living beings, displayed at the Paris exhibition, June 6th 1900.

PHONOGRAPH, a machine proposed to be attached to pianofortes and other key-box instruments, by which any music that is played may be written down on blank paper, since it rules and prints the notes simultaneously. It was patented by Mr. F. Enby, 13 June, 1863. The motive-power is electro-magnetism. Machines with a similar object were projected by Mr. Creed in 1847; Mr. J. F. Unger in 1774; and by Mr. Carrey in 1827. See Telephonograph.

A new phonograph by Thomas Alva Edison, electrician and phonographer, was announced, Dec. 1877. Linear indentations are made by means of a pin in a sheet of tin foil by speaking or singing; and from these casts may be taken. When these are placed upon the diaphragm of a telephone connected with revolving apparatus, the sounds may be reproduced with a weirdlike effect. Improved by Mr. Sherwood Babbell, 1880. See Telephonograph.

A greatly improved instrument by Mr. Edison patented for postal communication, announced, 21 Nov. 1879; successful experiments reported, 12 May, 1880. Professor Graham Bell's phonograph, a modification of Edison's phonograph, was announced, Nov. 1887.

Mr. Emile Berliner (of Washington) announced his gramophone, a modification of Loue Scott's phonograph, Nov. 1887.

The phonograph and graphophone were both exhibited to the British Association at Bath, Sept. 1882. Exhibitions of Mr. Edison's greatly improved phonograph, possessing perfect in the record, reproduction and preservation of sounds of all kinds (wax is used in place of tin foil) Nov. 1888 et seq.

Mr. Edison receives photographs from the duke of Cambridge, Mr. Gladstone, and others - Jan. 1885, Mr. Dugald Clerk, Surgeon, one of the words, by means of a concealed phonograph and clockwork, were exhibited at the Savoy Hotel, Westminster, 25 July; Edison's phonograph at the Royal Institution, July, 1890.

Mr. Edison adapts his phonograph to a water motor as well as electricity - reported Sept.

The paper, by Mr. Moriarty, transmits a phonograph, containing a message, to the president of the United States, and received, March, 1893. Many improvements made...

PHONOGRAPHY is the name given by sir Isaac Pitman (born 4 Jan., 1813, died 22 Jan., 1897) to the secretarial edition of his shorthand system in 1891; see Spelling Reform. The system has been adapted to and published in twelve European and Oriental languages; and many periodicals are issued in character in Britain and America.

"Phonographic, or Writing by Sound," published - 1 Jan. 1840.

"Phonetic Journal" (now "Pitman's Journal") commenced - 1 Jan. 1842.

Phonetic society established - 1 March, 1843 (Isaac Pitman sec. till Society dissolved in 1842).

Popular class-book (afterwards "Phonographic Teacher") first published - 1842.

PHONOPORE, an arrangement of telegraph wires to facilitate transmission of sound, by checking the influence of adjoining wires, the invention of Mr. C. J. Eatons Davis, announced, May, 1886. See Telegraphs.

PHONO-SCOPE, an apparatus for testing the quality of musical strings, invented by Dr. Rudolph Köenig, and exhibited at the International Exhibition in 1862. He died, aged 68, 2 Oct. 1901.

Mr. Edmund's phonoscope, exhibited to the British Association, Aug., 1878, is an instrument for producing figures and light from the vibrations of sound.

The name phonoscope is given to an apparatus used by M. M. G. Damoy in photographing the lips of a speaker and the surrounding images that are produced that they may be understood by a deaf mute, June, 1872. See Telegraphs, 1871.

PHOSPHOR-BRONZE, an alloy of copper, tin, and phosphorus, invented by Messrs. Montefiore-Levi and Küenzel, of Belgium, in 1857. It is very hard, ductile, and elastic, with a colour resembling gold.

PHOSPHORESCENCE. The property possessed by some bodies of retaining luminosity after exposure to light observed by the ancients; especially noticed by Vitruvius. Verulamius (1642), Boyle, Canton, Wilson, and others; and specially studied by Edmond Becquerel, and Balmain, See Luminescent Paints, Air (footnote).

PHOSPHORUS was discovered in 1669, by Braudt, of Hamburg, who procured it from urine. The discovery was prosecuted by John Kenkel, a saxon chemist, about 1670, and by the hon. R. Boyle about the same time. Now, Dict. Phosphoric acid is first mentioned in 1743, but is said to have been known earlier. Gahn pointed out its existence in bones in 1790, and Scheele devised a process for extracting it. Canton's phosphorus is so called from its discoverer. 1768. Phosphorescent water was discovered by Guenzember in 1812. The consumption of phosphorus has immensely increased since the manufacture of phlegm matches. In 1834, Schrotter, of Vienna, discovered a phosphorescent amorphous phosphorus, which ignites more slowly and is less unwholesome in working than ordinary phosphorus.

Mr. S. A. Rosenthal and dr. J. J. von Komecki succeed in preparing matches without yellow phosphorus, reported...

PHOTOGRAPHY. The action of light on chloride of silver was known as early as the 16th century. The phenomenon was studied by Scheele (1777), Senecior (1790), Ritter and Wollaston (1801). From the results of the investigations, experiments were made by Thos. Wedgewood and Humphry Davy, in the Royal Institution, London, which were published in its Journal, 1802. Wedgwood may be regarded as the first photographer. His paper was entitled "an account of a method of copying paintings upon glass, and of making profiles by the agency of light upon nitrate of silver."

Further discoveries were made by Niepce in 1824, and sir J. Herschel in 1826.

Louis J. M. Daguere commenced his experiments in 1823, and in 1825 joined Joseph Nicephore Niepce, and worked with him till the death of the latter in 1833. The production of daguerreotypes plates was announced in Jan. 1829; and the French chamber of deputies granted a pension to Daguerre and to Niepce's son Isidore.
PHOTOGRAPHY

In 1843, Mr. Henry Fox Talbot first published his mode of multiplying photographic impressions by producing negatives on paper, with the light and shades reversed, which, on number of positive copies were produced by the photographer and patented for producing the same. Talbot's name is associated with the development of photography, and he is often credited as the father of the medium.

In 1851, daguerrotype (a closed copper plate) was applied to photography by Mr. F. Archer.

In 1852, the daguerreotype of Chancellor, Transylvania, was photographed by Tildesley.

Photographs on glass and paper, and specimens of photographs, were exhibited at the Photographic Institute at Bonam, March 1852.

The Photographic Society of London was established in 1852. It publishes a journal. On 22 Dec. 1852, 273 specimens of photography were exhibited at the Society of Arts, Alderley. 42nd annual report of the same, very successful: at Sept. of that year, congress held, New gallery, Regent-street, 9 May, 1853. A daguerreotype of a person (who is sometimes supposed to have been for photography) by Mr. Beechey, of Manchester, in the spring of 1856.

Mr. H. van der Weyde, an American artist, succeeded in making electric light very effective in photography.

Photographs of the first page of the Times, containing many full-length advertisements (4 inch long by 1 inch wide), sent to Paris from Bordeaux by balloons, Jan. 1855.

Cameras ordered to be photographed by the act for prevention of crime, May 1857.

Camera invented by Dr. Francis, of Oxford, is photographing by the solar eclipse, since then the progress of photography has greatly increased its usefulness and work.

The Electric Flash-photographs invented by father Parish, to be seen in U.S.A., for measuring star distances.

Photograph sent to the heavens by MM. Paul and Trousseau, France, 1856.

Invention of the daguerreotype by Mr. Niépce, of France, in 1857.

The daguerrotype, as was described, in the photographic society, by MM. Niépce and Laveley, succeeded by MM. Niépce and Le Gras in 1857.

In 1857, M. M. Niépce and Laveley, discovered the method of producing photographs: the first of its members transferred by arrangement to the Boulevard club, St. James's square, Sept. 1857.

M. Lippmann, discoverer of the methods of photography, announced, at a sitting of the French academy of sciences, his discovery of a method for producing photographs in relief, and obtained by the photographic society of London the patent of the sensitive plate with a film of collodion marked with an immense number of minute crossed lines produced by a machine, 2 March, 1857.

At the Paris academy of sciences, M. Niépce gave particulars of a discovery by Mr. Ducray, Chaudron, of a method of photographing the sounds of the human voice with sufficient precision to enable the actor to become himself.

M. Niépce gives on Tuesday, Dec. 1857, gave particulars of their success in photographing sounds; the delicate peculiarities of the voice, such as hissing were produced with distinct voices.

Photograph taken, an apparatus for registering the position of the sun's spots, by means of clockwork and photography, created at the suggestion of Mr. John Herschel at Kew observatory about 1857. It was made by Mr. H. F. Page, French De RV in 1875, by the disc of the sun during the eclipse of 18 July, 1858.

Photographanography, the art of producing engravings by the action of light and electricity. The earliest specimens were produced by Niepce. Neipée, etc.

PHYSIC.

PHYSIC appears to have been first practised by the Egyptian priests. Pythagoras endeavoured to explain the philosophy of disease and the action of medicine, about 529 B.C. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, flourished about 422 B.C., and Galen, born A.D. 131, was the oracle of medical science. About 690 A.D., a man named Harvey, wrote a system of medicine. Dr. R. Quain’s Dictionary of Medicine, published 1882, 3rd edition issued 1902. See Medical.

The botanical age of medicine lasted till the Reformation, when it was attacked by Paracelsus (1493-1541), and Vesalius (1514-1564), and medical practice has been completely transformed by physiological and chemical research.

The discovery of the circulation of the blood, by Dr. Harvey, furnished an entirely new system of physiological and pathological speculation, 1628. See Medical and Societies.

PHYSICAL TO THE KING. — John, the king’s chaplain and physician (afterwards bishop of Bath and Wells), mentioned 1090.

The earliest mandate or warrant for the attendance of a physician at court is dated 1541, and Henry VI, a reign fertile in the patronage which was afforded to practitioners in medicine; but no appointment existed which can justly be called physician to the royal person. By this warrant the king, with the consent of his privy council, deputed to three physicians and two surgeons the regulation of his diet, and the administration of such medicines and remedies as might be sufficient for his cure, without any allusion to the previous existence or permanency of the office which they were authorised for a time till, to a remuneration for their service in the king’s service. L. D. Doc. Miss Garrett (formerly Mrs. Anderson) licensed at Apothecaries’ hall, London, to practise medicine, Feb. 1805.

At a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, 3 May, 1859, it was resolved that the “Royal Society of Medicine” (including the various sections) be founded: the resolution was affirmed, 24 Feb. 1870; but in 1871 the project dropped.

School of Medicine for Women in London (council: Professors Burdon-Sanderson and Huxley, Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M.D., Mrs. Blackwell, M.D., and others); opened, Oct. 1874.

Registration of medical women, permitted by Medical Act, 39 & 40 Viet. c. 11, 11 Aug. 1857.

Queen Victoria laid the foundation of the Medical Examination hall on the Victoria embankment, 24 March, 1851.

The curriculum for medical students changed from 4 to 6 years; 1850, Oct. 1853.

London school of tropical medicine promoted by the liberality of Mr. Chamberlain, coll. sec., Dec. 1852; established in the London Docks; good research work, reported, 3 Nov. 1892, & 1897.

Goldsmiths’ may make a grant of 1000l. to the institute of medical science fund, university of London, March, 1906.

Death of Sir H. Pitman, late registrar of the college of physicians, who attained his sixteenth year in July last, 6 Nov. 1906.

Mr. Otto Beit increased the fund of 5000l. left by his brother, Mr. Otto Beit, for the endowment of medical research to 215,000l. for the purpose of establishing Beit Memorial fellowships for medical research, Dec. 1909.

Dr. C. Graham, formerly professor of chemistry at university college, London, who died on 15th November, left the residue of his estate, about 35000l., to the senate of the university of London to found a fund to be known as the “Charles Graham Medical Research Fund,” Dec. 1909.

PHYSIC

PHYSIOGNOHY, a science which affirms

the dispositions of mankind may be discovered from the features of the face. The origin of the term is referred to Aristotle; and Cicero was attached to the science. It became a study from the beginning of the 16th century; and in the 18th century the essays of Le Cat and Per-36th led to the modern system.

J. K. Lavater, who endeavoured to raise physiognomy to the rank of a science, published his celebrated work "Physiognomische Fragmente," 1775-78, of which an English translation by Holcroft was published in 1793.
The subject was considered by C. R. Darwin in his work "Expression of the emotions in Man and Animals," 1872, and by Mantegazza in his "Physiog-nomie and Expression," 1896.

PHYSIOLOGY is that part of physics which treats of the inner constitution of animals and plants, and the several functions and operations of all their organs and tissues. The works of Müller, Milo-Edwards, Huxley, Carpenter, Virchow,

Brown-Squard, Helmholtz, Ludwig, Du Bois-
Reymond, Salomon Stricker Rutherford and sir
John Bucknill are much celebrated, and Todd's
"Cyclopaedia of Physiology" (1836-39) is a library in its-1f. Physiological Society, in London, founded by Dr. Burdon-Sanderson (bapt. 1859) and others, early in 1873; see Anatomy, Biology, Morphology, Royal Institution. International congresses of physiology have been held since 1888.

By means of the Rouget rays the action of the heart and vessels in a living human body were made visible at a meeting in Munich. 6 Aug. 1896

Hodd fortnightly meetings at the Imperial College of Science and Technology, South Kensington, S.W.­ Membership, 1710, 470.

PHYSICIANS. ROYAL COLLEGE of,

of London (of England since 1853), was projected by Dr. Linnæus, physician to Henry VIII., who, through his interest with cardinal Wolsey, obtained letters patent, constituting a corporate body of regular physicians in London, with two charter colleges, 23 Sept. 1578. Linnæus was elected the first president of the college. Dr. W. Harvey was a great benefactor to this institution, 1653. He built a library and public hall, which he granted for ever to the college, with his books and instruments.

The college was afterwards held in a building in Wardour-place, erected by sir C. Wren, where it continued till 1825, when the present elegant stone edifice in Trafalgar-square was erected from designs by sir R. Smirke. The college is composed of fellows and members, formerly called licenates and extrallicenates. The queen's bench division decided that the college was entitled by the medical and surgical grant diplomas with the privilege of surgery, 8 March, 1893. The prince of Wales elected a fellow of the college, July, 1897,—The College of Physicians, Dublin, was founded by charter of Charles II. 1667, and was re-inorporated in 1802. The Royal College of Physicians,

Edinburgh, 29 Nov. 1881.

PHYSIC GARDENS.
The first cultivated in England was by John Gerard, surgeon of London, in 1597; that at Oxford was endowed by the earl of Hanby, in 1632; that at Cambridge was commenced about the middle of the last century; and that at Chelsea, originated by sir Hans Sloane, was given to the Apothecaries' company in 1721.

This last was very much admired by Linnaeus.
The trustees of the London orphan charities agree to dedicate 800l. per annum, in the maintenance, March, 1829, to erect a new library and plantation opened by lord Coxe on 25 July, 1762.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION. British College of, started in 1833; a meeting of the council was held at the earl of Minto's house, 20 Oct. 1843.

Annual meetings. Royal Commission on Physical Education appointed, 1835.

One of the most tangible results of that Commission was the formation of the National League for Physical Education and Improvements, which was incorporated in 1835, and the moral influence of school children was in a great extent traceable to the labours of that Commission, although the question was also fully debated in the Report of the Royal Commission on Physical Education. The National League was created in the Report of the Interdepartmental Committee on Medical Inspection and Education, 1837.

PHYSICAL SOCIETY, established 14 Feb.
1874; Dr. J. H. Gladstone, first president.
NATIONAL PHYSICAL RECREATION SOCIETY founded, 1855; in full activity, National Physical Laboratory established, 1887; a commission appointed respecting its establishment, lord Rayleigh chairman.
3 Aug. 1897; favourable report issued, 4 Oct. 1889; government grant 14,000l. for erection and 4500l.
per annum for maintenance. Bushy-house, Teddington, granted by queen Victoria to the Royal society for the laboratory, Dec. 1897 opened by the prince and princess of Wales, 19 March, 1897.
PIANO FORTE.* The invention is attributed to Cristofollo (or Cristofori), an Italian, J. C. Schröter, a German, and Marius, a Frenchman, early in the 18th century. The strings are struck by small hammers, and not by quills, as in harpsichords. Schröter is said to have presented a model of the invention to the court of Saxony, in 1717; and G. Silberman manufactured pianofortes with considerable success in 1772. Pianofortes were made in London by M. Zumpe, a German, 1760, and have since been greatly improved by Clementi, Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman, Erard, Pleyel, and others.

Upright pianos, first made in this country, were suggested by Isaac Hawkins in 1759, and Thomas Loud, in 1802. Mr. Southwell patented " cabinet pianos" in 1787; superseded, from about 1843, by the concert, piccolo, and other pianos.

A key instrument at Modena was named " piano forte," 1596. A "tone piano forte," formed of a series of flints and other stones of various sizes, collected in France and arranged by M. Haudre, was played on by him at the Royal Institution, on 16 March, 1856. The transposing piano, invented by Mr. Henry Schallheim, was exhibited at the Savoy hotel, Westminster, 20 June, 1866. The Janko pianoforte, with a new arrangement of keyboard, exhibited in the Portman rooms, London, 24 Nov. 1891, said to possess many advantages. See Grove's "Dictionary of Music," article "Pianoforte." A "double piano," a new harpsichord and harp, played on at Messrs. Pleyel's rooms, London, 12 April, 1857.

Among mechanical contrivances for pianoforte playing, or "dumb pianists," are the Pianoola, and the Mitter Piano-player, 1893.

PICARDY (N. France), was conquered by the English in 1340, and by the duke of Burgundy in 1470, to whom it was ceded by the treaty of Arras, 21 Sept., 1453, and annexed to France by Louis XI., 1463.

PICCADILLY, a fine street, W. London; the name, of uncertain origin, was Pickadilla and Pigadulla, about 1660, when a house of entertainment existed near the Haymarket, termed Pickadilly Hall, after which buildings were gradually extended westwards.

PICCOLO PIANO, a small pianoforte introduced by Robert Wormann in 1829.

PICENTINES, a Sabine tribe, subdued by the Romans, and their capital, Asculum, taken, 268 B.C. They began the Social war in 90, and were conquered in 89 B.C.

PICHEGRIUS'S CONSPIRACY, see Georges.

PICKETING, see Trials, Aug. 1807, and 1807.

R. Read and four other cabinet-makers imprisoned for picketing, May, 1875. Watching dwellings, &c., declared illegal, 29 Dec. 1850.

PIQUEUT, a game with cards, invented, it is said, by Joquelin, for the amusements of Charles VI. of France, then in feeble health, 1390. Mézévry.

"The nucleus of the instrument was a little box over which were stretched strings: such was the clave, the dulcimer, and the psaltery. The clavichord had keys; the virginal (about 1500) had dampers: successive improvements were the virginals (on which Queen Elizabeth played), the spinet (about 1580), and the harpsichord (with two rows of keys), said to have been used in the 17th century, which Bach and Handel improved on in the 18th century. A collection of harpsichords (one dated 1555) is in the South Kensington museum. A double pianoforte (with two keyboards reversed), giving remarkable effects (patented by M. M. Mengozzi), played on at Covent-garden theatre, 21 Oct. 1852.

PICTS (possibly from Petti, painted), the name given to the earliest known inhabitants of the east of Scotland, by the Romans, who made expeditions into the country, 290 et seq.; see Roman Wall.

PICTURES, see Painting.

PIEDMONT (Piedmonte, Latin, foot of the mountains), a region in N. Italy, formerly the seat of government of the kingdom of Sardinia, which see, and Savoy. Population, 1890, 3,234,560; 1900 (est.), 3,557,936.

PIE-POUDRE COURT, the Court of Dusty Foot, whose jurisdiction was established for cases arising at fairs and markets, to do justice to the buyer and seller immediately upon the spot. By Sir 17 Edw. IV., it had cognizance of all disputes in the precincts of the market to which it might belong, 1477.

PIETISTS, a Lutheran sect, instituted in Leipzig, by Philip James Spencer, a professor of theology, about 1659, with the view of reforming the popular religion. He established "colleges of pietists," with preachers resembling those of the society of Friends and the Methodists in Britain, about 1760. A body resembling the Pietists, named Chasidim, arose among the Jews in the Ukraine, and spread through Poland and European Turkey.

PIEZOMETER (Greek piezo, I compress), an apparatus for measuring the compressibility of liquids, invented by Ersted (died 1851); improved by Despretz & Saizy.

PIGEONS were employed as carriers by the ancients, Hittus and Bratus corresponded by means of pigeons at the siege of Modena. The pigeons of Alico served as couriers at Alexandretta and Bagdæ. Thirty-two pigeons liberated from London at 7 o'clock in the morning, 22 Nov. 1870; at noon one of them arrived at Antwerp, a quarter of an hour afterwards a second arrived; the remainder on the following day. Phillips. At a pigeon race, 25 July, 1872, from Spalding to London, the speed allowed was 90 seconds a mile; see Post Office, 1870.

In a pigeon race from Dover to Plymouth, some pigeons attained the velocity of 1,233 yards, 2,138 yards and 1,002 yards in 1 minute 24 seconds and 22 seconds, 1875. About 500 pigeon-flying societies exist in France; the organization of carrier-pigeon stations ordered by the minister for war, Jan. 1833. About 500 similar societies exist in Germany, stated Jan. 1835. National Peristonomic Society (originating from the Columbian Society, founded in 1749), has annual shows. A bill for prohibiting shooting pigeons rising from a trap attended with clatteries, passed by the common with large majorities, in 1835 and 1834 (105—46), was rejected by the lords in 1843 (50—17), and on 9 May, 1854 (72—40).

The first time that pigeons were used in modern warfare was at the siege of Paris in 1770, when a pigeon post was established at Tours, for the purpose of carrying dispatches to Paris. A notice was given by the London Post Office for transmission by carrier pigeons was posted at the head offices of the General Post Office in the United Kingdom and the terms were 5d. per word. For a considerable time this was the only means of transmitting information into Paris during the siege.

More recently, when Lübeck was besieged, dispatches were carried over the heads of the forces by pigeons. There are about 2,000 pigeon clubs in the United Kingdom, 1910. The largest race that has been flown by one organisation is in 1896 from Xantus to Lausanne, organized by the Lausanne-Neuchâtel Pigeon Club, in which annually 8,000 pigeons compete, the distance being 40 miles. Over a million pigeons for racing purposes are bred and trained with results each year.

The Ministry of George the Fifth offers a national cup to be flown for each year.

PINE-TREES.

Memorial congregational church in memory of the "Pilgrim Father," John Robinson, founded at Gainsborough, 26 June, 1878.

The MS. log of the Medwayer presented to the President and citizens of the United States by the bishop of London, in compliance with the petition of Mr. T. F. Hayard, U.S. ambassador, 25 March, 1874; given up by him to governor Welcott, of Massachusetts, 26 May, 1875.

"PILGRIM'S PROGRESS," written by John Bunyan, in Bedford gaol, where he was imprisoned twelve years, 1660-72. The first part was published in 1678. A first edition (1678) realised £157/9, 9 May, 1891.

PILLORY, a scaffold for persons to stand on, to render them publicly infamous. This punishment was awarded against persons convicted of forgery, perjury, libelling, &c. In some cases the head was put through a hole, the hands through two others, the nose slit, the face branded with one or more letters, and one or both ears were cut off. There is a statue of the pillory, 41 Hen. III. 1256. Many persons were executed by being struck with stones by the mob, and pelted with rotten eggs and patrid offal. It was abolished as a punishment except for perjury, 1815, and totally abolished in 1837. The last who suffered at the Old Bailey was Peter Jas. Bossy, for perjury, 22 June, 1830.

PILNITZ (near Dresden, Saxony). The convention of Pilnitz took place between the emperor Leopold and the king of Prussia, 20 July, 1701. On 27 Aug., the treaty of Pilnitz, or, as some style it, the Partition treaty, was finally agreed upon at Parnia by the courts in concert. It was to the effect that the emperor should retake all that Louis XIV. had conquered in the Austrian Netherlands, and uniting these provinces to the Netherlands, give them to his serene highness the elector palatine, to be added to the palatinate; Bavaria to be added to the Austrian possessions," &c.

PILOT. The act relating to pilots, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 129 (1853), with other acts, is embodied in the Merchant Shipping act; see Trinity-House.

PIMLICO, S.W. suburb of London, belonging to the Groover (Duke of Westminster) family, who have built largely upon it since 1830.

On 20 Dec., 1875, Georgina Moore, 71 years old, living with her parents in Winchester-street, disappeared; her body was found by labourers in the Mendlesham and Yadding, 20 Jan. 1882. Esther Fay, with whom she was last seen, accused of her murder, was acquitted, 27 April, 1872.

Pindar poisoning case. See Trials, April, 1832.

PINCHEAD, an alloy of 25 per cent. of zinc and 75 per cent. used for wash-plates, &c.; named after either Christopher or Thomas Pinchbeck, London mechanics; the former is said to have died in 1732, the latter in 1783.

PINDAREES, bands of freebooters, or mercenary soldiers in the central provinces of India, headquarters Malwa, who, after the fall of the Mughul empire, ravaged the native territories and the British settlements, 1804 et seq., till finally crushed by two armies commanded by the marquis of Hastings in 1817.

PINE-TREES. The stone pine (Pinus Pinea), brought to these countries before 1548. The cluster pine (Pinus Pinaster), brought from the south of Europe before 1576. The southern nigra (Pinus Strabos), from North America, 1705. Frankincense pine (Pinus Tida), from North America, before 1713. There are other varieties.
PIEKIE (near Edinburgh), where the English under the Earl of Hertford, protector, totally defeated the Scots under the regent Arran, 10 Sept. 1547. There fell not 200 of the English, but above 16,000 of the Scots. Above 1500 were taken prisoners.

PINS have been found in British bars (Esbrooke); and are mentioned in a statute of 1583. Brass pins were brought from France in 1540, and first used in England, it is said, by Catherine Howard, queen of Henry VIII. Pins were made in England in 1543. Slow. They were first manufactured by machinery in England in 1824, under a patent of Lemuel Wellman Wright, of the United States.

PIOMBINO, a principality, Italy, previously ruled by the Appiani family, was acquired by the Spaniards, 1569. It was ceded to France, 1801, and given by Napoleon to his sister Elisa, wife of prince Bacciochi, who held it from 1805 to 1815, when it was restored to the Buoncampagni family, subject to Tuscany. It became part of the kingdom of Italy, 1860.

PIPE ROLL SOCIETY, founded in 1884 for printing all extant public records prior to the year A.D. 1200.

PIRACY, Greek pirati, was severely suppressed by the Romans. Pompey destroyed the Cilician pirates, 67 B.C. See Bucaniers. Many acts of parliament were passed for the suppression of piracy; the latest in 1837.

PIRÆUS, the port of Athens, was united to the city by two long walls, one erected by Themistocles, and the other by Pericles, 456 B.C., which were destroyed by Lysander, 404 B.C. It was fortified by Conon, 395 B.C. The Piræus was able to contain 400 Greek vessels. It was occupied by the French during the Russian war in 1854.

PIRMASENS (Bavaria). Here Moreau and the French were defeated by the duke of Brunswick and the Prussians, 14 Sept. 1793.

PISA, an ancient city in Tuscany, was founded about six centuries before Christ, and was favoured by the emperor under a flourishing republic. The citizens took an active part in the Italian wars of the middle ages, but became subject to Florence, after a long siege, 1405-6. In 1494 Pisa became independent under the protection of Charles VIII. of France, but was retaken by the Florentines in 1509. The university was founded in 1343, and revived by the Medici in 1472 and 1512. The rival popes, Benedict XIII. and Gregory XII., were deposed at a council held at Pisa in 1409, and Alexander V. elected in their room. The Campanile or leaning tower was built about 1174, and the Campo Santo about the same time. Fire panic in the cathedral, 9 persons crushed to death, 21 injured, 29 May, 1897. Attempt to burn Pisa Cathedral made by a mob as a demonstration against the execution of senor Ferrer in Spain; the door was set on fire, 17 Oct. 1908.

* The Campanile was erected to contain bells, and stands in a square close to the cathedral. It is built entirely of white marble, and is a cylinder of eight stories, each adorned with a round of columns, rising one above another. It inclines so far on one side from the perpendicular that, in dropping a plummet from the top, which is 385 feet in height, it falls sixteen feet from the base. Some thought this was done purposely by the architect; others attributed it to an accidental subsidence of the foundation. From this tower Galileo made his observation on gravitation (about 1635).

PISCICULTURE, see Fisheries.

PISTOLS, the smallest fire-arms, said to have been invented at Pistoja in Italy; were first used by the cavalry of England about 1544. Subsequently they were made with a revolving cylinde r breach, in which are formed several chambers for receiving cartridges, and bringing them in succession into a line with the barrel ready for firing. The earliest model of this kind of arm is said to be in the museum of the United Service Institution, and is supposed to date from the reign of Charles I. An eight-chambered matchlock revolving of the 16th century is placed in the Royal Artillery Museum, Woolwich. The manufacture of pistols by machinery was first introduced into England from the United States, America, in the year 1837, by Mel. Colt, who invented the Colt revolving pistol, 1851. This system of manufacture induced the British government to establish the Enfield armory, in 1855; see Fire-Arms.

PIT BROW WOMEN, see Cont., 23 June, 1887.

PITCAIRN'S ISLAND, in the Pacific Ocean, said to have been discovered by Pitcairn in 1768, seen by Cook in 1773, and since colonised by ten mutineers from the ship Bounty, captain Bligh, in 1786; see Bounty.

The mutineers remained unknown to England until discovered accidentally in 1814. A ship nearing the island was hailed by a swarthy youth in the English language, when it appeared that the mutineers, soon after settling there, had married some black women from a neighbouring island, and had become a well-conducted community under the care of Adams, the principal Englishman, who arrived a few years before, became chief. In Aug. 1852 admiral Moresby spent a few days on the island. By his means Nobbs was sent to England and obtained a pardon. His death (aged 86) announced Jan. 1885. As their numbers increased, the island proved incapable of their support. The English government removed them, with all their property, in the ship Morayshire, on 3 May, 1856, and landed them, after a boisterous passage, on Norfolk Island, prepared previously for their reception, 8 June. The government stocked Norfolk Island with 2000 sheep, 2500 horses, and twenty cows, and gave them stores to last twelve months; their numbers were 36 males and 142 females.

Pitcairn's island visited by H.M.S. Polden was found to be prosperous, Dec. 1875. Population, 15 Aug. 1879, 93; in 1895, 127; in 1901, 141.

Harry Christian sentenced to death for murdering a woman and her children (June, 1897, reported, 2 Nov. 1897; the Solom. a.s. visited the island, 30 Aug. 1902.

PITT ADMINISTRATIONS. The first administration was formed on the dismissal of the Portland ministry 18 Dec. 1753, and terminated by resignation in 1761. The second was formed 2 May, 1783, and terminated (after various changes) by Mr. Pitt's death, 23 Jan. 1806. A public funeral was decreed to him, and 40,000l. to pay his debts.

ADMISSION OF 1783. William Pitt, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl Gower, lord president.

Duke of Northumberland, privy council.

Marquis of Carmarthen and earl Temple (immediately succeeded by lord Sydney, secrearies.

Lord Thurlow, lord chancellor.

* William Pitt, second son of the great earl of Chatham, was born 25 March, 1752; became M.P. 23 Jan. 1782; moved for a reform in parliament, 7 May, 1782; became chancellor of the exchequer, July, 1782; prime minister Dec. 23, 1783 died 23 Jan. 1806.

PLANE. A true plane, most successfully obtained by sir Joseph Whitworth. Fine specimens exhibited at the Royal Institution in 1873.
PLANETARIUM, see Orrery.
PLANETS. Jupiter was known as a planet to the Chinese and the Chaldeans, and inserted in a chart of the heavens, made about 600 B.C., and in which 1400 stars are accurately described; this chart is said to be in the national library at Paris. See Jupiter, Mars, Saturn. We now know eight primary planets, termed major: Mercury, Venus, the Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune. Another minor planet, situated between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. The numerical order differs in the lists of English, German, and French astronomers. In the French and German lists, Aplina to Pandra are numbered 47 to 55; Merel is 30. Uranus, formerly called Georgium Sidus and Herschel discovered by W. Herschel (see Geor-} henceforth delivered from the fear of Persian invasions. Platae, as an ally of Athens, was destroyed by the Thebans, 372, and rebuilt by Philip II. after his victory at Chaeronea, 338.

PLATONIC YEAR.

PLATE. In England, plate, with the exception of spoons, was prohibited in public-houses by statute 8 Wm. III. 1111. (1693), but the celebrated Plate Act passed in May, 1736. This act was repealed in 1750. The act laying a stamp-duty upon plate passed in 1784; see Goldsmith's Company. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 96 (1854), gold wares were allowed to be manufactured at a lower standard; but a later act excepted marriage rings.—The art of covering hollow metal objects with a plate of silver, either for use or for ornament (plating), said to have been invented by a Birmingham spun-maker, who began with making the branches of a pair of spurs hollow, and filling the hollow with a slender rod of steel. He continued to make the hollow larger and the iron thicker, till at last he merely coated the iron spur with silver, see Electrotype.

Duly ornamented plate to be reduced gradually till abolished, from 1 June, 1827; abolished 17 April, 1860. Elizabethan salt-cellar realised 3000/, at Christie's in Dec. 1892.

Louis Henry collection (silver plate) realised 18,425/, at Christie's ; 26 May, 1892.

James I. rose-water ewer and dish, entirely gilt, realised 4200/, at Christie's; 4 May, 1852.

PLATEWAYS, on ordinary roads for wagons carrying goods, proposed at Liverpool about 1880, to supersede railways for cheapness; not adopted.

PLATFORM, see Public Meetings.

PLATINUM, the heaviest of all the metals, except iridium. The name originated with the Spaniards on account of its silvery colour, signifying silver. It was found in the nurseries sand of the river Pinto, in South America, and was unknown in Europe until 1741, when don Antonio Ulioa announced its existence in the narrative of his voyage to Peru.Greg. In its ore have been found the metals palladium, rhodium, osmium, iridium, and ruthenium (nearly pure), indubitable and ductile by Dr. Wm. Hyde Wollaston, whose processes are described in the Royal Society's Bakerian lecture for 1829. He died in 1828, having, it is said, gained 30,000/, by his inventions. In 1859 M. H. St Clair Deville made known a new method of obtaining platinum from its ore, in great abundance and purity; and at the international exhibition of 1851 a mass worth 380/, weighing 206 lb., of a metal hitherto considered infusible, obtained by his process, employing the oxy-hydrogen flame. See Philosophical Lamp.

Photograph, reproduction of platinum objects, by a peculiar process by Mr. F. Holiday, specimens exhibited at the Dudley Gallery, Oct. 1892.

PLATONIC PHILOSOPHY, the most popular of all systems (see Philosophy). Plato's dialogues have been termed "Philosophy backed by example." He was a disciple of Socrates, 409 B.C., and died 347. The leading feature of his mind was comprehensiveness. The Cambridge Platonists included Whiston, Cudworth, John Smith, Henry More.

Professor Jowett's popular translation of "Plato's Dialogues" published in 1874; 3rd edition, 1897.

PLATONIC YEAR, the period of time which the equinoxes take to finish their revolution, at the end of which the stars and constellations have the same place with regard to the equinoxes that they had at first. Tycho Brahe says that this year or period requires 25,816 common years to complete it; Ricciolius computes it at 25,920; and Cassini at 25,870, at the end of which time some imagined that there would be a total and natural renovation of the whole creation.

PLATTSBURG. A British expedition against this place, a town of New York, on Lake Champlain, was designed under general sir George Prevost, but was abandoned after the naval force of England had suffered a defeat in an engagement with the Americans, 11 Sept. 1814, when the British squadron in Lake Champlain was captured; see United States.

PLAY-grounds. In 1858 a society was established by the earl of Shaftesbury and other benevolent persons to provide play-grounds for the recreation of adults and the children of the humble classes. Ground was liberally offered by the government, and by the marquis of Westminster and others; and in 1859 an act of parliament was passed to facilitate grants of lands for this purpose, for which part of Smithfield was to be reserved. The scheme was not successful. The Metropolitan Public Garden, Boulevard, and Play-ground association formed by lord Brabazon (after earl of Meath) and others in 1852 has done good service in the east of London. The London Playing-fields association founded 1850. Hackney marsh (337 acres), purchased by the London county council and others as a playground for east London, opened by sir John Hutton, 21 July, 1894.

PLAYHOUSE. The. The Avenue theatre, rebuilt and renamed, and opened with The Drums of Oude, 18 Jan. 1907.

PLEADINGS. In the early courts of judicature in England, pleadings were made in the Saxon language; and in Norman-French from the period of the conquest in 1066 until 1362. Pleadings were ordered to be in English by 36 Edward III. 1357, and the pluralis tenet was substituted for the singularis in all legal proceedings 1650. In English law the pleadings are the mutual written statements of the plaintiff's cause of action and the defendant's ground of defence.

PLEBEIANS, Plebes, or Plebs, the commons of Rome, as distinguished from the Patricians; see Rome, 494-366 B.C.

PLEBISCITUM, a term given to a law passed by the comitia tributa, an assembly of the Roman people in their tribes, first established in 341 B.C. The term has been revived in France and Italy, and applied to Universal Suffrage (which see).

PLETHYSMOGRAPH, an apparatus for detecting the state of the mind by observing the relations of the circulation of the blood from the heart to the brain, invented by M. Massol, of Turin, 1882.

PLEVNA, Bulgaria, 27 miles N.W. of Nicopolis; near the river Vid; the site of very fierce conflicts during the Russo-Turkish war, 1877. Occupied by the Russians, 6 July, but retaken by Osman Pacha, 15 July, and held by him after severe contests, with Schilder-Schulthess, 23-28 July; with Krudenz, 23-31 July, 1877. The Russians lost about 2,000 killed, 4,000 wounded. The Russian attack was considered rash, like that at Balacava, and a disastrous check. Osman Pacha defeated in a sortie, about 30 Aug.

Gen. Soobelloff gained a great advantage by capturing Lovatch (or Loatcha). 3 Sept. 1877. Siege began, 7 Sept., with an artillery duel lasting to Russian attacks repulsed: 12, 15 Nov. Johann Pacha, reinforced by want of supplies, were repulsed unconditionally (39,000 prisoners, 128 officers, 100 guns).

PLOTS, see Conspiracies and Rebellions.

PLOUGH. "Thou shalt not plough with an ox and an ass together." Deut. xxii. 10 (1451 B.C.). The Roman plough is minutely described by Virgil, about 31 B.C. Engines to plough grounds, whether inland or upland, were patented by David Ramsay and Thomas Wildgoose, in 1618; and many improvements in ploughs have been patented since. The application of steam power to ploughing was patented by John Upton in 1837, and by others since, more especially by lord Wilmotthy D'Eresby, the marquis of Tweeddale, and the earl of Carlisle, see Steam Plough. Petrol motor-ploughs are now in use.

PLOUGH MONDAY. In January, the first Monday after the Epiphany. It received the appellation from its having been fixed upon by our forefathers as the day upon which they returned to the duties of agriculture after enjoying the festivities of Christmas. Ash. On Plough Monday, too, the ploughmen of the north country used to draw a plough from door to door and beg plough money to drink. Br. On Plough Monday, the lord mayor of London holds, annually at Guildhall a grand court of warkhe, at which the election of the common council and other officers of St. Thomas' day, 21 Dec., is confirmed.

PLUM. We have two native plums; our finer kinds come from Italy and Flanders about 1522. The Diospyros Lutos, the date plum, was brought from Barbary, before 1560; the Pishamun plum, Diospyros virginiana, from America, before 1829. Formerly damsons, apricots, and peaches were grown in this name, as raisins do to this day.

PLUMBAGO, see Graphite.

PLUMBERS. The company is dated 1611. A bill for their registration introduced into the commons in 1894; withdrawn, 13 Aug. 1894; passed, 10 March, 1902.

PLURALITIES. Clergymen have been restrained from holding more than one benefice by several statutes; the first being 21 Henry VIII. 1529. In 1838 an act was passed prohibiting the holding of more than two benefices except they were in a distance less than ten miles; and the act on this subject was still further amended in 1880, 1883, and 1885, provisions being made for the amalgamation of neighbouring benefices. See Electors.

PLURAL NUMBER, see W.

PLUS (+) AND MINUS (-). Professor De Morgan attributes these signs to either Christopher Rudolph, who published a book on algebra about 1522, or Michael Stifelius, about 1544.

POET-LAUREATE. Selden could not trace the precise origin of this office. Warton, in his History of English Poetry, states that in the reign of Henry III. there was a Verificator Regis, to whom an annual stipend was first paid of cost. Chaucer, on his return from abroad, assumed the title of poet-laureate; and in the twelfth year of Richard II., 1395, he obtained a grant of an annual allowance of wine. In the reign of Edward IV., 1482, Sir Kay was laureate; Andrew Bernard was laureate, temp. Henry VII.; and John Skelton, temp. Henry VIII.

James I. in 1615 granted to his laureate a yearly pension of 100 marks; and in 1620, this stipend was augmented by letters patent of Charles I. to one per annum, with an additional grant of one tierce of Canary Spanish wine to be taken out of the king's store of wine yearly. We believe that on Southey's appointment the tierce of Canary wine was commuted for 27.

Laurence Frenden commenced a series of Birthday and New Year's Odes, which continued till the death of Pyle, in 1823.

On the death of Warton its abolition was recommended by Gibbon, whose elegant compliment to the occasion still more forcibly applied to Wordsworth's death, in 1850. "This is the best time for forming a high office, when the prince is a man of virtue, and the poet just departed was a man of genius."

POISONING. 1083

POISONING. A number of Roman ladies formed a conspiracy and poisoned their husbands. A female slave denounced 170 of them to Fabius Maximus, who ordered them to be publicly executed, and that was the first public knowledge they had of poisoning at Rome. Poisoning was made petty treason in England, and was punished by boiling to death (of which there are some remarkable instances), 23 Henry VIII. 1531; see Bodley to death. The frequency of cases of poisoning by means of arsenic, in England, is mentioned by Harry Hodd, who tells us there was a law rendering the sale of arsenic difficult (14 Vict. c. 13, 6 June, 1851). The sale of poison is now regulated by the Pharnacey act of 1868. Additional restrictions by act passed in 1885. The Poisoned Grain Prohibition Act passed 28 July, 1863.

A deadly poison, freely administered by Italians in the seventeenth century, was called opere tofano, from the name of the woman Tofania, who made and sold it in small flat vials. She carried on this traffic for half a century, and eluded the police: but, on being taken, confessed that she had been a party in poisoning two people. Numerous persons were implicated by her, and many of them were publicly executed. All Italy was thrown into a ferment, and many fled, and some persons, who did not desert the strangled father, were sentenced to 11 years. It appeared to have been chiefly used by married women who were tired of their husbands. Four or six drops were a fatal dose; but the effect was slow, and generally, no symptoms were excited. It was as clear as water, but the chemists have not agreed about its real composition. A proclamation of the pope described it as aquafortis distilled into arsenic, and others considered it as a solution of crystallised arsenic. Between 1666 and 1676, the marquisess de Brinvilliers poisoned her father and two brothers and many others.

She was executed, 15 July, 1666.

With this, is confederated in 1666, and Miss M. Smith tried in 1837, for poisoning; see Trials. Catherine Wilson, a noted poisoner, was executed on 20 Oct. 1862. Edward William Pritchard, M.R., was executed at Glasgow, 28 July, 1865, for the slow murder of his wife and her mother by antimony.

Nov. 1853, 17 persons died at Bradford through eating sweetmeats in which arsenic had been mixed by mistake. Mr. Hodson, a chemist, was tried for homicidium and acquitted.

POLE STAR or POLAR STAR, a star of the second magnitude, the last in the tail of the constellation called the Little Bear. As its nearness to the North Pole causes it never to set to those in the northern hemisphere, it is called the seaman's guide. Two stars in the constellation Ursa Major, or Great Bear, are called pointers to the Polar star. The distance of the Polar star is ascribed by the Chinese to their emperor, Hong-ti, the-grandson (they say) of Noah, who reigned and flourished 16,700 B.C., Univ. Hist. Spectroscopic observations at Liverpool observatory prove the star to be a triple system, i.e., a binary, with a revolution of about 4 days, moving round a third more distant star, Sept. 1840.

POLITICAL OFFICES PENSIONS ACT passed 9 Aug. 1869.

POLITICAL UNIONS were formed in England in 1831 to carry the Reform Bill; the most important was that of Birmingham.

POLITICIANS. A politician is described as a man well versed in policy, or the well regulating and governing of a state or kingdom; a clever and cunning man. A man of artifice; one of deep contrivance. South. The term was first used in France about 1760. A new fiction appeared, known by the name of Politicians, headed by the duc d'Alcune and the Montmorencies, and strengthened by the accession of the Henegnots in 1574. The duc d'Alcune was arrested and the Montmorencies sent to the Bastille.

POLIO, a dance said to have been invented between 1820 and 1843 in Bohemia, and to have obtained its name in Prague in 1835. It was introduced into England about 1844.

POLIT. ACT passed in Ireland by the Junto of the Pale, putting a price upon the heads of certain Irish; the earl of Desmond being then deputy, 5 Edward IV. 1463. This act long endured, see Ireland, 1463.

POLLENTIA (Piedmont, N. Italy), the site of a great victory of Stilicho, the Imperial general, over Alaric the Goth, 29 March, 493.

POLIT. TAX or CAPITATION TAX, existed among the ancient Romans. It was first levied in England in 1380; and occasioned the rebellion of Wat Tyler (see Tyler), 1381. It was again levied in 1513. By the 18th Charles II. every subject was assessed by the head, viz., a duke 100l., a baronet 30l., an esquire 20l., and every single private person 12s., 1667. This grievous impost was abolished by William III. 1689.

POLLUTION OF RIVERS, see Rivers.

POLO, the game of ball termed hockey played on horseback, became popular in England in 1872, having been introduced from India. Games were played by lancers and life guards at Woolwich, 10 July, 1872. A polo club was formed, and international contests held. Polo is said to have been an old Russian game, mentioned 1442 under the name of Chiuzan, as brought from Persia. The Meadowbrook club (U.S.A), England in 1909 and won the international cup for America beating England in two t-t matches by 9 goals to 5, and by 8 goals to 2.
POLONIUM. Marie Curie succeeded in isolating one-tenth of a milligramme of polonium. This substance possesses far greater radio-active properties than radium but disappears at a comparatively rapid rate, losing 50 per cent. of its weight in 140 days. It decomposes chemically when air comes in contact with its surface, and by this means would be useless in a bomb. In water, it cracks the vessel in a very short time. 13 Feb. 1910.

POLOTSCK (Russia). The French under marshal Oudinot were there defeated by the Russians under general Bagration on 31 July, 1812. The next day, the Russians were defeated. Polotsk was captured by the Russians and retaken Oct. 1812.

POLOTWA, see Vilaotwa.

POLYGAMY, &c., was permitted among the early nations, and now by Mahometans, and until recently by Mormons (which see). In Media, it was a reproach to a man to have less than seven wives. Among the Romans, Marc Antony is mentioned as the first who took two wives. The practice was forbidden by Arcadius, 397. The emperor Charles V. punished polygamy with death. In England, by statute 1 James I. 1603, it was made felony, with benefit of clergy. It was formerly punished by transportation, but more by imprisonment. See Marriages. Admitted in the United States, 23 March, 1882—Polyanyky (where one woman has several husbands) is permitted in some eastern countries, the children having equal rights.

POLYGLOT, from two Greek words denoting 'many languages,' is chiefly applied to editions of the Bible in several languages.

Polyglot published a polyglot psalter, 1574. The compilation of a polyglot Bible, in six vols., folio, was printed at Amsterdam (complete), in Spain, 1660-74; the first edition published in 1672, at the expense of the celebrated Cardinal Ximenes, costing 250,000 ducats. A hundred copies of it were printed; three are existing. Count MacCarthy, of Tobolos, paid 483l. for one of these copies at the Pinelli sale.

1 The Psalms, printed at Antwerp, by Montanus, 8 folio, in 1555-56, at the expense of Philip H. of Spain.
3 Printed by Dr. Bryan Walton, in 6 vols., folio, 1643-7.
4 The Psalms in the library of the British and Irish Bible Society.
5 Edited by Dr. Samuel Lee, published by S. Bagster, 8 folio.
6 Hebrew bible: begun by Henry Cohn; completed by the rev. Eiad R. De Lozanne and others; 4to, 1774.

POLYNESIA, a name recently given to the lands in the great Pacific Ocean, see Hawaian, Otaheite, Sandwich Islands, Java Isles, &c. These islands have been classed as Micronesia, Melanesia, and Polynesia. The Polynesians, or Polynesia, a term laid by Captain Cook on a country in Pamotivul, New Zealand, was founded in 1862. The archipelago explored by Mr. Fred. W. Christian, 1870-78.

POLYOLION, a poetical description of the torrents, rivers, mountains, forests, &c., of Great Britain, with historical details, by Michael Drayton, published 1610; 22; a new edition, 3 vols., by the rev. Richard Hooper, was published 1876.

POLYPES, also named Hydre (many-footed animals), on account of their property of reproducing themselves when cut in pieces, every part soon becoming a perfect animal; first discovered by Lвененек, and described by him in the Philosophical Trans. 1703. The polypes are of the order Zoophytes, and are partly animal and vegetable.

POLYSCHEMIA, a man recently given to the lands in the great Pacific Ocean, see Hawaian, Otaheite, Sandwich Islands, Java Isles, &c. These islands have been classed as Micronesia, Melanesia, and Polynesia. The Polynesians, or Polynesia, a term laid by Captain Cook on a country in Pamotivul, New Zealand, was founded in 1862. POMERANIA, a Russian province, N. Germany, was held by the Poles, 930, and by Denmark, 1210; made an independent duchy, 1479; and divided between Sweden and Brandenburg, 1489. The lands were given up to Denmark in 1814, was given up to Prussia for Lauenburg, 1845; see Denmark; Wrecks, 1878.
POMPEI. 1089 POONAH.

POINTERACT (formerly Pomfret) (S.York). At the castle (built 1080), Richard II. was confined and murdered, 10 Feb. 1399. Some writers assert that Richard escaped and died in Scotland. In this castle also, the earl Rivers, lord Grey, sir Thomas Vaughan, and sir Richard Hault or Hause, were put to death by order of the duke of Gloucester, then protector of England (afterwards Richard III.), about 20 June, 1483. The castle, which had stood four sieges, was dismantled in 1649. The first parliamentary election by ballot took place here, 15 Aug. 1857, very quietly. It lost one of its two members in 1885. Population, 1901, 13,319; 1909 (est.), 14,737.

PONTIFFS (Latin Pontifices), the highest Roman sacerdotal order, established by Numa. The college first consisted of 4 patricians, with a chief (Pontifex Maximus); to these 4 plebeians were added, by the Oscan law, 390 B.C. Sylla increased the number to 15 (8 suppers, 7 triumvirs); (81), and Julius Cesar to 16. T. Corneius, a plebeian, obtained this office, 254 B.C.

PONTUS, in Asia Minor, seems to have been a portion of Cappadocia, and received its name from its vicinity to Poptes Zephyri (Pontus). Arthaban, the first chief, was made king of Pontus by Darius Hystaspes in the 4th century B.C. His successors were mere satraps of the kings of Persia.

POMPEII (S. Italy), an ancient city of Campania, was partly demolished by an earthquake in A.D. 63. It was afterwards rebuilt, but was overwhelmed by an eruption of Vesuvius, accompanied by an earthquake, on the night of 24 Aug. 79. The principal remains were in an amphitheatre where public spectacles were exhibited. The ashes buried the whole city and covered the surrounding country. After a lapse of fifteen centuries, a countryman, as he was turning up the ground, found a bronze figure; and this discovery led to further search, which brought numerous other objects to light, and at length the city was uncovered. The part first cleared was supposed to be the main street, 1750. The kings of Naples greatly aided in exploring Pompeii, and the Italian government resumed the work in 1803. Many discoveries since.

A commemorative meeting of antiquaries and philosophers met at Pompeii, 25 Sept. 1879.

POMPEY'S PILLAR stands about three-quarters of a mile from Alexandria, between the city and the lake Marcellus. The shaft is fluted, and the capital ornamented with palm-leaves; the whole, which is highly polished, composed of three-pieces, and of the Corinthian order. The column measures, according to some, 94 feet; to others, 141, and even 160 feet; but of its origin, name, use, and age, nothing is certain.

It is generally believed that the column has no reference to Pompey, to whom a mark of honour was, nevertheless, set up somewhere about this part. One supposes the edifice was dedicated to Vespasian, another to Severus; and Mr. Clarke, from a half-effaced inscription, little less than a guess, considered that Adrian is the person honoured; while many assert, from the same inscription, that it is dedicated ' to Diocletian Augustus, most adorble emperor, tutelary deity of Alexandria.'

PONDICHERRY (S.E. India), on the Coromandel coast, the chief of the French possessions in India. Area 115 square miles. Population

POOR KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR, OR ALMS KNIGHTS. Soon after his institution of the order of the Garter, Edward III. founded this charity, for the provision of 24 (afterwards 26) poor persons eminent for military services. Edward IV. discharged the college from the support of the alms-knights, but Elizabeth re-established it for 13 knights, 1559. King William IV. changed the name to the "Military Knights of Windsor," in consequence of their all having held commissions in the army, Sept. 1833. The "Naval Knights of Windsor" are maintained on a distinct foundation, under the bequest of Samuel Travers, 1721. The corporation was established in 1798. Dissolved in 1802.

POPE (from the Greek Poopen and Pope, a father or grandfather), considered by Romanists to be the visible chief of the church, the vicar of Jesus Christ, and the successor of St. Peter. He styles himself "servant of the servants of God." The title pope was formerly given to all bishops. It was first adopted by Hyginus, 139; and pope Boniface III. induced Phocas, emperor of the east, to confer it on the prefects of Rome, 606. By the conivance of Phocas also, the pope's supremacy over the Christian church was established; see Italy, Reformation, and Rome, Modern.
